BRITISH TROOPS LAND ON WALCHEREN ISLAND

RCN SERVICE IN PACIFIC ON RE-VOLUNTARY BASIS

Drive to Smash Nazis Barring Sea Lane to Antwerp

Canadians Establish Small Beachhead on Eastern End

London, Nov. 1 — (CP)—British Commandos under 1st Canadian Army Command stormed ashore today on the southern and western coast of Walcheren Island, and were making good progress tonight in a pincers drive to smash the last Germans barring the sea lane to Antwerp.

The sea-borne forces landed as Canadian forces burst across the shell-torn causeway onto the eastern edge of the island, establishing a small beachhead there despite heavy Nazi resistance.

A dispatch from Field Marshal Montgomery's headquarters said the Commandos were biting inland across the flooded island.

Berlin earlier said Allied amphibious forces had landed near Vlissingen (Flushing), Walcheren's biggest city, with strong aerial and naval protection.

The Berlin radio said tonight:—"German reconnaissance planes have observed a battleship of the King George class, four cruisers and numerous landing vessels, which indicates that other attempts on Walcheren are to follow."

In Outskirts of Town

The German D.N.B. agency asserted the first wave of forces landing in Flushing harbor were wiped out, but reinforcements fought to the outskirts of the town.

"The enemy used about 50 to 60 landing boats," the announcement said.

The German trans-ocean agency earlier said the landing was made by Canadian and British forces while the enemy communique attributed it to "Allied" forces.

The Canadians cut out a foothold several hundred yards deep on the eastern edge of the island, 8 miles northeast of Vlissingen, after crossing the 1,100-yard-long, 100-yard-wide causeway from conquered Beveland island under a hail of bullets and shells.

Resistance on the south shore of the Schelde estuary weakened perceptibly, supreme headquarters said, and Canadians in a three-mile advance fought into the coastal town of Knocke. Perhaps less than 2,000 Germans remained in this pocket, southwest of Vlissingen; 7,900 had already been captured.

The enemy communique said the landing in the Vlissingen area was supported by naval units and added there was "heavy fighting" for the town and harbor.

A Berlin trans-ocean agency broadcast said the landing was made after an artillery barrage directed from the south shore of the Schelde Estuary only recently cleared by Canadian forces of Germans.

There was no immediate Allied confirmation of the landing report.

Adjoining South Beveland Island, however, had been captured in the same kind of squeeze attack, with British forces landing on the southern coast while Canadians pushed across the land causeway.

Three-quarters of Walcheren had been flooded by Allied bomb-breaching of its dikes, with sea water sweeping over some of the German batteries controlling the estuary approach to Allied-held Antwerp.

Canadians Blocked by Crater

South of the Maas River, columns of the 1st Canadian and British 2nd Armies struggled through knee-deep mud in pursuit of Germans escaping over the river behind a screen of stubborn rear-guard actions.

Germans Escape Trap

All field dispatches indicated the Germans had generally succeeded in escaping an Allied trap.

Berlin declared Field Marshal Montgomery had never drawn on the mass of his forces around Nijmegen for the battle to clear Southwestern Holland, but was keeping them intact for an offensive aimed at reaching the north German plain.

The German radio also declared that on the front in France, a strong American attack supported by more than 100 tanks had captured Montigny, 15 miles east of Luneville. The German communique said French elements had entered Baccarat, 14 miles southeast of Luneville.

NAZIS EVACUATE SALONIKA SAYS NAZI COMMAND

Balkan Seaport Lies Less Than 50 Miles From Yugoslav Border

Rome, Nov. 1 —AP)— The German High Command announced today its forces had evacuated Salonika, principal Balkan seaport and second city of Greece.

Allied Headquarters disclosed earlier that British patrols had reached the city, which had a population of 240,000 before the war. A pall of smoke has hung over Salonika several days as the Germans carried out demolitions there.

The Germans said "Salonika was evacuated in the course of our disengagement movements in the Balkans, unimpeded by the enemy."

The communique was broadcast by the Berlin radio.

Salonika lies less than 50 miles from the borders of Yugoslavia and Bulgaria. Known also as Thessalonike, the Aegean port was used as a base by Allied troops in the last war. A pro-ally revolution which broke out there helped impel Greece into that war in 1917.

Pressure Maintained.

Pressure is being maintained by Allied forward patrols against enemy rear-guards north of Kozane, the Headquarters communique said that British troops and Greek guerillas pushing the Germans out of Greece were last reported within seven miles of the Yugoslav border in this sector.

Previous advices indicated the Germans had engaged in extensive demolitions in the vital port of Salonika, approximately 70 miles northeast of Kozane. An estimated 10,000 Nazis of a force of 25,000 were said to be left in Salonika.

Soviet pressure in Bulgaria and the increasing strength of Marshal Tito's Partisans in Yugoslavia have compelled the Germans fleeing Greece to head toward Scutari on the northwest corner of Albania.

It appeared doubtful that many of the Germans in Greece ever would reach their homeland.

AUSTRALIAN NAVAL TONNAGE INCREASED SIX TIMES

New York, Nov. 1 (CP)—Fighting tonnage of the Royal Australian navy has increased more than six times since the outbreak of the war, says a quarterly booklet, facts and figures of Australia's war effort, issued by the country's Department of Information. The Commonwealth now has more than 640 warships, 85 per cent in operational areas.

JAPANESE CLAIM OF LANDING UNCONFIRMED

San Francisco, Nov. 1 — (AP)—A Japanese Imperial communique today claimed Japanese assault troops landed on the north coast of Peleliu, United States-seized island in the Palau Group, at dawn Wednesday (Japanese time). The broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, was not confirmed by any Allied source.

SUPERFORTS BOMB TOKYO FOR FIRST TIME IN 2 YEARS

Tokyo Radio Says Planes Dispatched From Newly-Prepared Base in Marianas

San Francisco, Nov. 1 (AP)—Tokyo radio spluttered for hours today about a B-29 Superfortress raid on the Japanese capital, but the War Department in Washington said it had "no information about any aerial operations over Japan."

Tokyo has not been hit by American bombs in more than two years.

In a series of conflicting reports, Tokyo radio said a B-29 apparently from a newly developed base in the Marianas Islands appeared over the capital but left "without attempting attacks;" that several four-engined planes were over the city; that at least one plane raided a factory district throwing workers into confusion.

The reports all agreed that an enemy plane or planes were over the Tokyo area around 1 p.m. Wednesday (Tokyo time).

One broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, giving detailed instructions on Tokyo, said "an enemy plane suddenly raided part of the Kanto region," an important industrial area covering the entire area around the capital and embracing several prefectures.

At the time of the Marianas invasion there was much speculation that engineers would build a huge base on Saipan for Tokyo-raiding B-29s. There has never been any confirmation that such a base was developed.

A Tokyo announcer warned the Japanese people that "there is now an ever-stronger possibility of sudden raids," adding, "from now on, no matter what happens, one must devote strenuous efforts toward air defence."

Jury Convicts Man of Murder

New York, Nov. 1 — (AP) — A Bible clutched in his hands, 37-year-old Lewis Wolfe cried aloud in despair early today when a jury convicted him of the bludgeon murder of his refugee wife.

Over and over he cried, "I am dead, dead, dead," and pointing a finger at Judge Louis Goldstein he said, "may God have mercy on your soul."

The verdict was without recommendation for clemency, which carries a mandatory death penalty.

Wolfe's attractive 26-year-old wife, a former Viennese actress, was beaten to death with a metal-tipped shoe last Dec. 30 in a Brooklyn Hotel. Her husband, a native of Montreal, said "voices" told him to kill her because she broke a fidelity pact based on the old testament.

The couple met and were married in Palestine.

On the boat which brought her here, Wolfe said, she was guilty of several acts of unfaithfulness which she confessed to him with tha statement: "If you're a man you'll kill me."

SPEAKING TOUR "MOST TERRIFYING"

Seattle, Nov. 1 (AP)—Maj. F. Peter Ashton of the Royal Artillery, a commando officer in Algiers, an artillery officer in Tunisia, a gunnery officer on a warship at the bombardment of Sicily, a paratroop leader and a commander in the first wave to hit the beaches of Normandy, arrived on a speaking tour. Speaking of the speaking tour, the Briton groaned: "The most terrifying experience of the war."

Hotels Must Re-Apply to Board For Authority to Sell Beer, Wine

Toronto, Nov. 1 (CP)—Judge W. T. Robb, chairman of the new Liquor Authority Control Board, said today that every hotel in Ontario holding an authority to sell beer and wine must re-apply for the Authority to the Board.

There are about 1,200 hotels whose applications for renewal of licences will be heard by the Board at public hearings. Objections to renewals may be made at these hearings, Judge Robb said. The first public meeting will likely be held at Kirkland Lake next week.

The Board composed of Judge Robb, W. T. Nugent and J. Fred Reid, held its first meeting today.

Also present was W. B. Common, solicitor for the Liquor Commission.

TOTAL TO DATE OF VICTORY LOAN AT $575,813,500

Armed Forces Expected to Go Over Quota on Ninth Day

Ottawa, Nov. 1 —(CP)— Canadian Victory Loan buyers yesterday subscribed $74,343,750 — an amount slightly above what was subscribed for the same day in the last loan, it was disclosed today.

The cumulative total of the $1,300,000,000 loan now stands at $575,813,500, compared to $533,617,550 at the same stage of the last loan.

Yesterday's increase came from the large corporate buyers, with individual purchases down a little from the same day in the Sixth Loan. The total for individual buyers yesterday was $31,404,700 bringing the total individual purchases in the first eight days of selling to $263,151,550. In the same day of the Sixth Loan the purchase of individuals was $33,446,550.

Average Purchase of Civilians.

Average daily purchases of those who buy for cash, out of their pay envelopes and from savings, in the last loan, were about $35,700,000," an official of the National War Finance Committee said. "In this loan, so far, the average daily purchases are about $32,900,000. About 45 per cent of our canvassing time has elapsed and the individuals have purchased a little less than 41 per cent of what they bought in the last loan. Delayed reports, of course, will take up some of the slack, but it should be remembered by every Canadian, that their objective is $100,000,000 higher than it ever has been. It is not a total which can be achieved without real effort."

Canadian Pacific Railway employees numbering 54,084 had subscribed $6,526,550 of their required quota of $8,500,000.

Nova Scotia last night had reached 54.03 per cent of its provincial objective in individual sales.

Armed Forces Near Quota.

Reporting a total of $38,182,850, the armed forces said last night they expected to go over their $40,800,000 quota today. The army had $20,065,550 for 96 per cent of objective, the Navy $4,480,550 for 93.2 per cent and the R. C. A. F. $13,636,800 for 90.9 per cent.

The army total included $11,076,900 from 108,927 Western Hemisphere applications and $8,988,650 from 102,658 overseas applications.

U.S. AMBASSADOR TO CHINA RESIGNS POST IN CLEANUP

Supreme Effort Being Made to Reinvigorate Chinese Effort Under Chiang

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Nov. 1 —(AP)— President Roosevelt is making a clean sweep of top American personnel in China, including Ambassador Clarence E. Gauss, in a supreme effort to reinvigorate the Chinese war effort under leadership of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek.

Doubt that the move will succeed is already apparent in military quarters here where United States strategists speak with less and less confidence about China's future war role.

Diplomatists are still hopeful Chiang may be induced to shake up his government and army command and reconcile himself to the Communists in North China in order to strengthen his government.

Moves Made Thus Far.

Apparently to save what he can in line with American policy of building up China as a power now and a great post-war nation, President Roosevelt has made these moves thus far:

1. Recalled Gen. Stilwell from his triple China - Burma - India command at the request of Chiang and replaced him with Maj.-Gen. Wedemeyer.
2. Announced at yesterday's news conference the resignation of Ambassador Gauss. Close official associates of Mr. Gauss had said virtually up to the time of the announcement that they knew of no plans for him to come home.
3. Stated that Maj.-Gen. Hurley, his special roving envoy, was still in China. Hurley, by most responsible accounts, went to China to try to help step up the war effort and get Chiang reconciled to the Communists. The fact that he is still there suggests a belief in the continuing possibility of some success.

No Connection.

The President told reporters there was no connection between the recall of Stilwell and the resignation of Gauss. He said Stilwell's return was purely and simply a result of a clash of personalities between the General and Chiang Kai-Shek and had nothing to do with strategy or policies.

For himself, Mr. Roosevelt said, he thinks that Stilwell has done supremely well; he likes the General personally; he considers that

TWO U.S. FORCES BEING MASSED FOR CLIMACTIC BATTLE

Strategic Coastal Village Of Carigara Now Being Besieged by Large Force

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(AP War Correspondent)

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 1—(AP)—Two American forces closed on the strategic coastal village of Carigara today, massed for a climactic battle and braced for a possible Japanese counter-attack.

Having cleared the rest of Leyte Valley of organized enemy resistance, the Americans were within 8 miles of the village on the inland route from Jaro and only five miles away on the coastal road from Barugo. The Japanese must stop both legs of the American advance or lose their last strategic base northeast of Leyte's heavily-jungled hump.

If they fail to stop the attacks, which might reach the village today, they must drop back along a single escape route skirting the coast of Pinamopoan, only spot from which they might negotiate a winding trail over the mountains to the south.

This trail has been the route of Japanese reinforcements brought from Cebu via Ormoc Bay; and the forces in the north must reverse their travel on it or face annihilation. No good port lies west of Pinamopoan on the north coast.

Marine Artillerymen

A delayed dispatch from Leif Erickson, Associated Press war correspondent on Leyte, disclosed for the first time that United States Marine Artillerymen are participating in the reinvasion of the Philippines.

Throughout the American area, enemy aircraft continued harassing raids, losing 11 planes by last count.

MacArthur's communique outlining the day's developments, was supplemented by a headquarters spokesman who predicted either a fight-to-the-finish at Carigara or Ormoc, with the added possibility that new enemy troops might be used to cover evacuation of the remnants of the 16th Japanese division, organizers of Bataan's "March of Death" and original defenders of Leyte.

A prisoner told an American general the 16th had "been here so long we are soft."

Paper Says Disposition of Military Manpower Cause of Cabinet Crisis

Ottawa, Nov. 1 — (CP) — The Evening Journal said in a front-page story that a cabinet crisis over military manpower yesterday reached a "flood tide which threatened to end either in a decision to send Canada's home defence army to the battlefronts or resignation from the cabinet of some principal ministers."

The Journal said the ministers pressing for the sending of draftees overseas were Defence Minister Ralston and Navy Minister Macdonald, with their view being supported by Resources Minister Crerar, Revenue Minister Gibson, State Secretary McLarty and Trade Minister MacKinnon. Air Minister Power also was believed to be supporting the other defence ministers.

The newspaper said Mr. King's position was not known. If he decided the voluntary system could no longer supply an adequate flow of trained troops he might summon parliament and submit to it an order-in-council to dispatch draftees overseas.

The Journal added:

"If, on the other hand, Mr. King takes the ground that he still thinks the voluntary system is adequate, and refuses to act, the resignations of Defence Minister Ralston, Navy Minister Macdonald, and possibly of Messrs. Crerar, Gibson, McLarty and some others, will be almost certain."

"In that event, either one of two things would happen: Mr. King might resign and ask the Governor-General to call upon Mr. Ralston or Mr. Macdonald, or somebody else, to form a cabinet; or Mr. King might dissolve parliament and go to the country on his stand.

"In informed, responsible circles today the belief was that Mr. King would shrink from both of these drastic courses; that, in the end, he will decide to send the zombies overseas, even though reluctantly."

First-in First-Out Demobilization for Rest of Personnel

Certain Key Men Retained 'Regardless of Their Wishes'

Ottawa, Nov. 1 —CP)— The Canadian naval contingent that will go to the Pacific will be raised on a re-voluntary basis with a partial demobilization after the defeat of Germany being made on a "first-in, first-out" basis.

This was disclosed here today by Capt. H. McMaster, naval director of personnel, as he outlined the navy's plans.

1. Full naval effort until the defeat of Germany.
2. When it has been ascertained what categories and what numbers of personnel are required for the war against Japan, the contingent will be selected from men who re-volunteer.
3. These men will enjoy a leave of unspecified length in Canada before going to the Pacific.
4. Certain key men will be retained in the service "regardless of their wishes."
5. The remaining naval personnel will be released on a general "first-in, first out" demobilization plan.
6. There will apparently be no special campaign pay but a navy statement points out that those who serve in the Japanese campaign will through their additional length of service qualify for higher mustering-out benefits.

The R.C.A.F., which like the navy, is believed ready to use a third of its strength in the Pacific, has already announced the re-voluntary plan and the partial demobilization on a "first-in, first-out" basis.

The army, said to be contemplating using a division in the Pacific, has not yet announced its plans.

With the navy planning to give its Pacific fighters a leave in Canada before they take up the war against Japan, it seems possible they will enter the conflict across the North Pacific possibly to bases in the Philippines rather than return across the Atlantic and accompany British forces to Indian bases.

The statement said that during the transition period following the defeat of Germany it is expected "to release some personnel for civil employment."

At the moment the navy is endeavoring to formulate a plan for the interim release of personnel which will be fair to all and give recognition to those who volunteered early in the war as opposed to those who were slower in coming forward.

The statement said that as a general principle the "first-in-first-out" scheme will be applied.

Work Out Needs For War on Japan

Detailed personnel requirements for the war against Japan will be worked out. Announcement then will be made that personnel who request to do so will be considered for service in the Japanese campaign.

"It is hoped that sufficient numbers with the required qualifications will ask to stay in the service," said the statement.

It will be made clear, however, that the purpose of the announcement will be to ensure "that the keenest men are given an opportunity to serve."

"Where a man's services are required he may be retained regardless of his wishes."

The statement said that all persons who volunteered for the naval service did so "for the duration of hostilities which includes the war against Japan."

Gradual Return to Civil Life.

When it had been ascertained what category and what numbers of personnel were required "the balance of the present navy who wish to go and could be spared will be given a priority listing according to their length of active service. They then will gradually be returned to civil life."

Naval headquarters said it was stressing the advantages which would accrue to those who serve in the Japanese campaign. In the first place, as the length of service increased so would their war gratuities, bonuses and rehabilitation grants. Also those who are proceeding into the actual theatre of war in the Far East will be granted leave before they go.

Appointments will be made shortly to fill the vacancies caused by the retirements of these officers.

TWO ACCIDENTS OF SIMILAR NATURE

Two accidents of a similar nature occurred on Highway No. 14 south of Mountain View early Tuesday, both being investigated by Traffic Officer Chas. Siple.

A motor car driven by Robt. W. Peck, Demorestville, crashed into the ditch after the driver stated he was blinded by the glaring headlights of an oncoming motor vehicle. Ralph Collins, Belleville, a passenger in the vehicle, sustained lacerations of the face as the result of flying glass. Windows were broken, when the car collided headon with a cement culvert, police revealed.

Shortly afterwards in the same sector, another motor car driven by John Cavers, 242 Front St. in Belleville, also went out of control and crashed into another culvert immediately north of the scene of the first accident resulting in considerable property damage to the front of the vehicle. No serious personal injuries resulted from this crash, however.

KINGSTON YOUTHS SENT TO REFORMATORY

Two Kingston youths, 20-year-old Earl St. Pierre and 17-year-old Edward Cledgett, were sentenced to serve one year in the Ontario Reformatory after pleading guilty to a charge of car theft when arraigned before Magistrate Lloyd today.

Cledgett and St. Pierre are at present undergoing a six months' prison sentence imposed in a Kingston court after they had been convicted on a receiving charge. In the local court today the pair admitted stealing Miss Muriel Gibson's motor car from near her Ann St. home last September. This vehicle was later recovered in Kingston. The sentence given here is concurrent.

Charles A. Payne, K.C., appeared on behalf of St. Pierre and sought consideration owing to the fact that the accused is already serving a sentence. Crown Attorney Donnan pointed out that under a conviction of car theft the minimum sentence of one year was mandatory.

CITATION OF D.F.C. FOR FO. R. CAMPBELL

"This officer has completed numerous sorties and has invariably displayed a high degree of courage and devotion to duty," read the official citation describing the action for which Flying Officer Ralph Campbell of Foxboro, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell, was recently awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

"On one occasion in August, 1944, en route to the target, engine trouble developed. Nevertheless, he went on to reach the target. Whilst over the sea on the homeward flight the propeller of the defective engine flew off, it fouled a second engine, rendering it useless. The aircraft could no longer be flown, but FO. Campbell brought it down safely on the sea. He displayed resolution characteristic of that which he has shown throughout his tour of duty."

WILL B. DAVIS, C.S. LECTURES ON CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Member of Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, The First Church of Christ Scientist in Boston, Massachusetts, Speaks to Belleville Audience

"Christian Science: What It Is and How It Heals" was the title of a lecture by Will B. Davis, C.S. of Chicago, member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Mass., delivered at the Belleville Collegiate Institute on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Christian Science Society, Belleville, before a large number of people.

The lecturer was introduced by Mrs. H. M. Seymour of this city, and spoke in part as follows:

Jesus declared that his healing work was accomplished through his utilization of divine power He said, "I can of mine own self do nothing." And again he declared, "The Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works." Through an understanding of the ever-presence and availability of the one omnipotent God or Father, miracles were performed by the ancient prophets; but until Jesus taught and illustrated the law of healing, through his comprehension of God as Love, only a few seemed able to utilize this divine Principle successfully in dispelling the inharmonies of human affairs.

A careful perusal of the record in the New Testament of Jesus' healing work reveals the fact that he used no drugs, no manipulation, nor material hygiene, though he healed all manner of disease and raised the dead. His disciples, obedient to the teaching of Jesus, were successful in healing, and later many of the early Christians who had never seen the human Jesus, notably the Apostle Paul, did many mighty works in the name of the Master.

The scientific method employed by Jesus is recorded in the inspired writings of the Bible, a fact which becomes more and more evident after the way has been pointed out; but, this was not discovered until 1866. It was then that Mary Baker Eddy, after a lifetime of faithful Bible study and communion with God, discovered the divine laws of healing which Christ Jesus utilized. She named her discovery Christian Science, and, in the years which followed, spent in listening for divine revelation, she wrote down, and thereby made easily available to all, the scientific rules of Christian heading. Her book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" contains the complete statement of Christian Science.

Anyone who is an alert Bible scholar may learn through an attentive examination of our textbook that the rules of healing given by Mrs. Eddy were obtained through a close study of the Bible and particularly of the healing works of Jesus.

A Definition of Christian Science

If we are to be at one with God we must learn how to follow in the footsteps of the humble Nazarene. We must be obedient to Paul's admonition, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." How plainly the beloved apostle has declared here that God is not a person, but supreme intelligence, or Mind, and that our need is to recognize our close communion, or atone-ment, with the Mind which is God.

We can discern through Paul's inspired instruction why Mrs. Eddy teaches us to make a clear differentiation between Jesus the human man and the Christ of Truth which Jesus expressed. The Christ-consciousness may be entertained by you and me, and it is through allowing the Christ to enter human consciousness that healing is accomplished through Christian Science.

And now I am going to give you a very interesting and practical definition of Christian Science—not my own words, but a declaration made by its Discoverer and Founder. On page 160 of her book "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany," Mrs. Eddy writes: "To live so as to keep human consciousness in constant relation with the divine, the spiritual, and the eternal, is to individualize infinite power; and this is Christian Science."

Christian Science then is a method of living; it is that law of God which enables us so to live our human lives that we may express the Christ and thus demonstrate divine power in individual human experience. There is a requirement in the words I have quoted which cannot be overlooked. A way of living must be found that will enable us to "keep human consciousness in constant relation with the divine."

Someone may be thinking that is a very big assignment; and others may be saying to themselves that no one could keep thought in constant rapport or communion with the infinite intelligence. But it must be possible, even if we learn to do it only by degrees. We have received the same admonition in Paul's words, "Pray without ceasing."

Healing through Christian Science

In the discussion so far we have approached the answer to the second phase of our subject, namely: "How does Christian Science heal?" In other words, just what is the method employed by Christian Scientists in healing all manner of discord, lack, and disease? A complete answer to this question cannot be given in a short lecture. In replying to a very similar question, Mrs. Eddy declares (Science and Health, p. 493), "A full answer to the above question involves teaching, which enables the healer to demonstrate and prove for himself the Principle and rule of Christian Science or metaphysical healing." Thorough, consistent study of Science and Health and Mrs. Eddy's other writings not only teaches us how Christian Science heals, but it will enable any sincere student to heal himself and others.

The first requirement in the healing activity is to learn the true nature of God. We have agreed together that God is supreme intelligence or Mind, the only possible creative power or cause. In the Glossary of Science and Health (p. 587) we find this definition: "GOD. The great I AM; the all-knowing, all-seeing, all-acting, all-wise, all-loving, and eternal; Principle; Mind; Soul; Spirit; Life; Truth; Love all substance; intelligence." On page 465 of our textbook Mrs. Eddy tells us that the seven synonyms for God which she uses in the definition just quoted are "intended to express the nature, essence, and wholeness of Deity." Christian Scientists find inspiration, joy, and healing through learning more of God's wholeness or completeness, as they prayerfully consider these synonymous terms.

From a background of a constantly expanding appreciation of God's ever-present omnipotence and infinite love, we learn to heal through Christian Science. We learn to heal as we realize that the spiritual man of God's creating must be as perfect as his creator.

Prisoner of Japs for Eighteen Months Tells Story to Rotarians

Caught by the Japanese at Manila as he was attempting to return to Canada from Shanghai, Mr. Samuel Wolfe, representative of the George T. Fulford Company in the latter city, and now of Kingston, who was held a virtual prisoner for eighteen months by the Nipponese, unfolded a colorful story of his experiences to the Rotary Club here on Monday.

Mr. Wolfe represented his company in South Africa, Singapore and Shanghai. He is a past president of the Shanghai Rotary Club.

In simple language, Mr. Wolfe told the clubmen of the dark days, when Japanese hordes advanced through and captured the Philippines, and of the experiences of the captured "foreigners" during the months following.

"We sailed on the U. S. President Harrison from Shanghai to Manila where we were held until the ship was supposed to return. She went to North China seas and was captured by the Japs. There were 3,000 Americans and British and Canadians in our party. I stayed at the Manila Hotel, where General MacArthur and his staff lived. I saw him nearly every day.

Runs on Banks

"On Dec. 7th we got the news of Pearl Harbor. It was quite a shock but a greater shock was the news of the approach of the Japanese. Manila was panic-stricken. Filipinos rushed in from the mountains. There were runs on banks and food stores. The streets were filled with soldiers. Public buildings were guarded. Later more people and wounded began to arrive. Hospitals were filled. Many doctors and nurses left for the front for duty. That night we went down to one of the two air raid shelters in the city. We slept on crowded benches.

"The next day we saw a great fleet of silver planes flying over. We thought they were American, but a few seconds later bombs began to fall. Ships blew up in the harbor. Buildings were blown sky high. Military places were levelled. Forts were blasted and oil dumps were the scenes of huge rolling clouds of black smoke."

As this point Mr. Wolfe said he left the city and stayed with friends some seven miles out in the country. From here he got an excellent view of the demolition of the city and harbor by bombs. Here they packed sandbags with food and buried them.

Declared Open City

"On Dec. 26 Manila was declared an open city and all soldiers were taken away. I returned and went to a small hotel but the staff had left and some Filipino stewards took over and fed us. Later Filipino residents got out of hand and systematically looted the city. Later the Japs marched in. They came in perfect order and gave us no trouble. We were confined to a hotel and later were taken to the Santa Tomas University, which the Japs turned into a concentration camp. We had no food and few clothes. Looting Filipinos sold us food, but the Japs soon stopped this. Some of my Swedish friends persuaded the Japanese commander to free me on account of my age and I was let loose. Here I stayed with the Swedish Consul for over fifteen months."

The treatment of foreigners by the Japs was not bad, Mr. Wolfe said. "Three attempted to escape from Santa Tomas, but were captured, brought back, publicly beaten and later shot. I saw American soldier prisoners of war, who were forced to work in the nickle fields. They were ragged scarecrows, with rags for boots and sometimes hardly any clothes. They were burned almost black. Kindly Filipinos who attempted to speak to them as they marched were arrested by the Jap guards and strung up by their thumbs in public as a lesson to other Filipinos.

Forced to Wear Armbands

"In 1943 the Japs forced us to wear red armbands to ridicule us in the eyes of the Filipinos. This failed. Later we were forced to bow and kowtow to Filipino soldiers and sentries. If we failed we were given a hard slap across the face by a Japanese soldier. Within a few days we were ordered to keep off the main streets."

A few days later Mr. Wolfe was sent to another concentration camp at Sulfa Springs. Here is stayed 7 months under a German supervisor. On Sept. 23, 1943 he got word that he was to be repatriated, and left for Manila, where he again stayed four days at Santa Tomas. There were now 3,700 foreign internees there. They were given two meals a day of rice and corn mush. Games were allowed but no dancing as the latter was considered dangerous to the morale of the Jap guards.

"We were taken away with 150 others in Dec. 1943 and put on a boat, which had 1,560 passengers in accommodation for 600. We finally came to Singapore, where we embarked on the Gripsholm and from there to South Africa to Rio de Janeiro and home."

Mr. Wolfe was introduced to the club by Rotarian Jack Elder, radio entertainer from Kingston and thanked by Past District Governor J. O. Herity.

Rotarian Elder entertained the club with humorous Scotch songs and patter with Bert Houston at the piano. Eddy Foley, Toronto composer sang his latest song-hit, "When the Boys Come Marching Home."

President Pinkston was in the chair with Howard Clarke doing the "collecting."

UAW Loses Appeal In Belleville Case

Ottawa, Nov. 1 (CP).—Dismissal of an appeal by United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.) from a decision of the Ontario Regional Labor Board for wage adjustments for employees of Reliance Industries Limited, Belleville, was announced here Tuesday by the National War Labor Board.

The appeal requested a five-cent hourly increase in the maximum range for toolmakers, storesmen and male inspectors; a 70-cent rate for female inspectors and that all storesmen be paid the increased 75-cent maximum for the range for that classification. The company agreed to the five-cent increase in the maximum rate for storesmen, but they did not agree that all should receive the maximum rate.

In announcing its decision, the War Labor Board said the Regional Board had based its decision on "a comprehensive and carefully prepared comparative survey of rates both in the industry and in the area."

100 BUSHELS APPLES USED BY SCOUTS

Approximately 100 bushels of McIntosh apples costing around $220 were disposed of by Belleville Boy Scouts on Saturday during their tag day which netted $750, it was announced today. Net proceeds from the day were over $500 which will be used to purchase equipment and to reorganize the Scout movement in the Belleville district.

Scout officers extended their appreciation to the general public for their generous response on their tag day, to Mr. Leo Riggs who granted the use of his garage show room as headquarters for the day, to the Kinsmen Club for the use of their tag boxes and to the Kiwanis Scout Committee for their assistance.

BOND SALESMAN MAKES HIS SALE DESPITE 2 DOGS

Boy Has Notion That Sometimes Bond Salesman Has to Talk Prospective Buyer to Death

Selling of Victory Bonds to the general public is not always the smooth sailing which an unrestricted program of advertising might indicate, according to human interest stories being received from salesmen at the County Victory Loan headquarters in Belleville. True, like the R.C.M.P., they invariably "get their man", meaning they sell their bonds, but many and varied are experiences in doing so.

Take for instance the experience of a salesman in the northern district the other day.

It seems this particular salesman was canvassing a home in that district when in approaching the house he was suddenly attacked by two police dogs. One tore the knee out of his trousers and he saved himself from the other by a well-directed swing of his brief case, as the story goes.

Recounting the incident to Victory Loan organizers the salesman was slyly asked why he did not carry a gun. "Sure," came back the quick reply, "There'd be three killed then. I'd kill the dog and the lady of the house would kill me."

O yes, even in this particular instance the salesman came through and sold his Victory Bond.

Boy's Curiosity

And then there was the young lad in Deseronto who called in at the Victory Loan office for a lapel insignia only to be informed the privilege of wearing such a pin was that of a person who had bought a bond. His father had bought him a bond in previous loans so in view of the sincerity of the child he was given a pin.

But the boy was further interested. "How do you sell bonds?" he asked. So the salesman turned on his best sales talk and explained how the purchase of Victory Bonds was the best and safest investment with double bank interest.

"But suppose even that does not sell the bond?" the boy pressed. "Then, we just have to talk some more," replied the salesman.

"Gosh", replied the lad, "you'd just talk 'em to death, wouldn't you?"

The men's mission is continuing at seven-thirty o'clock this evening.

Tomorrow "All Souls' Day" is set aside to offer up prayers for those departed who are yet deprived of entering heaven until they have fully atoned for their failings and shortcomings in their life. Masses are being said on "All Souls' Day" at 5.45, 7, 8, and 9 o'clock. The last mass will be a solemn requiem High Mass.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Nov. 1 (CP)—An Anglo-Canadian bomber crew of the R.A.F. shared a harrowing trip to a Ruhr valley target from which their Halifax returned with only one engine functioning properly and at least 200 anti-aircraft hits on the bomber.

Five minutes from the target, the synthetic oil plant at Nordsterm, the Halifax piloted by FO. J. R. Currie of Redcar, Yorks., shuddered and began to lose height as a shell smashed the starboard outer engine. The crew continued to the target and Flt. Sgt. C. H. McBean, Winnipeg, got the bombs away but the dinghy was hit and started to burn and the Germans opened fire with everything they had.

The port inner engine was slightly wounded, shrapnel whipped off a leg from the seat of the navigator PO. W. Malanchuk, Edmonton, Currie was cut slightly on the neck, compasses and radio were rendered unserviceable and two petrol tanks were hit.

Spitfires escorted the crippled bomber home and just as the Halifax was crossing the British coast the propellor flew off the damaged starboard outer engine, damaging the blades of the starboard inner and leaving the port outer the only engine in full working order.

Currie clipped some trees as he came down to an emergency field for a difficult landing, but brought his Halifax in without further trouble.

When FO. Clayton Leigh, Orillia, Ont., got back to his Typhoon rocket-firing squadron in France after five days as a prisoner of the Germans he told his squadron mates, whose fire he experienced several times, "you're really hot."

"I sure felt sore," he said, "looking up at you fellows and knowing you would be back at the mess in 20 minutes."

"It's like old home week," said Group Captain Paul Davoud, D.S.O., D.F.C. of Kingston, Ont., when he moved his R.C.A.F. Typhoon wing to a new airfield. While commanding a Mosquito night intruder squadron before the invasion, Davoud and his men chased German fighters and bombers back to this 'drome, shooting down many of them...

Word comes from Italy that WO. Jack Hart, Point Anne, Ont., and Basil Haydon, Toronto, are still "marching along together." Their air force careers have been virtually parallel since they joined the R.C.A.F. in June, 1941. But they thought the fates were stretching things a bit when after Haydon "pranged" a Spitfire on landing one day. Hart came through the next day with a similar crash landing...

Folks back home who see the movies of the Lancaster attack on the German battleship Tirpitz might like to know that some of them were taken by Flt. Lieut. J. Loftus, Toronto, of the R.A.F. film unit.

It's five "kills" now for Sqdn. Ldr. Russell Bannock, D.F.C., Toronto flight commander with the R.C.A.F. City of Edmonton Mosquito squadron. Bannock, who also brought down 18 flying bombs during night patrol duty over the launching areas, destroyed his fifth German plane during a night sortie deep into German territory behind the Ruhr.

Australian Letter

By J. E. HOLDSWORTH
Canadian Press Correspondent

Sydney, Australia, Oct. 31 — (CP Cable) — In Sydney, Australia's largest city with 1,250,000 population, the main topic of conversation most days is the meat shortage, caused by spasmodic strikes of butchery employees and slaughtermen.

Australians are among the world's largest meat-eaters but for some time now no meat has been available and the shops have been closed. It has happened before, and when the shops do open there are queues outside such as we have seen in wartime only outside the liquor stores where, incidentally, the small stocks of wine are doled out at one bottle a head.

The trouble which led to "Did you manage to get the joint?" becoming the perennial question of the day began with the butchery employees asking for free Saturdays and then stopping work when the demand was not met.

Ordinarily, Saturday is the busiest day of the week with butchers working from 3 a. m. until 1 p. m.

The dispute, however, has just been settled and soon we shall be back to our normal supply of chops, steaks and joints.

After a hearing lasting several days, the Equity Court judges have reserved judgment in what is thought to be a unique art case. Some weeks ago the trustees of the National Gallery awarded a prize of £500 for the best portraiture of the year to a work by William Dobell of a fellow artist, Joshua Smith.

When photographs of the portrait were published there was an outcry from many quarters that the painting was not like any living being much less than being a resemblance of the subject. Now a group of artists has brought an action against the National Gallery trustees to restrain them from handing over the prize money on the grounds that the picture is not a portrait but a caricature.

The chief witness called by the claimants, a former director of the National Galleries of Melbourne and Sydney, said the portrait was "bad-mannered, cruel, distorted and degrading...the people who like Frank Sinatra would probably like this type of thing."

The present director of the Sydney Art Gallery countered with the challenge that it was a "most satisfying portrait...opponents of this view are out of date."

When is it time to call quits?

ON a soft, spring night in April, 1944, P/O J. L. Webb, Hamilton, Ontario, was set to fly his first sortie as captain of an aircraft destined to bomb Montzen. Crossing the enemy coast, the aircraft was hit by anti-aircraft fire, tearing several big holes in the fuselage. P/O Webb flew on to Belgium in his crippled craft, as scheduled.

In the bombing run over the target, it became apparent that the hydraulic system had been damaged. The bomb doors could not be opened. P/O Webb made another circuit of the target, while his engineer struggled to open the bomb bay doors by hand.

On the second run in, the aircraft was attacked by a fighter. This was beaten off, and the bombs were released on Montzen. Coming up from the target, three more fighters closed in on the damaged aircraft. Two fighters were successfully evaded, but while fighting the third, P/O Webb's aircraft was riddled by enemy bullets. One engine was destroyed. The port aileron and mainplane were damaged.

With controls severely damaged, P/O Webb flew back to Britain, landing with only two engines but bringing his aircraft and his crew to safety. Because of "superb skill and exceptional devotion to duty in the face of heavy odds", P/O Webb received the D.S.O.

When you think you may have bought all the Victory Bonds you can possibly afford, ask yourself if you may be "calling quits" too soon. How does your perseverence, say, stack up against the stick-to-it-iveness of any one of our fighting airmen, men like P/O Webb?

Our assignment on the home front is not over yet. We still must back our fighting forces until our mission is completed, till we can bring the last man safely home. It is vital that we, too, stick with our task until this is accomplished.

In this Seventh Victory Loan we are asked to buy more bonds than we bought before, to bring complete Victory—quickly.

His Inspired Note

The British Prime Minister who last week described himself as "travelling from court to court like a wandering minstrel," has surely in the past four and a half years uttered many a word sweeter to the Allied world than the voice of any minstrel of the ages. For his words are words of practical wisdom in musical prose. They have struck a note of power, of confidence and hope while recognizing the magnitude of the task before the democratic nations. Never were speeches of greater power to inspire men's souls delivered than those which contained these words:

"We shall not flag nor fail. We shall go on to the end. We shall fight in France, we shall fight on the seas and oceans, we shall fight with glowing confidence and growing strength in the air. We shall defend our Island whatever the cost may be; we shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets and we shall fight in the hills. We shall never surrender." (June 4, 1940, on Dunkerque.)

"Good night, then. Sleep to gather strength for the morning, for the morning will come. Brightly will it shine on the brave and true; kindly upon all who suffer for the cause; glorious upon the tomb of heroes—thus will shine the dawn. Vive la France! Long live, also, the forward march of the common people in all the lands towards their just and true inheritance and toward the broader and fuller age." (Appeal to the French nation Oct. 22, 1940.)

On no minstrel voice or music did ever so much depend as has depended upon Prime Minister Churchill in the greatest years of growing Allied power. Statesman, leader, orator, true prophet he has been.

He has never said when the war will end. As late as yesterday he very cautiously held out some hope that "political convulsions may bring the war in Germany to a speedy end at any time" but at the same time he warned that against that possibility "must be set the iron control of German life in all its forms including the army which has been established by Hitler's storm troops and secret police. This exceeds anything previously known among men." Then he noted, "I certainly would not predict—still less guarantee—the end of the war before the end of the spring or even before we reach early summer. It may come earlier and no one will rejoice more than I if it should." To this he added the following reference to Japan: "on military grounds alone it would not be prudent to assume that a shorter period than eighteen months after the destruction of Hitler will be required for the final destruction of the Japanese will and capacity to fight."

He spoke of "the ever growing Allied army in Western Europe, noted the obstinate character of the fighting in Italy, and the immense successes of "the strenuous Russian military efforts and skilful Russian and Allied diplomacy."

His words are guideposts of the course of the successes of the Allied nations. He speaks with the authority of one who is a master in national and world leadership, a master of the spoken word, a master in effort of war. He carries his people with him. Surely no more inspired public man has guided so large a section of humanity as this man who calls himself a "wandering minstrel" "travelling from court to court." He has "wandered" to the shores of North America, to Washington, to North Africa, to Teheran and the Middle East and to the great capital of mighty Russia. Everywhere he goes as Britain's representative he is recognized as one of the greatest figures on the world stage.

Norway

Hitler's men in Norway are not in so happy a plight as they seem to have thought some time ago. Russian soldiers have come around the top of the world, which is Norway, and are now on Norwegian soil where they have been welcomed by the Norwegians. From the early days of Quisling's association with Hitler to now the face of things has changed greatly to Hitler's discontent.

Norway has chosen no easy life. Her sons who could, got away and have sailed the seas, have fought in Allied armies and have trained to fly in the air force. No stouter land among the overrun countries can be found. The Norwegians have steadfastly defied the enemy. As for the Norse ships nearly two million tons shipping or 475 ships have been lost in the service of the United Nations or nearly half of her original fleet were flying Norway's flags on one in every ten ships in the invasion of Normandy.

"A Superhuman Effort"

Canadian troops battling their way across the South Beveland Island on the north side of the Schelde Estuary to the Walcheren highway have accomplished what their commander has called "a superhuman job" under the most difficult of conditions. Canadians have had the opportunity in the Western European campaign since the sixth of June of giving a good account of themselves at Caen, at the channel ports of France and in Belgium and Holland. They now see the Huns retreating before them across the Meuse River.

Doesn't Wear Vest

(Associated Press)

President Roosevelt is sitting in a big armchair with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in a smaller chair, 10 feet away, each looking serene and content but neither smiling.

It is at the Smithsonian Institution which has put on display 43 statues of wartime leaders, executed in bronze by Max Kalish of New York.

"The only trouble I had with the President was the vest," Kalish said. "When I first did him in clay I put a vest on him. I showed it to him and he said: 'What am I doing with a vest? I haven't worn a vest in 20 years.' So with one hand I took it right off.

"This Happy Breed of Men"

(Christian Science Monitor, Boston)

Have the English changed much since September, 1939? One by one they have relinquished, without a murmur, cherished practices and institutions. They have permitted cockney youngsters to overrun stately country mansions. They have taken up seriously the leveling of enrolment at famous "public" schools. They have even submitted to restrictions on bath water.

Let their friends, however, rest assured. There is no fundamental and alarming change. They are not going to give up cricket! From Normandy comes the comforting news of troops playing the traditional game, with an entrenchment tool for a bat, a tin can for a ball, and chunks of stone for wickets.

We affectionately preserve in our files the biographical sketch of an Englishman of our acquaintance who wished, for the most worthy purposes, to make a good impression on his American friends. He made no special point of his classical record at Cambridge, or the fact that he had held an important post with Lord Kitchener in the Ministry of Munitions during World War 1. But he did make a modest point of the achievement of "211 runs at cricket in 1892 at Lord's Ground in London."

Berlin's Broken Windows

("Newsweek" Magazine, New York)

Almost overlooked is the demoralizing effect of the series of British Mosquito raids on Berlin, which have smashed innumerable window panes. The fast little planes drop 2-ton bombs nightly, shattering glass for distances of several kilometres. And, to make matters worse for the harassed burghers, the glass is almost irreplaceable. Those who try to get repairs are laughed at unless they have coffee or some other scarce commodity to offer instead of cash. Even so, they must wait weeks for replacements. Thus thousands now face a bitter winter during which they can at best board up their windows against the cold.

JUST FOLKS

HURT

He seldom went to prize fights for he suffered every blow.
He swore he felt the punches, and with losers down would go.
And even at a ball game if an error came his way
He shared the short stop's feelings, for that's where he used to play.

He seldom talked about it, but the crowd's a cruel thing
And he couldn't stand men's chatter when some youngster tries to sing.
So he stayed away from night clubs; said he didn't want to stare
At a struggling fellow being who was facing failure there.

There is pain the flesh must suffer, but there's pain of spirit, too.
More or less wer'e all affected by whatever others do
Friend or stranger? Nothing's altered. 'Tis a truth our hearts assert:
By whatever hurts another there are many of us hurt.

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

In their excellent "Basic History of the United States," recently published, Charles A. and Mary R. Beard several times refer to the eleventh President of the United States as "Leonidas Polk." Of course, the authors, publishers and proofreaders all knew that the eleventh President was James Knox Polk and that Leonidas Polk was an Episcopal bishop and Confederate general. Even Homer occasionally nods.

The White Slave Act, more properly the White Slave Traffic Act, was passed by Congress in 1910. It forbids anyone, under heavy penalty, to aid, cause or induce the transportation of any woman or girl from one state to another for immoral purposes. "White slavery" as a general term for traffic in women for immoral purposes came into use when Negro slavery still existed in this country, "white" being used to suggest that certain women were the victims of a form of slavery as pitiable as that imposed upon the colored race.

"White slave" is defined as a woman held unwillingly for purposes of commercial prostitution. The White Slave Traffic Act of 1910 is also often referred to as the Mann Act, suggested by the name of its sponsor, Congressman James R. Mann, of Illinois.

A white horse was the symbol of the Saxons in England.

In 1939 the Tokyo authorities were reported to be seriously considering a proposal to train 30,000 women in special schools and to send them as picture brides to Japanese farmers living in the Amazon Valley in Brazil.

It is widely believed that the small American snake known as the puffing adder blows poisonous powder or spray from its mouth. Occasionally reports are published to the effect that persons have been seriously injured by venomous spray spat into their faces by these reptiles. The breath of the puffing adder, it is said, will kill a person at a distance of 25 feet. But all this is fancy, pure and simple.

This belief is in part suggested by an entirely different snake, the puff adder of Africa, a heavily built and exceedingly venomous viper that has the power of greatly distending its body when excited. The American puffing adder is perfectly harmless and resembles its African namesake only in its power to distend its body and look ferocious.

The American species is not a poisonous snake and does not eject a spray or powder from its mouth. Its teeth are too short to inflict a wound even if it did strike a person. This species has many local names; as, spreading viper, blowing adder, hissing viper, sand snake, flat-headed adder, blowing viper, blow snake, spreading adder, sand viper, hog-nosed snake and puff adder. Most of the names refer to its habit of spreading its head and neck when angry or excited and hissing in a threatening manner. As a matter of fact it is one of the biggest bluffers among snakes.

WATER IN THE LUNGS

When a person drowns is water always found in the lungs? I ask because a man I knew was found apparently drowned recently. He had for years had some heart trouble, and also his relatives said he had suffered with cramps once before when in swimming. To complicate matters, there were some marks that might have been caused by blows by some heavy dull object. (S.L.A.)

Death by drowning is due to asphyxia (suffocation, deprivation of air) and not to the few spoonfuls or maybe the few drops of water that may get into the lungs. The postmortem signs, therefore, are those of asphyxia. Little or nothing can be proved by the finding of, or by the absence of water (or whatever fluid the victim is presumed to have drowned in) in the lungs or in the bronchial tubes. More characteristic of drowning is the presence of clear or blood-tinged foam or froth full of fine air bubbles in the windpipe and bronchial tubes. Often water or whatever fluid the victim drowned in is found in the stomach.

Asphyxia supervenes about two minutes after submersion, and death follows five minutes later.

A boy about 7 years old playing on the ice fell into open water where ice harvesters had cut the ice. His companions saw him disappear, ran across the pond and told the men, who ran to the open place, saw the boy's cap floating, fished around with pole hooks and pulled the boy out on the solid ice. They ran across the pond to a shack, began a search for a barrel to roll the child on, while a book-keeper telephoned the nearest doctor, who happened to be the geek who now conducts this column. It probably took the doctor at least two minutes to reach the scene.

Fair to estimate the boy had been drowned at least four minutes, possibly longer. The doctor applied Schafer's method of artificial respiration—not the modified method taught by the American Red Cross. Thick viscid fluid drained from the nose and mouth during the resuscitation — I do not believe the fluid would have drained out of the breathing passages had the method taught by the American Red Cross been applied, because even limpid water will not run uphill. Anyway the boy survived. Luckily no first aider trained by the American Red Cross perpetrated the wrong method of resuscitation on the victim.

Even today there are a good many people who purport to be intelligent but who do not know how to resuscitate and hence are worse than useless in an emergency. How can such people sleep at night? What if the emergency should occur that very night, say from accidental carbon monoxide asphyxiation? Let us hope there is a Boy Scout or a Girl Scout in the neighborhood—he or she will know what to do.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

The In-Laws

Has a mother-in-law the right to pick up her grandson (aged seven months) any time she pleases? She argues that a sick baby belongs in his mother's arms, and because I do not believe in disturbing the baby. (Mrs. M. W.)

Answer—Neither the mother-in-law nor the grandma has any rights at all, if the baby's mother is on the job and sane, sober and intelligent. Send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope for The Brady Baby Book. Maybe it will pacify the household and give the baby a break too.

Young Folks and Old Folks

Seems you are not getting old, but I am. I have just turned 90 and I want to ask if you can recommend a simple tonic in tablet form that will give me a little more pep. Something I can take right along without injury to my general health which is very good. (S. E. S.)

Answer—Oh, I don't know—on the bowling green the other day my former friend Dr.—— (he said his girl friend had just celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary) gave me an unequivocal trouncing and I'm feeling as old as Sam Hill till I can take him on again. Send me a stamped envelope bearing your address, and I'll send you the pamphlet "Young Folks and Old Folks", which, I believe, will tell you how to get just the effect you want.

Twenty Years

Your column has been a "must" in our home for years. I have been teaching your precepts in the—— public schools for a long time. Mother has "rheumatiz", saw something in your column about calcium. (D.G.H.)

Answer—Send stamped self addressed envelope, ask for pamphlet "Calcium and Rheumatiz".

ALBERT ALUMNI IN TORONTO PLAN COLLEGE SUPPORT

Hope to Establish Scholarships—Principal Howard Praised

By ANDREW McLAUCHLIN, '06-'10

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

Toronto, Nov. 1 — About a hundred alumni husbands, wives, and former teachers of Albert College heard splendid reports on progress at the college from Mr. E. Warriner of Richmond Hill, Chairman of the Board of Governors, and made plans for aggressive support of their Alma Mater and adoption of a definite constitution and creation of a woman's auxiliary and junior department. Activities will henceforth not be limited to social occasions and it is hoped to be able to establish scholarships. Delegates from the alumni will in future attend College functions. Great praise was accorded Principal Bert Howard for his fine leadership.

The meeting, which was the fall gathering of the Toronto branch of the Alumni, was held in the parlors of Westminster United Church, Bloor Street, of which Rev. Dr. Bruce Hunter is now pastor. Great regret at his absence was expressed by the president, Mrs. Kenneth (Hattie) Dewar; but news of his good progress was gladly received. Dr. Hunter had gone to London to speak at a Victory Loan Rally last Tuesday and was suddenly taken with an attack of appendicitis and operated on the next day at Victoria Memorial Hospital. Mrs. Hunter (formerly Miss H. Pringle) is with her husband.

A program followed the reception and business meeting, which included piano solos by Miss Dorothy Stewart; soprano solos by Miss Anna Denholm accompanied by George Stewart; a sing-song conducted by Mrs. Bearl MacDonald; a quiz contest by Professor J. F. Staples and a recital of Habitant poetry by Professor John D. Robins of Victoria University. Messrs. A. W. Chown and M. Corbett also took part. A luncheon followed. Miss Edna Howard, daughter of Principal Bert Howard, is secretary of the Toronto Alumni.

Veteran Alumni Present

Honored as the oldest alumni present was Rev. J. McD. Kerr of Toronto, who had entered the college in 1879, and Mrs. Kerr, who attended even though they had to leave early to catch a train for Victoria, B.C., where they will spend the winter. Another veteran was Mrs. V. H. Winter, 1880-84, formerly Lily Boyce, whose father, Cyrus Boyce, photographer of Belleville, and mother met at the college. Romance was also brought to light in the presence of Harding Vowles, Victoria College student minister, whose father, Rev. F. J. Vowles, of Ottawa, and mother, (nee Lottie Mason, sister of Bert Mason, of Belleville) were classmates; the same is true of two other classmates of the same year, Victor and Mrs. Butts. The latter was Ethel McCartney, daughter of Dr. J. H. McCartney, a missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Chungking, China, and came to Belleville with her parents in 1908, travelling by the Trans-Siberian Railroad and via England for their furlough. Dr. McCartney occasionally entertained students at his home. Eventually Victor Butts and Miss McCartney were married and went to Chungking. Dr. and Mrs. McCartney died in that city. Mrs. Butts returned to Canada in 1941 with her daughter. Mr. Butts was recently in Canada and has just returned to Chungking where he is an official of the Imperial Chemical Co., arriving safely after only 80 flying hours en route. Victor Butts, Jr., a graduate in law, is now an artillery lieutenant at Prince Rupert, B.C.

Former Belleville Students Present.

Former Belleville people noticed last night included: Harold B. Holton, Miss Lena Sills, Mrs. L. B. Morrison, (Aileen Scantlebury), James S. Dyer and Mrs. Dyer, (Jean Bonisteel), Dr. Walter and Mrs. Dawson, (Helen Dyer), and Mrs. George Simmons of Honan, widow of Canon Simmons, who died in China.

Other graduates of Albert included: Judge J. E. Lovering, Jos. Noseworthy, M. P. and Mrs. Noseworthy; Rev. Capt. T. W. F. G. Andrews, educational officer at Christie Street Hospital and Mrs. Andrews (Erma Hooper); Fred C. Copp, Athol Beatty, and former teachers: Fred Rainsbury, William Schoales, Mrs. B. Cornett (Bertha Broskurth) and Mrs. H. D. Phillips (Hazel Thompson).

Second and third generations students present were Miss Helen and Lieut. E. M. Powell, and their mother, Mrs. E. V. Powell, 1st Vice President of the Alumni, whose father, the late Dr. C. M. Mallory of Delta, Leeds County graduated in 1887.

Mr. Fred Deacon is fond of telling how far abroad has gone the fame of Belleville: The writer would like to add recent evidences that the college has done its share, too. On a recent visit to Camp Borden he was one of four standing in the Y. M. C. A. Hut having tea. The others were the host: Fred Mains, Y. M. C. A. officer in charge, formerly of Tweed; Rev. Lt. M. Redvers Brown, Supply officer of the R. C. A. S. C., son of the late Rev. A. L. Brown; and Capt. Arthur Harden Educational Services Director of M. D. No. 2 of the Legion Services: all were students of Albert.

Also at the national educational convention at London, the address of welcome was given by a former teacher at Albert, Professor S. F Maines, Ph. D. of Western University who is education officer for M. D. No. 3. Noticed at recent General Council of the United Church at London were Rev. Roy H. Rickard and Mrs. Rickard, Dr. R. T. Richards, Rev. A. Murray Stewart, all of whom are prominent in Western Ontario; and to close the roster, visiting at Bancroft recently the writer chatted with the local Doctor, Dr. E. T. Lumb (Stead).

Albert College is definitely on the map.

The War Today—
China and Chiang in Present Crisis, Can They Qualify With Big-Three?

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The over-all picture of the events surrounding President Chiang Kai-Shek's successful demand for Gen. Stilwell's recall (on charges which Washington doesn't accept) is that of the Generalissimo gambling heavily with the International Relations and prestige of the globe's most populous country.

Chiang's insistence on Stilwell's recall appears to have been incidental to broader issues involving American attempts to strengthen China's war effort.

No longer ago than the recent Dumbarton Oaks conference to lay plans for a world peace organization, China was accorded the position of one of the "big four"—along with Britain, the United States and Russia. The idea was that China, with her 500,000,000 people, would assume leadership in the post-war orient.

China and the Big-Three.

Now the Chinese weaknesses which have been emphasized by the present imbroglio immediately give rise to the question whether China can expect to qualify for membership with the Big Three. That's something which we shouldn't answer hastily, pending developments. It depends on China's further attitude.

It's perhaps unfortunate that Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek is ill in New York at this moment of crisis for her country. This brilliant woman—often referred to as "the brains of China"—long has been her husband's closest political adviser. Indeed she has for years taken an active hand in government, and is reported to have been at once an inspiration and a steadying influence for the talented but sometimes rash Generalissimo.

Judging from past events, if she had been in Chungking during recent trying days she would have persuaded her husband to a wiser course.

War Against Japan.

So far as concerns the war against Japan, the Anglo-American Allies can adapt themselves to existing conditions. Fortunately American progress in conquering the Pacific has put them in strategic positions from which to knock out Japan. However, perhaps Chiang will remedy his own position.

One of the greatest dangers is that of an upheaval between the Generalissimo's forces and the powerful Chinese communist armies of the north. They've been working under a truce—frequently broken by bloody encounters—because of the Japanese war.

REDS POUR INTO 60-MILE-WIDE BREAK IN LINES

Break - Through Between the Danube and Tisza Rivers

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Nov. 1 —(AP)— Russian motorized infantry is clearing scattered enemy detachments from three sides of Keskemet, while other Red army troops are battling fiercely in the streets of the city, 44 miles southeast of Budapest, late front dispatches said today.

Soviet tanks, artillery and infantry are pouring into a 60-mile wide break in the enemy's defences between the Danube and the Tisza rivers, the dispatches added. At captured Izsak, 17 miles southwest of Keskemet, the Russians were only 43 miles south of Budapest.

The army newspaper Red Star disclosed that the new offensive aimed at Budapest got under way at least three days ago, and overran a defence zone where the enemy concentrated as many as 20 anti-tank guns to the mile.

Thus far the offensive has swept up 200 Hungarian cities, towns and villages, more than 4,000 prisoners and control of several hundred square miles of new territory, the Russians declared.

Front dispatches said the Hungarian 23rd Infantry Division was virtually destroyed, its commander killed and the deputy commander and most of the staff captured as Soviet armor and a wave of tommy-gunners broke into Keskemet.

Assault Increased.

A correspondent for Isvestia reported that Soviet forces increased the fury of their assault toward Budapest "tenfold" after they discovered bodies of four Red army prisoners tortured and slain by the Germans and Hungarians.

The Russians also pushed toward Budapest on a front 120 miles northeast of the capital. They captured 50 places, including the large town of Hajdunanas.

More than 30 German tanks were wrecked or burned in the fighting southeast of Budapest, the Russian communique said. It described the Red army operations as "impetuous outflanking manoeuvres," and said Soviet forces hurled back repeated enemy counter-attacks that were reinforced with fresh troops.

In the capture of Nyiregyhaza, a district centre northwest of Debrecen, 1,500 Germans and Hungarians were killed while the Russians advanced 12 miles, the communique added. The Soviet forces retook the town after being pushed out of it.

The Russians announced 104 German tanks were destroyed in a single day.

London — (CP) — Disturbed by gunfire and bombing in France, thousands of starlings have winged across the English Channel to find sanctuary in Britain.

Property Damage Kept to Minimum On Hallowe'en

With the exception of an epidemic of throwing stones through windows time-honored Hallowe'en property damage was kept to a minimum in Belleville last night, police reported today after a post-holiday check-up.

In vastly separated areas in the city complaints regarding stones being thrown through windows were received by police, but before the police cruiser could respond to the complaints the Hallowe'en pranksters had long since beaten a hasty retreat to disappear under the cover of darkness.

On William, Geddes and College Sts. reports of broken windows were investigated, while a stone was also hurled through a window at the County Registry Office on Church St. Two boys were seen breaking a street light on Dufferin Ave. while on Coleman Street, several garbage pails, left out for morning collection, proved too much of a temptation to the Hallowe'en atmosphere and were toppled over with the contents strewing about the street.

City schools did not escape the annual 31st of October attacks, when it was disclosed that at Queen Victoria School on Pine St. six panes of glass were broken as the result of stones being thrown through them. The same fate resulted to a pane of glass in the front of King George School also.

Generally speaking, however, the general destruction of property at Hallowe'en was at a noticeable low ebb in 1944. "No doubt the time-honored practice of ringing door bells and tossing the odd foot mat off a verandah were practiced, but generally the Hallowe'en spirit in Belleville reigned with thoughts of good clean fun without damage to property. It is gratifying to know police did not have to arrest any person for serious trouble," commented local police officials after a general review of the situation today.

U.S. AMBASSADOR

he has an excellent record. The President left no doubt that while he heeded Chiang's request to replace Stilwell he did not thereby intend any reflection on the General.

Mr. Roosevelt did not go into the background of differences between the General and Generalissimo but it is common knowledge among reporters who have served in China and military diplomatic men here that the two have been at odds since the battle of the Burma Road two years ago, that Chiang had ever since favored a more cautious strategy than Stilwell considered desirable.

"The case of Ambassador Gauss is somewhat different. He and the Chinese leader have never been more than formally friendly. He has wanted to come home for a long time.

MATCHES TO BE SCARCE IN U.S.

Washington, Nov. 1 — (AP)—In the next six months United States civilians will get hardly any matches except "household strike-anywhere type," the War Production Board said yesterday. Ninety per cent of all penny box matches and 25 per cent of book matches produced in the next six months must go to the armed services, the W.P.B. reported.

MAY USE PARKING METERS

Windsor, Nov. 1 — (CP)—There's a possibility Windsor may be equipped with parking meters after the war, when they become available. City clerk C. V. Waters has received word from Sudbury, Ont., and Ypsilanti, Mich., that meters installed in those centres are working out satisfactorily.

DISAPPEARED FIVE YEARS AGO

North Bay, Nov. 1 — (CP)—Mystery of the disappearance of Mr. and Mrs. Earl D. Kirk, who left here for what friends believed was a motor trip to Winnipeg in 1940 has entered its fifth year—and is no nearer solution, though many rumors and "leads" have been followed up. The couple stopped at Sudbury, Ont., but were never seen again.

SULPHURIC ACID
Barometer of Business

SUCH is the importance of Sulphuric Acid to the many industrial processes now being carried on in Canada that the monthly record of its production could well be used as a barometer of the rise and fall of business.

Sulphuric Acid is extensively used in steel mills, foundries and similar plants whose volume of production is governed by the demands of construction, ship building, transportation and the engineering trades. These are the basic industries and their progress parallels the general trade statistics of the Dominion.

Another important use of Sulphuric Acid is in the manufacture and maintenance of storage batteries for cars, tanks, radio equipment and certain marine engines.

While Sulphuric Acid is only one of the many products of Canadian Industries Limited, it is an outstanding example of the way in which commercial chemistry is contributing to the life and progress of the Dominion.

NEW OXYGEN TENT WILL BE BOUGHT

Hospital Auxiliary Informed That Blood Bank Has Arrived

The regular monthly meeting of the Hospital Auxiliary was held in the Nurses' Recreation room with the President, Mrs. Wray in the chair.

Mr. G. Barclay, hospital administrator, reported that the blood bank had arrived but was not fully installed and that the work of building and installing the refrigerated tray-morgue would be started as soon as the necessary materials had arrived.

Mrs. Wray, delegate to the recent Hospital Aids Convention in Toronto, gave a very comprehensive report of the convention activities. During the past year auxiliaries across Canada have raised $86,000 to buy extra equipment and needed supplies for hospitals. Mrs. Rhynas, president of Hospitals Aids, emphasized particularly the need for adequate hospital payments for indigent patients, and legislation placing hospital staffs under the Workmen's Compensation Board for accidents. The service of Hospital Aids is needed more than ever in these times of increased hospitalization and the extreme help shortage, efforts should increase, not slacken. The chief hope lies in an adequate health plan to meet the needs of all.

Mrs. Mikel gave a brief resume of the Ontario Hospital Association Convention which was held at the same time as Hospital Aids.

During the business meeting, it was decided to buy a new oxygen tent for the hospital. This is vitally needed as at the present time there is only one which does not nearly meet their requirements at times.

Miss Gist, convener of the Welfare Committee, gave her report of the past month, shaving needs, dental necessities and magazines being brought for those patients unable to buy them themselves.

Plans to raise more funds were discussed but no action was taken at this meeting.

2,300 Children Enjoy Shell Out Parties Arranged by Kinsmen

Garbed in a colorful array of masquerade costumes which to say the least must have taxed the creative imaginations of their originators, approximately 2,300 children made merry on Belleville streets on Hallowe'en night, their focal point of interest being the two shell-out parties arranged for their entertainment by members of the local Kinsmen Club.

Two separate parties with varied entertainment ranging from clowns and tumblers to movie cartoons and traditional contests of Hallowe'en were arranged for the kiddies who were treated to apples and candy at the conclusion of the parties. Parties both at the Y.M.C.A. and the Armouries were well-arranged and well-conducted, thanks to the interest shown by service club members who turned out in force to assist in giving the kiddies their rightful good time.

At the "Y" approximately 500 younger children lined up for their opening parade through downtown streets which was led by members of the Air Cadet band with corps personnel acting as guard of honor. The parade for the older children from the Armouries was possibly not as large but was more than made up for by the enthusiasm of those taking part. Parades in both instances signalled the start of the program at the respective centres.

Two Bicycles Given.

Determining of prize winners for the shell-out contest sponsored by the local Kinsmen Club was the focal point of interest for the vast majority of children with enthusiasm maintaining a high level until announcement of winners was made.

And past weeks' efforts in selling shell-out "Milk for Britain" tickets saw reward on the part of young sales people. Two shining new bicycles are the justifiable pride of new owners today while runners-up in the sales contest were rewarded with worth-while prizes.

Winner of the girl's bicycle was Shirley Mifflin of King George School who topped all children by selling 3,100 shell-out tickets. The boy's bicycle was won by Dover Mark of Queen Mary School who sold approximately 2,900 shell-out tickets.

Second place winner among the girls, a felt hat from Woodley's, was Joyce High of Queen Mary School with Stanley Reegan of Queen Alexandra School taking second place among the boys, the prize being 36 theatre tickets at the Belle.

Only the four major prizes were awarded during the program with Kinsmen officials announcing that the school and class winners in each school and the pick-up prizes would be later announced in the paper and prizes awarded.

Prizes Awarded.

Costume prizes for children at the "Y," assorted comic books donated by the Upper Canada News, were won by the following: tramp, Jimmy Jeffs; negro, Peggy Lou Shortt; clown, Clare Dingman; comic strip, Robert Legate; boy as girl, Bruce Irvin; girl as boy, Shaaron Stuart; best couple, David Robinson and Irvin Robinson, with second prize going to Mary Lou Semark and Jacqueline Semark; witches, Aneta Ritchie, Joyce Valleau and Lois Gee. Stunt contests were won by Glen Cornell, Donald Gorsline, Barbara Grills, Shirley Davidson and Barbara MacDonald.

Judges for costumes at the "Y" and also at the Armouries were Newton Thompson, Lorne McDougall and V. White. Costume prizes at the Armouries, 10 theatre tickets, were donated by the Capitol Theatre management.

Clowns and tumblers engaged to come down from Toronto entertained the overflow crowd at the Armouries, while also included on the program was a series of motion picture cartoons and the parade of costume characters as the events were called.

50th Anniversary Is Marked By Mr., Mrs. C. Knight

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Knight, of 250 Church Street, passed the golden milestone in their lives together yesterday, October 31st., when they marked the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. Both enjoying good health, Mr. and Mrs. Knight recalled happy reminiscences of their wedded life from the very day the Rev. Richard Duke made them man and wife in Mrs. Knight's home at Thomasburg to yesterday when at their home on Church Street, they were paid fondest honors by their family and their friends.

Not only were Mr. and Mrs. Knight celebrating their fifty years married on Tuesday, but also the fact that they had come to reside in Belleville just two years ago the same day. Mrs. Knight, the former Mary Jane Kerr, of Thomasburg, and Mr. Knight, whose boyhood days were passed at the 4th of Sidney, resided for the first twelve years of their married life at the 4th of Sidney. From there, they moved to Dunblane, Saskatchewan, where they made their home for thirty-eight years.

Mr. and Mrs. Knight have a family of ten, six sons and four daughters. Two of their sons are with the armed services, Frank with the Army overseas and George in the R.C.A.F. at Saskatoon, Sask. The remaining sons are Grant and Clarence, both living at Dunblane, Sask., Walter in Sarnia and Horace of the 4th Concession of Sidney. Their daughters are Mrs. Earl Phelps (Lillian), of New York city; Laura Knight, of Toronto; Mrs. Jack Muxlow (Bessie), living in British Columbia, and Mrs. Vic Laframboise (Irene) of Hamilton. Mr. and Mrs. Knight can proudly boast of fourteen grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

This memorable occasion of Mr. and Mrs. Knight was spent quietly at their home. Their son, Clarence, from Dunblane, Sask., who is visiting in the city and vicinity spent the day with them and their other son Horace, from the 4th of Sidney, also called on them. Mr. and Mrs. Knight were remembered by all their family with gifts, cards and telegrams. Neighbors and friends called on them during the day, and offered them very best wishes and sincere hope for many more years of happy life together.

The Experts Say

Ottawa, Nov. 1-(CP)-BAKED APPLES with oatmeal . . . Does combination seem strange? Well, it is good, says Laura Pepper, chief of the Agriculture Department Consumer section, and besides, every bit of whole grain cereal counts toward the day's quota of vitamins.

For six medium apples allow 1-3 cup of cooked rolled oats. Mix two tablespoons of brown sugar into the cooked cereal and use to fill the centres of the apples. Place in a baking dish, sprinkle another two tablespoons of brown sugar over the apples, add 1-3 cup water bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees fahrenheit until apples are tender. Serve hot with vanilla sauce or cold with top milk.

FISH LIVER OIL and sunshine are the two reliable sources of the vitamin D needed by babies and growing boys and girls, and are a "must" for mothers before baby arrives. The sun's rays are weaker now—cooler weather calls for more clothing and less time is spent out of doors.

Old Sol needs assistance from the cod liver oil bottle for the next few months if growing bodies are to be strong and healthy. The Nutrition Division urges that now is high time to supplement nature's sunshine with the bottled variety.

CREAM VS BUTTER: Cream in coffee, cream on cereal, . . . butter on toast, butter on bread, butter for baking and frying. In wartime it doesn't make sense. Cream sales have been limited so that enough will be available for butter to meet the weekly ration of half a pound for nearly 12,000,000 Canadians, not to mention the pound for each prisoner of war parcel every week.

IRONING BORED? When you set up the ironing board and find its cover scorched and marked it's better to get cracking with a new snow-white cover than to lose your temper). Don't try to press on one that isn't spotless or the scorch marks will transfer themselves to your laundry.) New material for the cover should be washed first... filler in new cottons encourages scorch marks. If you're using old sheeting take time to make a draw-string edge all the way around. Bodkin in tape and pull taut on the board. Tacking on an old sheet is quicker... but the untacking for a next one after won't be.

SOUFFLE SANDWICHES: The Agriculture Department Consumer Section suggests these glorified sandwiches. They require two tablespoons fat, two tablespoons four, 12 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon mustard, 1-2 cup of milk, on cup grated cheese, two eggs, eight slices bread, four lare peeled tomatoes or 3-4 cup canned tomato pulp.

Melt fat, add flour, salt and mustard and blend well. Stir in milk and cheese and cook, stirring constantly, until sauce is thickened and cheese is melted. Pour onto beaten egg yolks and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Toast the bread and spread lightly with softened butter.

Cut peeled tomatoes crosswise in four slices. Place one slice and two half slices of tomato or 1 1-2 tablespoons tomato pulp on each slice of toast. Pile cheese mixture on top. Place on baking sheet and bake in hot oven, 426 degrees fahrenheit, until puffed and golden, —about five minutes. This makes eight sandwiches.

Critical Period Of Price Control Around Corner

With Allied forces gaining success over the enemy on all fronts and with the thought prevalent of an early victory in the European theatre of war, the critical period of price control in Canada lies just around the corner, members of the local Kiwanis club were told at their regular weekly luncheon meeting Tuesday noon.

Speaking before the club Mr. A. G. Smith, of the management service division of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, stated that the greatest fear of board officials today is that of relaxation on the part of the general public, now that victory appears in sight. "The war is not yet over, however," he stressed, "and we must stick with price control to avoid inflation."

The speaker intimated that Canadians had reason to be truly thankful to Donald Gordon and his staff on the successful battle against inflation. Success had been gained, however, only through co-operation on the part of business men and householders, 96 percent of whom had endeavored to conscientiously adhere to regulations.

Cost $16,000,000 Annually

Outlining inauguration problems of his organization the speaker stated that price control entailed the problems of not only price, but of supply and distribution. It cost Canada $16,000,000 annually to administer price control but in view of the savings effected, this was maintained to be worth while.

As an instance he mentioned that the price of binder twine during the past war had risen to 26 cents per pound in contrast to the nine cents per pound in this war. This alone saved farmers ten millions of dollars annually. The savings made possible through price control on sugar with its present price of eight cents per pound as compared to the 22 cents during the last war meant an annual savings of almost three times the yearly cost of administration of the W.P.T.B.

Speaking on shortages of certain articles, Mr. Smith explained that lamp chimneys were in short supply because skilled workers had been taken for war industries. In the case of rope supplies, the tremendous needs of wartime with outfitting of merchant and fighting ships was the reason why madam housewife was unable to get her previous supply of good clothesline, or why daughter could not get a decent skipping rope.

Of the future Mr. Smith indicated that board officials were able to predict the ordinary course of events but that the difficulty lay in forecasting emergencies which arise. Re-adjustment of peacetime controls would require as much effort as the establishment of the present system of price control, he stated.

Secretary Ross Stiver gave a resume of club business during the past few months.

True beauty depends on youthful skin elasticity

14-DAY PALMOLIVE METHOD MAY IMPROVE YOUR SKIN

Compare face with shoulder skin. You'll find shoulders look 5 or more years younger. That's because shoulder skin retains its elasticity—while facial skin pores are clogged with make-up, unable to breathe for hours at a time. And when pores can't breathe skin starts to age prematurely. But Palmolive can help retain youthful elasticity in your skin.

Look younger in 14 days! Each time you wash, (use a face cloth) massage warm, rich, vitalizing Palmolive lather thoroughly into your skin for one full minute. Now a quick rinse and pat dry. Palmolive's 60-second Beauty Massage has been scientifically tested by 2,301 women and 36 doctors. Their reports prove conclusively that . . . in just 14 days, it brings lovelier complexions.

Drew Interview Given in Montreal

Montreal, Oct. 31—(CP)—Premier Drew of Ontario said in an interview last night that the position he took in regard to family allowances was that "all security, domestic and otherwise, depended upon the outcome of this war, and our attitude is that obligations and opportunities must go hand in hand."

He added: "Obligation to maintain the state by military service must be shared equally, if equality of privilege is going to be claimed. The figures show that the province of Quebec has not contributed its proportionate share of manpower.... The solution of that problem rested within Quebec itself.

"I pointed out that we want national unity based upon equality of service which will justify full co-operation in extending advantages equally throughout the whole country."

Allies Progressing Further in N. Burma

Kandy, Ceylon, Oct. 31 — (CP-Reuter) — British and Chinese troops, driving through Northern Burma in a bid to re-open a direct land route between India and China by way of Bhamo, have made further progress.

The Chinese have consolidated their positions in Myhothit, 24 miles north of Bhamo, and British troops in the Mogaung-Mandalay railway corridor are continuing offensive patrol action said today's southeast Asia command headquarters communique.

British forces now are only 30 miles north of Katha, on the Irrawaddy River, with its rail yards and stores.

PREHISTORIC TRADE ROUTE

A prehistoric trade route has been traced by geographers, running across Europe from Denmark to northern Italy.

LONDON LETTER

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 1 —(CP)— As the war in Europe nears an end, steps are being taken by the government to bring a more balanced economy to the old distressed areas which were a blot on Britain in the between-wars period.

Hugh Dalton, president of the Board of Trade who will have direction of this policy, has told the House of Commons legislation which is being prepared will empower the Board to continue and extend its present practice of erecting factories in the poor areas.

And a government white paper on employment forecast an accompanying power to restrict establishment of new factories in some areas which are congested industrially.

The aim, of course, is to spread out industrial enterprise over the whole country in an effort to provide more uniform employment opportunities than hitherto were available.

To carry out the added duties under this plan, the Board of Trade staff has been strengthened both at headquarters here and in the various regions. A preliminary survey has been made to obtain information on what districts most urgently need development.

The northeast section of the country is high on the list. Shipbuilding is the principal industry of that area and during the war activity in the yards has been tremendous. But the future of shipbuilding in Britain is doubtful and there may be need for diversification.

The same situation, although shipbuilding is not involved, applies in South Wales and in part of Scotland. In the Lanarkshire coalfields area some action has been taken to ensure new employment. West Cumberland must also be given help through encouragement of industry, and parts of Lancashire likely will be given attention.

Areas where the heavy industries were concentrated before the war are likely to face a stiff unemployment problem once peace comes. War activity brought light war industries to those sections and women found plenty of employment opportunities. If these areas became depressed as they were before the war, the consequences would be even worse than a decade ago because women who had gained economic independence would become unemployed along with the men.

The likelihood is that steps will be taken quickly to keep light industries in these districts where women can find work at which they have proved capable.

It is anticipated that after the war industrialists planning the building of new factories or the transfer of plants from one area to another will have to get Board of Trade approval. This will give the government an opportunity to control the flow of industry away from congested areas into the so-called distressed districts where diversification is necessary.

In addition, the government now has licensing authority over new construction. This could be continued into the peace and act as another "steering" mechanism. The ministry also will select those of its war plants which are to be declared "surplus" and made available to private enterprise, and some of these undoubtedly will be in the areas needing help.

The bill under preparation is expected to provide for financial assistance to approved undertakings. In addition, there may be grants to municipal authorities to augment the services necessary to industry, and for extension of research facilities.

2,000 in Band Reported Waiting To Strike Franco

Paris, Nov. 1 — (AP)—Approximately 2,000 Spanish Republicans and Russians, banded together under the insignia of a black skullcap with a white death's head, have established a stronghold in the mountains in France's southern Dorognes department and are waging a private war against the French Forces of the Interior, an observer just returned from the region said today.

The band, he declared, is composed of fugitives from Spain, including veterans of the International Brigade of the Spanish Civil War, and men who escaped from German concentration camps in France.

Their objective is to muster forces for an opportunity to strike across the border at the Franco regime.

Normally, like other anti-Franco campaigners, they would have been aligned with the F.F.I. in a common fight against the Germans. But the observer said this group has come into conflict with the F. F. I. because its members have been raiding surrounding farms and stores, occasionally shooting people who resisted.

PICTON

Robbers Enter Service Station And C.N. Office

Picton, Nov. 1—Two small robberies were reported to police Tuesday morning. A service station operated by Roger Blakely was entered through a rear door and a ten dollar bill and 40 coppers taken. Other valuable articles were not touched. The second break-in was at the C.N.R. station. A door was forced in order to gain admittance. Only articles missed were a ticket dater and two staplers.

A cash drawer was smashed but no money was secured, as it was in the safe.

Purchases Business.

Hugh R. MacDonald has purchased the Burford Transport business and took possession yesterday.

Fred Burford, the founder, will remain in the employ of the new company, as will his son William in Toronto. Lawrence Burford leaves the firm to open a garage for servicing the fleet of trucks.

Held Draw.

Teachers of Picton Public School realized $130 from the sale of tickets on a Kenwood blanket. The lucky ticket, held my Mrs. Martha Terrill, Picton, was drawn Monday night at the theatre by Janet Williams, Phil Dodds being in charge. The money is used for sewing and knitting for the local Red Cross. During the past 18 months, the teachers have sent $450 to Red Cross headquarters to supply parcels of food for prisoners of war. Ten parcels are provided for each month.

Hurt by Shrapnel.

Word was received yesterday by Mrs. P. O. Vandewater, Wellington, that her son, Sgt. Howard Vandewater, was injured by shrapnel. A shell broke on the wall above his head, and shrapnel wounded him in the neck, back, arm and hand, but not seriously. He is in a hospital where Lieut. Beatrice McCulloch of Wellington is a Nursing Sister.

Shell-Out.

The streets were thronged last night with masked and costume figures celebrating Hallowe'en. The children had sold Kinsmen Shell-Out tickets and these were collected instead of treats. Prizes are to be awarded the children selling the most tickets and all collecting them will receive a ticket to a theatre matinee on Saturday. Due to preparations for the recent radio broadcast, the club was not able to arrange a party here last night, but gave one at Wellington for the children there who had also sold tickets.

Hallowe'en parties were held in the schools yesterday.

The W.A. of the United Church held a successful rummage sale on Saturday.

Lieut. Rex Walters was slightly wounded Oct. 4, his mother, Mrs. C. Walters, is informed. He is serving in Italy with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. He was slightly wounded on Aug. 26 but rejoined his unit.

Mummified Bodies Of 3 Negro Babies Found in Lockport N. Y.

Lockport, N. Y., Nov. 1 — (AP) — The mummified bodies of three babies, apparently Negroes, were found Monday night in a building formerly used as an auto laundry.

Det.-Sergt. Benjamin Furlong said the infants were wrapped in sheets and blankets. Two were found upstairs, one jammed into an orange crate and the other in a cardboard box. The third was discovered downstairs stuffed in a trunk.

Furlong said Leroy Glover rented the property recently and was cleaning it when he discovered the first body. He called police and the other two were found.

Election Odds Favor Roosevelt

St. Louis, Nov. 1—(AP)—Odds on the presidential election which have increased in favor of President Roosevelt could be shifted to favor Gov. Thomas E. Dewey by wagers totalling $200,000, betting commissioner James J. Carroll said Tuesday.

"There is a limit to the amount of money bet on an election," Carroll said. "If $200,000 were wagered on Dewey's election we would have to reverse the odds completely to attract sufficient money to cover the bet.

"Bettors determine the prices and the money that has put the odds where they are is coming from professional sources in large blocks for President Roosevelt and not from any widespread belief in these odds by hopeful Democrats. It is confusing because the odds are not in accord with political polls. In my opinion this race is an even bet."

On the Job - every day!

Every lost working hour means lost manufacture and lost delivery of important war material—and those hours can never be regained.

When these "lost hours" through sickness, holidays or "just staying away" are multiplied by thousands, all over Canada, the delay is serious. So, keep well and keep working!

Absenteeism at the office or factory means delayed action at the front. So, let's stick to our jobs until the big job of beating the enemy is over.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Nov. 1 — (CP) — If willingness to try out new ideas and change the game to meet new conditions means anything lacrosse may really be in for the revival that its fans hope for. The Canadian Lacrosse Association intends to try out six-man lacrosse next year, and if the trial balloon is successful, the old, seven-man game may be dropped for good.

That's the latest from the head of the C.L.A., scholarly A. A. Barnes of Vancouver, as relayed by Maurice Smith of the Winnipeg Free Press. Teams in the Quebec area will be asked to play one round using the six-man game, and then report on their preference. The six-man game has a great many boosters in Quebec, which is a logical place to try the new system.

Even if no change is made, it's still a good sign that the men behind the sport now are at least thinking about its change or improvement.

Juniors Anxious:

Youthful football enthusiasts and their backers at St. Thomas, Ont., are anxious to revive the Junior Ontario Rugby Football Union, reports N. D. Whitmore in the Times-Journal. Secondary and public schools there are giving the game great support, and they'd like to see the Ontario league resumed as soon as war conditions permit it.

Fun for All:

There must be something wrong with the racetrack bettors in Mexico City. Lou Davies, summertime form-caster for the Western Canada racing circuit, reported on goings-on at the Hipodromo De Las Americas south of the border, where he is looking them over now. When the meet opened, three (count 'em) 150-piece bands and a hi-hi-hi Mexican screen beauty were on hand as extra added attractions. Up this way, they could probably fill the mutuel machines without even advertising the races.

Incidentally:

Andy (Toronto Star) Lytle reports with satisfaction that hockey apparently "has been given back to the customer," after last season's red line regulations and lengthy pass-outs. But he adds we can't be sure stickhandling really has returned to its lawful place until we "see what step Black Hawks and Red Wings will take to circumvent this projected return to hockey normalcy". The Winnipeg Navy hockey team has turned down an Army-Air Force offer to bolster the Sailors' lineups with players from the other services. The University of Nevada football team will fly from Reno to Edmonton— 1,650 miles—this weekend for a game Sunday with the Alaska Clippers, a team made up of players serving with the U. S. Air Transport Command in Alberta.

The Nevada coach, Jim Aiken, is taking a dull varsity team, 22 players.

At Edmonton last night Lieut. Ray Arjo, Clippers' coach, wouldn't predict the outcome. Clippers have lost three out of five Sunday games before sell-out crowds in Edmonton.

Hollywood Park racetrack at Inglewood, Cal., re-opens today after nearly three years of inactivity imposed by the war. Top event of the 34-day meeting is the $10,000 Hollywood premiers handicap in which possibly 25 are expected to start.

At Baltimore today it's Twilight Tear against Devil Diver in the $25,000 Pimlico special, weight-for-age classic featuring the Pimlico opening. Eddie Arcaro will ride Devil Diver. Those who don't like the two favorites will plunge on Megogo winner of he Washington handicap at Laurel. Only the three are running. Twilight Tear has won 17 of her 22 races in two years.

Dan Ferris, Secretary-Treasurer of the National A. A. U., received a radiogram from the Swedish Amateur Athletic Association yesterday in which Gunder Haegg and Arne Anderson, Swedish milers, declined an invitation to visit the United States during the indoor track season. The message gave no reason but said a letter of explanation was being mailed.

The World's Heavyweight Champion, Sgt. Joe Louis, arrived home at Detroit yesterday on a week's furlough and promptly signed for a three-round exhibition Friday with Johnny Denson. The bout is an added feature on the Jake La Motta-George Kochan fight card.

Almer Kropp of Kitchener was elected president of the Waterloo Minor Hockey Association at the annual meeting at Kitchener yesterday. The financial report showed the group provided hockey for 200 boys last season at an average cost of $1.35.

A big squad turned out for the practices of the new Galt hockey team, replacing the Kists of last year's Junior O. H. A. group, and Galt fans are enthusiastic. Eligibles this season include defenceman Pete Babando of South Porcupine and Joe Beverlenvitch of Schumacher, forwards Bill Curik of Timmins, Party Palevich and Joe Krompic of Sault Ste. Marie, Elwood Small of Timmis, and Clayt Sweeney of Matachewan.

No Yards Gained, Rushing

During the Iowa Seahawks-Fort Warren game the other day, the Seahawks' Randall Rushing couldn't get a pass away and tried to run instead....After great effort he got back to the line of scrimmage before being smeared....As he lay there, trying to regain his breath, halfback Bob Smith leaned over him and said, in dead seriousness, "Gee, Randy, I would have blocked that guy, but I didn't think you'd get this far."

Three Canadian fighters scored as many knockouts and another Dominion boxer drew in fights at Buffalo last night.

Mike Marty, 145, St. Catharines, Ont., knocked out Chet Goodwin, 140, Lackawanna, N. Y., in the first heat of a four-rounder; Joe Genovese, 134¾, Toronto, knocked out Ted Finley, 129, Swain, Ont., in the first round of another four-rounder and Patsy Zacana, 137, Toronto, knocked out Johnny Virgo, 135, Rochester, N. MINOR LEAGUE TALENT SCARCE SAY MANAGERS

Not Many Players Left That Are Worth $7,500 Price Tag

Chicago, Nov. 1 —(AP)— Major League Baseball officials, many short of outstanding stars because of the Selective Service draft measure, were ready for their own draft business today—taking their picks of Minor League talent—admittedly scarce.

"There doesn't seem to be much left that is worth $7,500," said veteran Connie Mack of Philadelphia Athletics, referring to the price tag on any player drafted from a class AA League. "Previous drafts and the military draft have weeded out just about all of them," he added.

While Lou Boudreau of Cleveland echoed Mack's sentiment, Harry Grabiner, vice-president of Chicago White Sox said there "are several" he had his eye on. But he didn't name any players.

There are 589 players available for the draft in the country's organized leagues, including 340 class AA players carrying the $7,500 price tags. For A-1 or A players the price is $6,000; Class B, $4,000 and Class C, $2,000.

Under the draft rules, Philadelphia's Phillies—last-place club in the National League—get first choice of available talent. Then comes Washington, American League cellar-dwellers, the National League seventh-place team, American League seventh-placers, and so on, with the process repeated as often as there are players any club wants. The draft has averaged only 14 players a year, and it appeared, from the Magnates' comments, it might be less than that this year.

ST. LOUIS FLYERS DEFEAT HORNETS

(By The Canadian Press)

St. Louis Flyers interrupted Pittsburgh Hornets' winning stride last night scoring a 3-2 victory over the American Hockey League leaders in the Missouri capital. It was the Flyers' second home game of the season and 7,079 fans turned out to see the triumph.

Red Doran, hard-hitting defenceman, fired two of the tallies. Billy Kendall netted the third, while Max Bennett and Bob Gracie collected for Pittsburgh.

Doran settled the issue in the final period when he drove a high shot from the blue line past Roger Bessette. Evanshen and Hergert drew assists on the play.

N.Y. RANGERS MEET THE HAWKS

(By ERIC SANDERSON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York Rangers have an opportunity tonight to prove claims they have been "rejuvenated" over last year's cellar-dwelling team which won only six of their 50 games in the National Hockey League schedule.

They clash with Paul Thompson's Chicago Black Hawks in the latter city at better than even odds to win as a result of their strong showing against Toronto Maple Leafs last Saturday, although they did lose, 2-1. Chicago received an 11-5 shellacking on home ice Sunday night from the Torontonians.

Rangers, confident after a four-day rest, meet their opposition with added offensive power and a prediction from Coach Frank Boucher that the team will finish the schedule next Spring at least in fourth position.

Added scoring punch and an improved defence in front of Goalie Ken McAuley will face the Hawks, who have been reported strong offensively but weak defensively.

Leading the Ranger challenge will be Boucher's new forward line of Kilby Macdonald, Fred Hunt and Fred Thurier.

Two more mid-week games are scheduled for tomorrow night with Leafs meeting Canadiens at Montreal and Rangers playing Red Wings at Detroit.

COMPLETE RUGBY SEASON SATURDAY AT HAMILTON, ONT.

Balmy Beach and Hamilton Will be Playing for First Place

By The Canadian Press

The scheduled season in Ontario's two Senior Football leagues comes to an end Saturday with the feature a battle between Hamilton Wildcats and Toronto Balmy Beach at Hamilton for first place in the Ontario Rugby Football Union. It is one of two scheduled fixtures, the other being an Ontario Armed Services League game in Toronto between second-place Toronto Navy Bulldogs and Camp Borden R. C. A. F. Hurricanes.

Indications point to nearly 10,000 fans for the Wildcats-Beach battle. Each team has won four games and lost one this season. Wildcats' loss was by a 10-4 score to Beaches in Toronto. The Beach loss was to Ottawa last week, 14-9. Coach Eddie McLean said yesterday he expects his team, 1943 Dominion champions, to be at full strength. The game will provide a preview of the O. R. F. U. play-off series between these two clubs. Big Abe Zvonkin and Red Hickey, both of whom were injured in the previous meeting with Beaches, are expected to be in action.

Wildcats will use a new set of signals and their drills this week have been secret. McLean said that if his team blocks properly they should have no trouble beating Beaches.

In Toronto Beach Coach Alex Ponton said he expects that 19-year-old Billy Myers, out of the Ottawa game Saturday because of injuries, will be ready for the Hamilton game. Myers, the team's ace forward passer and a fleet runner, sparked Beaches' first four victories.

Ponton set at rest any rumors that his club was out to "get" Joe Krol, the starry Hamilton halfback, or anyone else. "we'll play clean, hard football and we'll try to stop Krol but we won't try to put him or any other player out of action."

In the Services game Navy can take over first place in the league with a win. But if they lose, the Bulldogs still will be in the playoffs as they would then wind up the season in second place in the standings, on point behind the Hagersville R. C. A. F. team.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Nov. 1 —(AP)— Few baseball fans knew Leo Bondy, Vice President and Treasurer of the Giants, who died Sunday, but the men who run the big league clubs will miss him greatly . . . So will the fellows who hang around Eddie Brannick's office during the winter trying to cook up occasional baseball stories for the papers . . Bondy was the kind of a man who is content to remain in the background but his knowledge of law and of baseball made him invaluable both as an advisor and as a news source . . . Leo always knew what was going on (except, perhaps, at odd moments on the golf course), whether the club owners' plans were sound and why not . . . The last time we saw him, Bondy was tearing apart some of Jack Zeller's anti-farm proposals and threatening: "I may present a plan of my own. If I do, it will be one that will work."

Speed and Deception

When Clark Shaughnessy first introduced the modernized "T" formation to West Coast football, he relates, the Southern California coaching staff assigned two scouts to cover his Stanford team . . . When they reported coach Jeff Cravath of U. S. C. asked: "What does that man in motion do?" . . "Why, coach," replied one puzzled scout, "he does everything but run up in the press stand and serve coffee and doughnuts to the scouts."

Wedemeyer Takes Post Relinquished By Gen. Stilwell

Chungking, Oct. 31 (AP)—Maj.-Gen. Albert Wedemeyer arrived in Chungking today to assume the post of commander of American forces in China, recently relinquished by Gen. Stilwell on his recall to Washington.

Wedemeyer was greeted at the airport by Gen. Ho Ying-Chin, Chinese Minister of War; T. V. Soong, Foreign Minister; Maj.-Gen. Patrick Hurley, President Roosevelt's personal representative in Chungking; Lt.-Gen. Carton De Wiart, Prime Minister Churchill's representative; and Maj.-Gen. Thomas G. Heard, who was chief of staff in the former China-Burma-India command.

The new commander told correspondents: "This (job) only came to me on Wednesday....I don't know what it's all about."

Cologne, Berlin Heavily Bombed

London, Oct. 31 —(CP)— More than 1,000 British and Canadian planes dropped 4,000 tons of bombs last night on Cologne, "the most heavily bombed of German cities," and Mosquitos made two raids on Berlin.

A Canadian communique said a sizeable force of R.C.A.F. Halifaxes and Lancasters participated in the sixth blasting of Cologne since Saturday. Airfields over a wide area of Germany also were attacked.

From all operations last night only two R.A.F. bombers are missing, the Air Ministry said, while all Canadian bombers returned from the massive Cologne operation.

The Canadian communique for the first time designated the big Rhineland city, now in the direct path of the U. S. 1st Army, as the most heavily bombed city of the Reich. Although it did not go into damage details, the use of this superlative recalled eye-witness descriptions of flattened Hamburg and the terrific damage done to other Allied targets.

An earlier R.A.F. communique said 1,000 heavy bombers had hit Cologne. The Canadian statement said that although clouds obscured part of the target huge fires and much smoke rose from the city after the attack.

O.H.A. Executive To Meet Sunday

Russia Not to Attend Aviation Conference

Washington, Oct. 31 — (AP) — Russia hung a question mark over her western European diplomacy today just as affairs in the Balkans slid into a groove of collaboration oiled by Marshal Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill.

The newest upset in Washington, and probably London, calculations come over plans for the International Aviation Conference opening in Chicago Wednesday.

Moscow announced last night that Russia would not attend because "countries like Switzerland, Portugal and Spain, which for many years have conducted a pro-Fascist policy hostile to the Soviet Union—have also been invited."

It was learned here the declaration would not modify plans for the conference. American officials have talked with Soviet aviation experts and know their views and intend to keep them in mind as the conference develops.

Six Russian aviation officials who passed through Winnipeg during the week-end declined to disclose their destination. When the Russians reached Edmonton by plane on Oct. 25 it was understood they were en route to Chicago for the conference.

Taylor was the principal threat for Trenton yesterday.

Ring Ramblings:

It was just 22 years ago tonight that Jack Britton lost his welterweight boxing crown to Mickey Walker. At the time Britton was 40 years of age, the oldest man ever to hold a world boxing crown and even then he averted a knockout only by a masterful defence.

While on the subject of boxing Promoter Bill Crawford has a ring natural in Friday night's main bout between Hub Smith, welterweight champion of the No. 1 Command of the R.C.A.F. and "Jibber" Ellis, the pride of Toronto Military Army boxing. This bout will be over the four round route, as will the semi-final between Rance Bush and Crabby Crandell. Incidentally the undefeated Bush is giving away 8 pounds to move up and meet the shifty, two-fisted Crandall.

Other ring features at the Hume Arena this week include professional wrestling tonight headed by a go between Dr. Len Hall, that Hollywood ring villain, and Pierre DeGlane, the popular Montreal battler. DeGlane has had covetous eyes on Billie Watson's British Empire title and is eligible for a shot at the Empire crown being a French-Canadian by birth. There are two strong prelims, on tonight's card also.

Individual home-run hitting in the American League the past season reached its lowest ebb since the Ruthian era began in 1919, Nick Etten of the Yankees winning the crown for 1944 with only 22 round-trippers. That figure would have been tops previous to 1919, but for the past 25 seasons the lowest has been 29, with which the Bambino started his long reign.

There has been a steady decline in A. L. four-sackers since Hank Greenberg's 58 in 1938, which tied Jimmie Foxx' total in 1932, the best previous record, outside of Ruth's performances. Foxx won the home run championship in 1939 with only 35, Greenberg jumped to 41 in 1940 and then there was a steady descent, 37 by Ted Williams in 1941, 36 by Williams in 1942 and 34 in 1943 by Rudy York.

Only once since 1930 had the National League leader topped the pace-setter in the American — in 1940, when Johnny Mize led Greenberg, 43 to 41—until this year. Bill Nicholson of the Cubs paced both leagues for 1944, with 33; Mel Ott was ahead of Etten with 26, and Ron Northey tied the Yankee first baseman, with 22. The National had five batters hitting 20 or more round-trippers this season against only two for the American.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 52e

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Logic oozes out of the pores of a good bidding system. Not only does each bid have its purpose. But comparative aims of all related subjects are dictated by common sense, utility, and prudence.

There are four general groups of opening bids; one, two, three, four. Each shows a minimum set of values. The values shown in any one of them have some relation to the items in each of the others.

If you did not give it much thought, you might suppose that the higher the bid, the stronger the hand it shows. But a good system does not work that way. It would be too inefficient.

Partners want to know about (1) tricks, (2) high cards, (3) sure tricks, (4) suits, (5) game, (6) slam. The higher the number in the opening bid, the less information it needs from partner.

A one-bid asks about all items. A two-bid shows much in items one and five; asks about the others. A three-bid is rich in items one and four; asks about the others.

When speaking of a three-bid, we mean an opening of three in a major suit or four in a minor. Therefore, when speaking of a four-bid, we mean four in a major or five in a minor.

An opening four-bid (in a major) shows a gob of item four and nothing else. It differs from other bids in that it virtually begs partner not to say anything.

Not only that. It is an immediate-game-bid. Yet it admits that it has no chance to make a game by itself. In fact, it cries out in accents loud and clear that it is not able to make a game.

Worry over this hand:

♥A Q J 10 9 4 3 2
♦J 7 3
♣Q

This hand is not a one-bid or two-bid or three-bid. If you insist on bidding it, open with a bid of four hearts.

Then make a wish.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop before supper and I started to feel half tired and 3 quarters hungry, saying, G, pop, how is it your walking so long today?

Because certain short sighted people persist in mistaking the flowingly graceful line of my figure for an expanding waistline, and I've been told that brisk walking is the best reducing exercise, pop said, and I said, Do you mean people think you're getting fat, pop?

Well, perhaps, although that seems vulgarly realistic translation, pop said, and I said, But jiminy, pop, if you dont believe they're right, what's a use of bothering with all this exercise?

That's a very good question, and the best answer I can think of is that ignorance is often as potent a force as nollege, pop said.

And we kept on going and pretty soon I said, Well G, you dont need to worry. Look at that man. Compared to him your stummick goes in instead of out, I said.

Meaning some man with thin legs and a round middle, and pop said, Thanks for the flattering comparison.

And here comes another one, pop, I said. G, if you looked like that, then people might have something to talk about, I said.

Meaning a man looking as if he was blown up on purpose, he was so fat, and pop said, Listen, young man, there's no particular point in telling a rose that it's not a cabbage, so suppose you call a halt to comparisons of any discription.

Which I did, not even mentioning 3 more different shape fat men that went passed, and pop looked at some weight lifting machines in the window of Sterns Sporting Goods without actually going in to buy one or even ask how much they cost.

Vancouver, Nov. 1— (CP)— Maj.-Gen. Victor W. Odlum, Canadian Ambassador to China, said in a statement yesterday that the recall of Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, is a "first-class fighting soldier but he hasn't the capacity to get along with men."

Says Gen. Stilwell's Removal Result of Strategy, Diplomacy As Could Arise Only in Orient

By PRESTON GROVER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New Delhi, Nov. 1 —(AP)— The removal of Gen. Stilwell as commander in the China - India - Burma theatre, it can be reported today, resulted from a combination of strategy and diplomacy such as could arise only in the Orient.

It is possible only today to get further details passed through censorship.

The abrupt new shaping of the whole American position in this part of the war front began with the arrival in Chungking two months ago of Maj.-Gen. Patrick Hurley and Donald M. Nelson, both carrying vast powers designed to get from China some solid commitments for increased co-operation with America in the war against Japan.

The Associated Press is informed that the commitments were given virtually under threat of American withdrawal of her support of Chiang's government.

U. S. Attitude Reported Softened.

In turn, the Associated Press was informed under circumstances leaving no doubt as to the report's accuracy, a last-minute softening in the American attitude resulted in an agreement for the withdrawal of Gen. Stilwell as supreme commander in the C.B.I. theatre as a face-saving and pacifying gesture demanded by the Chinese President.

As related to the Associated Press Gen. Hurley and Mr. Nelson explained to Gen. Chiang that there was much disappointment over the failure of the central government to come to an agreement with the Communists in the north so that both they and the central government troops now blockading them could be brought against the Japanese in China.

Among the requests were:

1. That Chiang should reorganize his cabinet and eliminate reactionary obstructionists and anti-foreign members.

2. That an American general be placed in command of Chinese operations not only in Burma but elsewhere in major operations against the Japanese.

During early conversations, it evidently was assumed on both sides that Gen. Stilwell was to be an American commander.

Gen. Stilwell was no party to the negotiations although he evidently was kept informed on the major steps.

Some Stormy Scenes Reported.

The terms were put to Gen. Chiang forcefully, in some instances backed by specific messages from President Roosevelt. Some stormy scenes followed. Chiang, as was expected, refused to dissolve or reorganize his cabinet, although he accepted other conditions with tacit admission that some of his commanders on the major fighting fronts in central China were not so hot.

Then came an odd change in the proceedings.

Gen. Chiang himself became stubborn and it was discovered that H. H. Kung, his finance minister, visiting in the United States, was telegraphing him that President Roosevelt was not supporting the stern position taken by his two representatives in Chungking.

Usually well informed sources, whose reports the Associated Press believes reliable, stated that Kung telegraphed Gen. Chiang that Harry Hopkins had informed him that there was no cause for alarm in the American attitude and that if Gen. Chiang would hold out determinedly, he would win all points.

Learning of these reports, the American negotiators evidently obtained a flat statement from the President in a message that he was not fooling and backed the negotiators at the point fully.

Says Americans Had Power To Withdraw Supplies.

As their part in the bargaining, the Americans had the power to withhold lease-lend supplies and to withdraw Maj.-Gen. Claire L. Chennault and his U. S. 14th Air Force from China.

Finally, an agreement was reached which included among other things that an American would be given command of Chinese field forces. It was a large pill to swallow, but in the interests of harmony all around, Gen. Chiang evidently agreed at one stage to take it and keep the war going at top speed.

Then a reaction set in. To the amazement of all the negotiators, Gen. Chiang declared Gen. Stilwell must go. He cited charges. For security reasons the nature of the charges cannot be disclosed.

Chiang Called Adamant.

The Chinese President was adamant and the United States representatives were faced with capitulation on this point or a break in the policy of supporting Gen. Chiang's government. A few days ago, Gen. Stilwell was relieved of his command and left for the United States. But Gen. Chiang was specifically informed the United States did not accept his charges against Gen. Stilwell.

In China, Gen. Chiang evidently gained great "face" by the manoeuvre which is looked upon in many Chinese and American quarters as capitulation.

Generally it is recognized that much time has been lost through the disagreements and that the American hope of close and harmonious relationship with the Chinese central government has been greatly shaken.

CHAPTER TWELVE

There was a little breeze and at first, in spite of the sun, it was cool as the water dried on him, but when he laid down on his stomach again it was warm and the breeze was a soft caressing thing over his legs, up his back. It went over him in little pulsing waves and the sun was warm. He lay like that for a while and then he got drowsy as he turned on his back and half shut his eyes against the sun's glare in the deeply blue sky. The diving platform on the raft was etched clearly and whitely against the deep blue and a long white cloud ran straight and thin across the sky. It was pure white and straight with little curled swirls along its edges from the wind up there, and then there was one more blob of cloud like a rectangle with the edges running in little streams into the blue like thin white paint on wet blue paint, all mixed and runny and clean.

After a while Verna, whose family had a place at the lake too, swam out to the raft and he watched her in the clear water, her long legs beating rhythmically, her arms cleaving into the water with it rippling over them and her head in a white swimming cap turning every time her left arm came up and her mouth opening to breathe. She climbed onto the raft and shook herself over his dry back and he grabbed her ankle and she put her other foot, cold and wet, right in the middle of his back. Then, satisfied, she lay down beside him. Later the rest came down, Punchy and Margaret, Gus and a couple of others and there was a lot of horseplay, everybody getting thrown into the water eventually. They finally broke off for lunch.

After lunch they lay on the raft again and let the sun dry the sparkling drops of water off them and wondered whether to play tennis or not. After a while the rest left for the courts and Jimmy and Verna were left alone. They dove in and swam some more and then swam over to the wharf. It was cool there when they came out of the water but after that the sun felt good and warm and the sun itself was only about one quarter the way down the Western sky and there was not a cloud in the sky. The sky was blue—deeper blue in the East than in the west where the sun gave it a hazy white sheen. They lay on the wharf and smoked cigarettes and talked and the smoke was nice and sharp in their nostrils after the water. The sun shone on the water making one corner a dazzling silver pool and extending right down in line to them a sparkling shimmery chain that shifted around on the crests of the ripples, narrowing right up them where it was about a foot wide.

She turned on her back and he looked at the way the sun shone on the water right up to them for a while, and then he looked at her—her red hair had little droplets of water around her forehead where her cap had ended and he brushed his finger through them and they sprinkled into tinier droplets. She opened her eyes and looked at him and smiled a little. He leaned over her face and kissed her hair and her forehead and then her lips. Her lips were cool and moist. Then they went in to supper.

His father and mother were on the verandah after supper and he went out and slouched into a wicker chair, relaxed, and smoked, looking at the lake while Mr. Riley read his paper and Mrs. Riley fixed Elaines hair. Elaine stood at her mother's knee and said, "Mother?"

"Yes".

"Gussy said he's going in the Airforce".

"He did? When? ", Mrs. Riley continued to fix her hair but Elaine's next words thoroughly disconcerted her.

"Yesterday". Elaine said, and Jimmy winced. He had wanted to break the news himself to his father and mother, alone. Now Mrs. Riley was looking at him and he knew she grasped the full significance. She continued fixing Elaine's hair. Elaine stood at her Elaine left.

He could hear his father clearing his throat and he knew it was coming all right and his mother was just staring at him. This, he suddenly realized, was going to be about the hardest part of all. Mr. Riley spoke first.

"Er, James — are you and Punchy included. . . ." He let it trail off and looked at Jimmy and Jimmy stared at his shoes and said, "Yes sir". He paused uncomfortably then, but knew at the same time it was certainly nothing to be ashamed of, blurted out. "There was nothing else to do, dad. Everybody's going, and, well, I just had to that's all. And it's the best Service".

He looked up at his father then, who stared out at the Lake, puffing his pipe.

"I'm not criticizing, Jim. It's all right. In fact it's the only thing to do, seeing how matters stand. It's just sudden. . . ."

"I know, dad", Jimmy interrupted. "I meant to tell you first—like I promised—but Elaine sort of scooped it". He chuckled then and his father grinned too; but Mrs. Riley got up, her hands clasped together and went inside. He rose too and his father stayed him with his hand on his arm.

"Don't get me wrong, son", he said then, looking into Jimmy's eyes. "I didn't mean any criticism. You're doing the right thing—and good luck". They shook hands and Jimmy said, "Thanks, dad—I guess I'd better go in and see Mother". His father nodded briefly, approvingly.

Mrs. Riley was tidying up the living room, making herself busy and he realized it was hard for her as it was for him. He stood awkwardly beside her.

"Gosh, mother", he said finally, a trifle uneasily. "I hope you're not going to cry or anything."

She looked at him then and smiled—even though he could see tears glinting on her eyelashes.

"Of course not, James", she said and she squeezed his hand. "You're the one that's got the struggle ahead—and good luck, son". He grinned at her then and she smiled and leaned her head against his chest and he could feel her trembling slightly. He was never so aware of a mother's love as he was then and he knew it was one more thing he was leaving behind and he kissed her on the forehead and on the lips. She smiled again and then went out to his father and Jimmy walked over to the Club slowly, along the woodland path and he thought.

That Summer it was Green Eyes and Tangerine and Moonlight Serenade and the Ink Spots. It was Tuxedo Junction and Stardust and Temptation on the balcony of the country club with Verna and Verna at night with the moon and waiting for the call from the Airforce. It was Marie Helena and Only Forever and In the Mood and walking down the road after pitch dark, with his arm around her waist and thinking it won't be long now and saying, Verna, I love you. She put her arms around his neck and kissed him hard but there was something missing. He was thinking of Margaret back there with Punchy for some reason; and he suddenly felt warm and friendly towards Margaret and Punchy and good old Gus and with Verna he felt like an outsider somehow. But he forgot that soon. The three letters came together and they piled into Gus' Mercury again and drove down to town, fast. The letters said 'immediately' but they had to slow down to seventy on the curves.

In the Recruiting Centre they registered abd were interviewed and then took a Medical at the Receiving Depot. They coughed and bent over and took deep breaths and the stethescope was cold on their skin. He blew into a tube of mercury till he thought his head or the tube would burst and the Doc laughed and said fifty-two seconds. Not bad. There was attestation and Swearing in and fingerprinting and an 'M' Test and he was AC2 James Riley just like that, an Acey-Deucey, earning a buck thirty a day at Manning Depot at St. Hubert. They threw tunic and trousers, boots and hat, badges, socks, coat and haversack at him and he drilled. But Gus wasn't with Punchy and Jimmy any more. One of Gus' eyes wasn't so hot. There were a lot of physical rejects and he realized suddenly how high the standards were as he drilled and did PT for a month. The PT wasn't too bad but he thought he had been in condition before he started the drill. He wasn't. But he was when it was over and then it was Intermediate Training School at Victoriaville. They got up at six-thirty instead of six and he had his props up. Leading Aircraftsman at a buck fifty plus seventy-five cents flying pay. Flying, hell.

"What do you do" they'd say.

"Oh I ferry a Link back and forth between stations". It always got a laugh. "So you're going to be a pilot, eh?" "His mommy's little boy got his airplane yet?" Laughter.

At Victoriaville it was Math and armament and hygiene and Airforce Law, Aircraft Rec and the Link Office. He sat, nervous as a cat and did everything he was told. They were washing them out right and left on the Link and he did not want to be a Wag or an Observer. There wasn't anything wrong with them but he wanted to be a pilot. Everything was a parade Inoculation Parade, Canteen Parade, Sick Parade, Kitchen Parade. Guard Duty. There was the Decompression Chamber too and he knew he was safe for a while but the class wasn't as big as when it started. But Punchy was still there. He didn't think of Verna or Margaret. He read Verna's letters when he had a minute and he did not like them. They weren't true. Dear Jimmy. Everybody's gone and it certainly is quiet. Haven't been out since Tuesday. Certainly miss the grand times we used to have. What about me, he thought, and he smiled. What about me? Do you miss me? "Dear Jimmy, we went up to the Room, Spike and I, but it's certainly different in the Summer. Is it ever quiet at home. Everybody's going. Wish you were here. We could have some grand times now that the Room's open all the time. I wish all you boys didn't have to go. Darn the Government anyway". He laughed when he read that. But he didn't like the letters and he found himself remembering Margaret a lot. It was funny.

It was Elementary Flying Training School St. Eugene, and he had flying suit, and boots, gauntlets, goggles, helmet; it was a half a day lecture, half flying. He could not concentrate on the lectures just thinking of the flying. He went up with his instructor for the first time in a Fleet. It was a little T model of a plane with a small engine up front but it climbed steeply away from the field and he wondered how it did it. He just looked. It was just about what he'd imagined. The field dropped away and got smaller and they saw just the roofs of the buildings and the tops of trees and the roads that ran along below them. It wasn't especially remarkable but he was flying. It was the first big step. He could not get enough of it after that. He would sit in at the lectures and look at the sun beaming down outside the lecture hall and try to concentrate on Theory and Aircraft Rec and Navigation and think of the Fleets outside, warming up, their smallness sufficient to carry him aloft into the freeness of the air, unshackled by any dimension, perfectly free to roll ,turn, bank, fall off, pull out. Elementary Flying lasted for forty-eight days. After nine hours of dual control, just when he was beginning to think it would never end, was the most boring job there could be, the endless round of take offs, circuits, landings, over and over till his confidence was built up, till he thought personally he was getting stale, they dropped down to the tarmac suddenly and the instructor, an FO, who tried hard not to be bored and who was in fact the model of patience, who talked slowly and quietly no matter what happened, climbed out and turned to Jimmy.

"It's all yours, fella", he said. "Take it up. Jimmy gulped. "You mean. . .solo".

"That's it", the Instructor was smiling and he said. "Yes sir". Then he was alone. And sweating suddenly, sort of scared but not exactly afraid. He knew what to do. As long as nothing went wrong. There weren't any practice jumps. Instead there was just a sign up in the Locker room, "It don't mean a thing if you don't pull that Ring". He could feel the parachute underneath him, half-consciously, but he concentrated on the throttle, gave it half a stick and started to roll across the ground. It was a little bumpy but after a while he saw a clear run and gave it the full stick and sped down the field. He stared straight ahead and felt the little Fleet, tough and wiry, and built for punishment trying to get off with its tail up and finally he pulled back on the stick. He was up, alone, and it was great. He circled the field and prepared to land. But when he got over the hangars he wondered suddenly if he was too high and then if he was too low or too fast and he touched the throttle nervously a bit, but it was too late. He made a perfect three point about six feet off the ground and pancaked the rest, bounced once, and ran it home. It was a landing and the instructor smiled and told him to do it again. It was easier then. And he only dropped four feet. He was very glad the Fleets had tough undercarriages. He made the entries automatically and nervously in his Logbook and ran over to the Hut. He had soloed.

You get twenty hours solo in Elementary Flying, then an instructor check, and then go on for fifty hours. Some of them washed out. Punchy had some trouble and smashed one undercarriage but managed to make it in the end. The class was a little bit smaller when they left EFTS and got fourteen days' leave before Service Flying. He hardly noticed the leave it was so fast and besides he was looking forward to the Harvards. They were hot ships, compared to the Fleets, retractable landing gear, variable pitch props, and everything the same, instrument panel, throttle, as the fighters on active service. He and Punchy had been picked along with the majority of the class for single engine training. Why, they weren't quite sure. They discussed it, to the exclusion of the girls, at the Manoir when they journeyed up for the weekend. Jimmy didn't care to think much about Verna or Margaret or any girl right now. He had a new love for the time being and he found he'd rather not give ear to the feeling that he should be getting back to Margaret, to certain misgivings that had crept in with the superficiality of Verna's letters to a certain uneasiness every time he thought about girls in general and just what their place was in wartime. And he thought more and more about Margaret when he did think of girls at all. But it was easier to forget all that and 'talk shop' that Leave. He hated to think he was wrong about Verna. She sure was beautiful. Yet it was all building up. He didn't like remembering Verna when they were up North that leave. She had turned to him, while the rest of the gang around were talking of their jobs and saying, "Gosh, Jimmy, all they do is talk about the war. What's wrong with everybody". She had laughed and Jimmy thought the laughter too shrill somehow. Somehow it all seemed wrong but he couldn't put his finger on the trouble.

When he looked across the table at Margaret who was engrossed in following the motions of Punchy's hands as he banked and rolled and turned an imaginary Tiger Moth through the air as only that light little biplane could be rolled, he thought Verna seemed shallow all of a sudden. He liked what he saw the other doing, talking about their training, what they were doing; they wanted to show they were doing something, all of them, and it wasn't just because the girls were present. There was a feeling here and he felt quite sure it was morale or esprit de corps. Whatever it was it made him feel good. He listened.

"Hell, no, one twenty five with Bolies. With Cheetah engines they can do one forty maybe, one fifty with a gale behind. Did three hundred in a dive once though".

"Boy, I'll bet it fell apart in the pullout".

"Well, the wings were flapping like a seagull. . .Say did you hear about Gus?"

"No, what?" chorus.

"Grounded again. Low flying. That guy has got more troubles than a barrel of monkeys. This time he was reported dive-bombing people on Lake Memphramagog with apples".

"Well, that's Gus. What a guy".

8th Army Troops Improve Position

Rome, Nov. 1 —(AP)— British 8th Army troops on the Adriatic front have improved their beachhead across the Ronco River, Allied Headquarters reported today.

Enemy troops have been cleared from the town of Meldola on the west bank of the Ronco, the communique said.

German troops facing the Allied 5th Army on the central sector south of Bologna made a series of heavy counter-attacks yesterday in an effort to wipe out several Allied salients. American forces, sometimes fighting hand-to-hand, hurled them all back.

Only patrolling and artillery duels were carried out elsewhere.

Medium bombers attacked bridges in the Po Valley and lighter craft shot up enemy concentrations and communications. A small force of heavy bombers attacked targets in Yugoslavia.

Along the Adriatic Coast 8th Army patrols worked their way forward toward Ravenna, driving Nazis from the outpost positions north of the Bevano River.

South of Bologna the most determined enemy counter-attack was launched against Americans holding a 2,000-foot hill about 5½ miles southwest of Castel the hill four times laying down murderous patterns of mortar and shell fire. It was a costly fight for both sides.

Canadian issues were firm to higher. Lake Shore gained 3-8, Dome 1-2 and C.P.R. 1-4.

Ahead near the fourth hour although a little under the highs were Grumman, United Aircraft, Bell Aircraft, Lockheed, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Western Union "A" and Anaconda.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 1 —(CP)— Due to the overcrowded condition of the local livestock market only steers and heifers of good quality are now saleable in cattle trade, the management announced today. Sales of other grades cannot be guaranteed. The management also announced no lambs are wanted for the balance of this week and only a limited supply next week. When the market opened this morning 3,300 head of cattle were on hand unsold from yesterday and this was increased by fresh receipts of 700 head. In addition to the cattle 2,500 lambs were unsold from Tuesday.

Cattle trade was very dull up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Weighty steers were $11-$12, butcher steers $8-$10.50, a few cows $7-$8.75, canners and cutters $5-$6.50, bulls $5.50-$7.50.

Calves were slow and steady at $14-$15 for choice with other grades downward to $7.

Lamb trade was very dull with a few good ewes and wethers $13 delivered by rail and with others $6-$12.

Sheep were weak at $1.50-$4.

Hogs were steady at Grade A dressed $17.65-$17.75.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 700, calves 200, hogs 500, sheep and lambs 800.

Unsold from yesterday were 3,300 head of cattle and 2,500 sheep and lambs.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Nov. 1 —(CP)— The Livestock Exchange today announced it had advised all similar bodies across Canada that no shipments of cattle will be accepted at Montreal until further notice. The Exchange took action following a series of hold-overs on the local markets. On Tuesday there was a carry over of 2,000 head of cattle with buyers inactive.

At a meeting of packer representatives of the Livestock Exchange on Tuesday it was also agreed to instruct truckers that cattle would not be accepted. Commission men and packer buyers decided to limit their receipts of butcher cattle to 25 per cent of this week's arrivals and hold back all canners and cutters, bulls, light steers and heifers.

Livestock Exchange officials explained that recent shipments of poorer classes of cattle have been heavy and have over-taxed the facilities of the Montreal abattoirs.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Nov. 1 (CP)—Prices were steady today on the livestock markets. Receipts: Cattle, 65; calves, 35; sheep, 10; hogs, 130.

There was a hold-over of 2,000 cattle and buying was inactive. The hold-overs in the calf class numbered 800. Veals steady at 12.50-14. Common lights and grass calves were hard to move.

Good ewes and wethers 11.50. Bucks $10.50. Culls 6-8. Sheep 1.50-4.50. Hogs unchanged at 17.65 for Grade "A". Sows were 12.50-12.75 dressed.

HOGS

Toronto, Nov 1 (CP)—Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today. Dressedweight, Grade A delivered, Barrie and Hull $17.40; Hamilton $17.50; Stratford, to farmers $17.40, to truckers $17.55.

Study Suggestion Gradual Demobilization Of Home Defence Army

Ottawa, Nov. 1 —(CP)— Suggestion that the home defence army be gradually demobilized, ending the expense of its maintenance now that the danger of Canada being invaded has passed, has been examined by the federal cabinet at recent meetings, it was learned today.

The home defence army, composed of men called for compulsory military training who did not volunteer for overseas service, was kept under arms mainly because of the danger of Japanese attack from the west, one authority said.

Events of recent days with United States naval victories, have made such an attack more than ever unlikely and there have been proposals that instead of remaining in uniform the home defence soldiers might well be returned to agriculture and other essential industry where they would be available on call if an emergency developed.

Officers said that considerable numbers of home defence troops already have been granted leave for farming and other operations. The proposed demobilization could be carried out by a further extensions of leave privileges and granting them to a larger number.

Mean Temperature In October Found Slightly Higher

Substantiating frequent comments heard on the street regarding the comparative pleasantness of October weather this autumn, the average temperature of the past month was just a trifle warmer than the same period in 1943, it was reported today by officials at the Belleville Water Purification plant. Also there was considerably less rainfall making for more days on which the sun shone brightly.

Maximum temperature for the month, however, was just slightly under that of one year ago with the official thermometer giving a reading of 71.5 degrees as compared with 73.5 one year ago. Minimum reading last month was 24.8 degrees compared with 27 degrees one year ago.

Only just about one half the rainfall was received this year with 2.25 inches of rain and one half inch of snow falling. Last year during October there was 4.49 inches of rain, with precipitation on 15 days as compared with the 12 days upon which rain fell last month.

Mysterious German Broadcast Urges German Army Revolt

Stockholm, Nov. 1 — (AP) — A mysterious German broadcast on an unusual wavelength last night urged the people of the Reich and the Germany army to revolt against Hitler.

The newspaper Dagens Nyheter, which monitored the broadcast, said the speaker called himself Col. Gen. Ludwig Von Beck and ridiculed Nazi reports he had committed suicide after the abortive attempt on Hitler's life July 20.

The speaker also declared that Dr. Karl Goerdeler, the former Mayor of Leipzig whom the Nazis reported they had executed, also was at liberty and the same was true of Lieut. Graf Von Der Schulenberg, who the Nazis announced they had caught and executed as the attempted assassin.

London, Nov. 1 — (CP-Reuter)— Yugoslav Partisans have cleared the whole of the western shore of the Bay of Kotor (Cattaro), main U-boat and naval base of the Austrian navy in the First Great War, said today's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters.

The Bay of Kotor is on the Adriatic, 37 miles southeast of Dubrovnik. The town of Kotor, on the eastern side of the bay, is strongly fortified.

The communique added that in Dalmatia offensive operations were in progress. Yugoslav units liberated a number of places and made contact with units advancing from Hercegovina towards Mostar, 63 miles east of Split.

GEN. M'NAUGHTON NAMED DEFENCE MINISTER
ALLIED FORCES SQUEEZING WALCHEREN PINCERS

Prime Minister Voices Confidence In Appointment

Col. Ralston's Resignation Is Accepted by Cabinet

Ottawa, Nov. 2 —(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King today announced the resignation of Defence Minister Ralston and the appointment of Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton as his successor.

Mr. King said Col. Ralston's resignation was tendered yesterday and accepted today at a special meeting of the cabinet. The ministers adjourned their meeting for a short period while Mr. King went to Government House where Gen. McNaughton was sworn in as defence minister.

From Government House the Prime Minister and his new Defence Minister went directly to the cabinet meeting which Mr. King had left hurriedly.

The meeting continued for a short period and then Mr. King and Gen. McNaughton held a press conference in the Prime Minister's office where formal announcement was made of the cabinet change.

Mr. King said he had no statement to make on the reason for Col. Ralston's resignation.

"Everything speaks for itself," Mr. King said.

Knows of No Other Resignations.

He said he had no knowledge of any other resignations forthcoming and could see no reason for calling parliament into a special session before next Jan. 31, the date on which parliament is scheduled to resume.

Mr. King opened his press conference by saying that what he had read in the press this morning was correct and that Col. Ralston had resigned.

The resignation had been made verbally at the cabinet council yesterday afternoon and was accepted this morning.

Confidence in McNaughton.

Speaking of the appointment of Gen. McNaughton, Mr. King said that the former Canadian army commander had the confidence of the men overseas and of their relatives and friends at home.

The Prime Minister said he considered the appointment the best that could be made.

Col. Ralston obviously would not have resigned had he not felt that he should retain a position he had taken "right along," said Mr. King without elaboration.

Highest Regard for Col. Ralston

He said it was not for him to make any statement except to state that all who knew Col. Ralston knew him as a man of the highest integrity. Personally, he could say that he held Col. Ralston in the highest affectionate regard and he regretted that the Defence Minister had found it necessary to resign.

Mr. King said he was grateful that Gen. McNaughton had accepted the ministerial post at a time when all must consider not their personal feelings but their obligation to the state, to the United Nations and to the world. They must seek every way of furthering the war effort, and keep it in the high place it had in the world today.

After his brief statement, Mr. King introduced Gen. McNaughton to the reporters and then faced a series of questions.

He said he had not knowledge of other ministers resigning from the cabinet.

(It was understood that Navy Minister Macdonald had supported Col. Ralston in his proposals for conscription for overseas, and there was speculation he also might resign).

Other Matters Not Discussed

Mr. King said he did not wish to discuss matters other than those of the moment.

"Anything which has appeared in the press thus far was unauthorized," said the Prime Minister, evidently referring to newspaper items on the division of opinion within the cabinet.

"I hope the public realizes that no official statement has come from the government. Policies will be announced as is thought advisable."

He was asked if it was probable that parliament would be called before Jan. 31, the date of resumption decided at the last session.

"I can see no necessity for calling parliament before that date," he replied.

Man Who Built Canadian Army Enters Cabinet

Ottawa, Nov. 2 —(CP)— The man who built the Canadian army and left it suddenly on the eve of its greatest test, Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, 57, came back into the public eye today as successor to Defence Minister Ralston with whom disagreement is believed to have led to retirement as army commander overseas.

He came back as suddenly and unexpectedly as he left the army and under circumstances as enigmatic.

Col. Ralston, just back from a battlefield tour, is believed to have quit on grounds the home defence draftees should be pressed into active service overseas. Gen. McNaughton's view on this question has not yet been given and the cabinet is understood to be honor-bound to silence until an official announcement comes from Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Address at Queen's University.

However, interest and conjecture centred on the General's Oct. 21st speech to a Queen's University convocation at Kingston, Ont., in which he said compulsion should hold no place in Canadian policy.

He told the students they were the future leaders and he asked them that in finding solutions to national problems they listen to all the arguments and seize on those features which commend themselves to general assent. Prompt action should then be taken to give those features full effect and on other points they could "agree to disagree."

Principle of Action.

"When you come, as you will, to places of authority and influence, and you face the acute issues which may divide our country part from part, may I commend this principle of action to your best thought and interest—compulsion is ruled out; we proceed by agreement, or for a time we rest content to not proceed at all."

In the same speech he paid tribute to Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, his successor as overseas commander, and said he had complete confidence in the Army leader and trusted him "implicitly."

His entry into the cabinet came at the height of a controversy over the adequacy and quality of reinforcements—all volunteers. It also came on the heels of an announcement that August Army casualties—numbering 10,257—were by far the highest monthly total for the war.

How much the known differences between Col. Ralston and Gen. McNaughton entered into the General's decision to join the cabinet is not known and might not be made clear even when both have made statements.

Ralston Silent.

Except for a formal official exchange, Col. Ralston has been silent on the background of an apparent disagreement that led to the General leaving his command. All that Gen. McNaughton has said since he came home ill a year ago is that he had left the documents in the hands of government historians.

Conjecture of the nearness of a general election was heightened by the cabinet change. It was believed that Mr. King had seriously considered going to the country almost immediately.

The surprising entry into the picture of Gen. McNaughton, however, was interpreted as probably meaning delay in election with the government standing pat on its draftee policy and leaving to the General the problem of fitting the much-criticized manpower policy in the military picture.

ENTIRE CANADIAN BOMBER GROUP HITS OBERHAUSEN

Large Fleets Allied Planes Heading for Germany Go Upon New Assaults

London, Nov. 2 (CP) — An all-Canadian force of Halifax and Lancaster bombers struck heavily last night at Oberhausen, big enemy base city in the industrialized Ruhr, and large fleets of Allied planes headed toward Germany today, apparently bent on new assaults.

The Canadian bomber group sent out the entire force of the four-engined bombers which hammered at Oberhausen.

Six Canadian bombers were missing from the attack but at least three enemy fighters were claimed destroyed, said an RCAF communique.

Altogether, including these losses, seven bombers and two fighters were missing from operations late yesterday and last night, five German planes were destroyed.

RAF Mosquitos kept up the assault on battered Cologne during the night and other Mosquito forces went for Berlin, the fifth raid on the German capital in six nights.

Transport Attacked

RAF Mosquitos also attacked transport in Germany and Holland destroying or damaging 46 trains, ten barges and four small ships, and RCAF Spitfires destroyed a number of enemy vehicles in Holland.

Another communique said a JU88 was destroyed by RCAF Mosquitos during intruder patrols during the night. One Mosquito was missing.

American fighter-bombers scored seven hits yesterday on a dam holding a nine square-mile lake 15 miles southeast of Dieuze and flattened 12 factory buildings near the frontier town of Sargemund. Two German aircraft were destroyed on the ground near Gotha. Two American fighters were missing.

Oberhausen was the chief night target.

A Traffic Centre

An industrial city of nearly 200,000 population 35 miles north of Cologne, Oberhausen has so far escaped with a minimum of heavy raids of the type that have wrecked large sections of Essen, Duisburg, Dusseldorf and other cities in the Ruhr.

U.S. Election Campaign Enters Stretch Drive

By R. J. ANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

New York, Nov. 2 (CP)—The tempestuous United States presidential election campaign, having in two months run the gamut of allegations from those concerning Fala, President Roosevelt's pet scottie, to old-fashioned, always-reliable bribery, may be said to be entering the stretch drive today with both candidates running neck and neck.

The President tonight begins his final drive for a fourth term with a 15-minute broadcast talk from the White House. The subject has not been announced. Another address Saturday night in Boston and several informal appearances round out Mr. Roosevelt's pre-election political calendar.

Somewhere in the heat of the campaign the issues—among them charges of bureaucracy, taxation, labor relations and post-war problems—have been lost sight of. Electioneers for both sides in recent weeks have tended to emphasize personalities and to make startling charges of alleged political misbehavior.

Offers Party For Sale Claim.

The Republican presidential candidate, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, took the campaign spotlight last night with a speech before a crowd of 13,500 in the arena in Boston. He asserted Mr. Roosevelt had offered the Democratic party for sale "to the highest bidder" and that the forces of Communism are taking it over—"the political action committee of Sidney Hillman and the Communists of Earl Browder."

British Forces Enter Salonika

Rome, Nov. 2 — (AP). — British forces have entered the Greek seaport city of Salonika, where they were received enthusiastically by the populace, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Germans announced yesterday they had evacuated the city, Greece's second largest and the principal seaport on the Balkan peninsula. It is approximately 190 miles northwest of Athens.

Previous advices said the Nazis engaged in considerable demolition before withdrawing from the city, pre-war population of which was 240,000.

Allied patrols pushing north of Salonika ambushed withdrawing enemy columns, a communique said. Fire engines were among the vehicles used by the Germans in their northward flight.

HALF-WAY MARK PASSED BY LOAN ON NINTH DAY

Wednesday's Largest Day's Sale So Far, Namely $85,097,750

Ottawa, Nov. 2 —(CP)— Canada's Seventh Victory Loan has passed the half-way mark toward its minimum objective of $1,300,000,000, National Headquarters announced today. Purchases yesterday amounting to $85,284,250 sent the cumulative total to $661,097,750.

The day's total was the largest so far in the campaign. Individual purchases for the day amounted to $32,786,550 and brought the total so far subscribed by them to $295,938,100.

Average daily purchases have been running about $73,500,000 with individuals buying about $32,900,000 daily. While the total subscribed by individuals has still about $4,000,000 to go to reach the half-way point loan officials expressed confidence that they would pick up.

In Healthy Position.

"The loan at this time is in a healthy position but if are going to make it the largest in Canada's history there can be no coasting or let down during the final nine days of the campaign, a spokesman said.

Yesterday the number of applications went over the 1,000,000 mark to a total of 1,148,000. This compared with 1,108,000 subscriptions at the same stage of the Sixth Loan.

Latest reports from the Canadian National Railways in Montreal show that at the end of the Seventh day of the loan employees had subscribed $1,158,300 more than the amount they bought in the same period of the Sixth Loan. The seven-day total in the present instance is $6,502,750.

Up until noon yesterday the Canadian Pacific Railway workers had topped the $7,000,000 mark which was their total objective in the Sixth Loan. The latest actual figure was $7,004,450 on a quota of $8,500,000. A C. P. R. spokesman said that so far just over 58,000 employees had subscribed in the present canvass.

Two of the Armed Services—the Army and the Navy—already are over their objectives. The Army reported $21,233,350 for 101 per cent of a $21,000,000 quota while the Navy announced $4,806,300 for 100.1 per cent of its $4,800,000 objective. The R. C. A. F. total stood at $14,720,850, 98.1 per cent of a $15,000,000 quota.

Mussolini's Property Ordered Confiscated

Rome, Nov. 2 (AP)—Benito Mussolini's ptrsonal property and real estate were ordered confiscated by a Rome court today at the request of the customs superintendent's office.

Rome newspapers said the greater part of Mussolini's goods had been transferred previously to Brazil by planes of a TransAtlantic Airline, of which Vittorio Mussolini, son of the former dictator, was president.

Roosevelt Urges Freedom of Air

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Chicago, Nov. 2 —(CP)— With a call for "freedom of the air" from President Roosevelt before them, delegates of 51 countries today settled down to business at the international conference on civil aviation.

That some measure of freedom of the air, the right of aircraft from one country to fly over territory of other countries together with some measure of regulation of international air traffic will emerge in the form of an agreement from the conference is assumed.

The questions before the delegations as they met to hear proposals from various countries today was how much freedom and how much regulation.

"I hope you will not dally with the thought of creating great blocs of closed air, thereby tracing in the sky the conditions of future wars," President Roosevelt told the conference in a message read at the opening session yesterday by Adolf A. Berle, Jr., head of the United States delegation.

POLISH, INDIAN TROOPS EFFECT NEW BRIDGEHEAD

Originally Won by British Advancing West Across Ronco River

Rome, Nov. 2 — (AP) — Polish and Indian troops, advancing several miles northward from captured Predappio toward the Po Valley highway junction of Forli, have joined a bridgehead won by other British 8th Army forces advancing westward across the Ronco river north of Meldola, Allied headquarters announced today.

On the Adriatic sector, Canadian troops of the 8th Army reached the main Fosso-Ghiaia crossing on highway 16 less than five miles from Ravenna.

Meldola is seven miles south of Forli. Steady progress in expanding the bridgehead just to the north has been reported since it was won early in the week. Other 8th Army troops some days ago were reported only two miles from Forli along the Ronco immediately eastward.

South of Bologna on the central sector American troops of the Allied 5th Army cleared the Germans from the village of Casetta, the communique said.

Marked Decrease

German field guns continued to pour shells into Allied positions along the 5th Army front, but there was a marked decrease from the intense shelling of recent days.

In the west coast region a heavy German counter-attack in the vicinity of Catagnana forced a withdrawal of Brazilian troops to less exposed positions.

Casetta is less than two miles from the branch highway to Imola, and overlooks the important Rimini-Bologna highway 7 1/2 miles away. Imola is 20 miles northwest of Forli along the main highway.

At the Ronco river crossing in the Coccolia area halfway between Ravenna and the Rimini-Bologna highway, there were sharp clashes with the Germans.

Infantry and armor of the 8th Army secured a crossing in strength south of the highway, and fighting was reported at the northeast corner of the Forli airfield.

Port Hope, Nov. 2 —(CP)— J. Y. Ormsby, 80, formerly an insurance man in Toronto and a resident of Port Hope since 1936, died yesterday. Born in Ireland, he came to Canada as a young man, and was a veteran of the North West Rebellion, having served with Bolton's Mounted Infantry in 1885.

Besides his widow there survive a daughter, Mrs. Philip Ketchum of Port Hope, and a son, G. Y. Ormsby of Toronto.

SNOW FLURRIES, FROST IN NORTHERN MANITOBA

RUSSIAN ARMORED COLUMNS CLOSING IN ON BUDAPEST

Advancing Steadily Against Stiff But Gradually Weakening Resistance

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(A.P. War Correspondent)

Moscow, Nov. 2 (AP) — Russian armored columns were reported within 30 miles of Budapest today and advancing steadily against stiff but gradually weakening resistance on the rolling plain southeast of the city.

Soviet field dispatches said advance elements of the Red Army had penetrated beyond Lajosmizse, 33 miles from the Hungarian capital, following an advance in which more than 100 occupied places were captured.

Among the latter was the important railway centre of Kecskemet.

The Germans and their Hungarian allies were reported falling back upon defences which citizens of Budapest have been forced to dig outside the capital. Budapest was said to be in a turmoil.

The Russians were encountering hard going. Great numbers of anti-tank weapons have been concentrated by the enemy on the broad treeless plain over which the Red Army is advancing on a 50-mile front between the Danube and Tisza Rivers.

The pace was surprisingly swift at some points, however, as evidenced by the fact that 48 planes were reported abandoned by the enemy Tuesday in their hasty flight from the Izsak airfield, 17 miles southwest of Kecskemet.

24 Hours Street Fighting

Kecskemet, a city of 83,000 which fell after 24 hours of street-fighting, represented the biggest prize in the renewed offensive that has brought confusion to the enemy defences. It was the last important barrier before Budapest.

Russian forces in this sector increased the total of enemy prisoners taken in the drive to 5,518, having captured 1,500 Germans and Hungarians in the last 24 hours, the communique announced. The bulletin also said the enemy lost 2,000 dead in the Kecskemet battle, another 1,000 at the rail town of Tedel and 300 more at Kecel.

The Germans lost another 300 dead in an unsuccessful attack on Soviet positions south of Pulutak on the Narew River north of Warsaw in Poland, the announcement said in its only reference to fighting on that front.

Capture of Kerekegyhaza, ten miles west of Kecskemet on a spur railway, and Ujkecske, 17 miles northeast of the Kecskemet-Szolnok line, also was announced. Thus the Red Army had a firm grip on the rail and highway network leading to Budapest.

Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's army scored important gains in northeast Hungary, taking more than 40 communities along a front about 100 miles from Budapest. His troops linked up with the 4th Ukraine Army of Gen. Ivan Petrov between Csap and Mandok.

Nearly All Fortress City of Flushing Now Held by Allies

German General and 2,500 Prisoners Taken in Pocket

By WILLIAM FRYE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 2 —(AP)— British and Canadian assault forces, making rapid strides toward clearing the approaches to the port of Antwerp, have hurled stubborn German defence troops out of all but the northern outskirts of the fortress city of Vlissingen (Flushing) on Walcheren Island, a field dispatch said today.

British commandos and amphibious forces which struck the island's west coast yesterday near Westkapelle have expanded their beachhead to the northeast, bypassing the village of Domburg and seizing an enemy coastal battery emplaced in the dunes beyond, Associated Press war correspondent William F. Boni reported from 1st Canadian Army Headquarters.

A dispatch from Canadian Press war correspondent Ross Munro estimated that half the town of Vlissingen was in the hands of the commandos.

South of the Schelde estuary a stubborn knot of enemy defiance was all but erased. Field dispatches said that Maj.-Gen. Eberding who was commanding in that pocket and 2,500 of his German troops had been captured. Allied troops there were well inside the coastal village of Knocke.

Only about 100 S. S. troops remained in Fort Knocke, with a few additional troops at Heyst and elsewhere along the coast as the Canadian bag of prisoners mounted to 10,000.

Flame-throwing Churchill tanks were dealing with the remaining knots, but Eberding who had commanded the now-eliminated 64th division was quoted as saying that organized resistance had ceased south of the Schelde.

On Walcheren the value placed by the enemy on the approaches to Antwerp was measured by the fanatical fury with which the German garrison, cut off from all hope of escape, contested every foot.

The Allied communique reported "some miles of the coast" had been taken, and the two beachheads, at Westkapelle and Vlissingen were well established.

At last report Allied forces inside Vlissingen were being opposed chiefly by snipers. Boni said the Germans were resorting to all "sorts of tricks, including running up the white flag, then firing on our troops."

The Canadian attack across the 1,000-yard-long causeway from South Beveland was disclosed to have been pulled back yesterday out of ruinous enemy crossfire from the Walcheren side, but overnight the Canadians drove back and this morning once again held a small and fiercely-contested bridgehead a few hundred yards deep.

Nazis Could Launch Rockets Against N. A. Cities Writer Told

London, Nov. 2 —(CP)— Walter Farr, Daily Mail Correspondent, said today in a Stockholm dispatch he had been informed the Germans soon could "certainly" launch rockets against North American cities.

Farr said he was told the Germans had completed a new series of experiments and were satisfied they could send V-2 rockets against Britain "on a fairly large scale."

His informant was termed an authority in a position to know what progress the Germans had made with secret weapons. Farr said he was given the following additional information:

1. That the V-2—a long, fairly fat projectile with tail fins like an ordinary bomb—had been fired on Britain from experimental stations in Germany and Norway, and that Holland and Denmark bases also could be used.

2. That the first V-2s carried about a ton of explosive, and that larger V-2s have been designed.

3. That the quantity of explosive is governed by the distance the V-2 is to travel.

4. That V-2s, propelled by gasoline or some other liquid, shoot 15 to 50 miles into the air and, after reaching their maximum height, glide back and hit the ground at 800 to 1,000 miles an hour.

Farr quoted his informant as saying that, although the Germans could reach the United States with the rockets, they appeared to be concentrating on production of V-2s for Britain.

"There is no doubt that the Germans have a half-dozen sizes of V-2, and are experimenting to decide which is the most effective," Farr said he was told.

Call-ups Lag Behind Quotas

Ottawa, Nov. 2 —(CP)— Call-ups for compulsory military service are lagging behind quotas set by the Defence Department, it was learned today.

While no official figures have been made public it is known that the quota of 5,000 men a month, set for the present fiscal year, is not being met. Some relief has been provided by the action of the R. C. A. F. in releasing 4,200 men, most of whom are expected to go into the Army, but it is understood that this will still leave the totals short of the target Col. J. L. Ralston, who has resigned as Defence Minister, set last February.

At that time he said that of the 60,000 men the Army would require this year 48,000 would be needed for service anywhere, the remainder would be used for Home Defence.

While quotas are set by the Defence Department the actual calling is handled by the Labor Department through Selective Service. Eligible age groups — single men born in the years 1906 to 1926 and married men born in the years 1913 to 1926 — have been practically exhausted and the main source of men is those just coming of age for military service.

Ipswich, England, Nov. 2 (CP Cable)—Rev. Harold Green, Vicar of St. Nicholas Church, Ipswich, found himself the centre of a brisk controversy after he responded to an appeal for comfort for German prisoners of war in this country by sending a tin of rat poison. The Vicar said he sent the package as a joke.

SAYS MANY SOLDIERS IN ACTION AFTER ONLY 4 MONTHS' TRAINING

85-Foot Aerial Ladder of K.F.D. Seen in City

Demonstration of an 85-foot aerial ladder owned by Kingston Fire Department drew the attention of a considerable number of Belleville city officials and civilians at the local city hall on Wednesday afternoon.

The new fire fighting equipment being delivered from Toronto to Kingston was stopped off in this city where before an interested crowd of spectators the full length of the ladder was raised to tower over the roof of the city hall.

Manufactured by the LaFrance Fire Engine Company, whose Canadian factory is in Toronto, the new ladder is the last word in fire fighting equipment and besides its sectional 85-foot hydraulically controlled aerial ladder carries 200 feet of duraluminum ground ladders. It is powered by a 200 horsepower 12-cylinder engine and is capable of a speed of nearly 80 miles per hour.

Within minutes from the time of arrival at the scene of a fire the ladder can be swung from its horizontal position and with wings extended have firemen at its top ready to combat flames from their water control tower. For the purpose of safety rails are built on the aerial ladder.

Weighs Ten Tons.

Shipping weight of the machine is approximately ten tons considerably more than half of which is positioned over the front end which is carried by two mammoth 11-inch tires. Dual tires are on the rear. The machine has a wheel base of 220 inches with the driver's position being well out front. Front end of the machine is streamlined with a modern effect.

Operation of the aerial ladder is controlled from a special turntable immediately to the rear of the driver's seat, the machinery being set in motion by the simple turn of a lever. The hydraulic jacks controlling the ladder are tested to a pressure of 800 pounds per square inch with only 500 pounds being required to operate the ladder fully extended and with one man aboard.

Turn in Any Direction.

When raised the ladder can be turned in any direction through swinging of the turntable, while to avoid undue strain on the tires at various angles which the ladder may be extended, special jacks are available to keep the chassis of the truck level.

Included in the ladder truck equipment are hand extinguishers, pick axes, crowbars, wall picks, special door openers, tin roof cutters and pike poles. A special compartments holds the life net, which is used in emergency, when persons are trapped in high burning buildings.

Members of the local fire department and civic officials were especially interested as the aerial equipment was put through its paces, while several Kingston city aldermen and members of its fire department were also present.

Meeting the truck in Belleville were Fire Chief James Armstrong and Acting Chief V. C. Brightman, with the city motor mechanic; Alderman Brooks, vice chairman of the fire department and Aldermen Charlton, Godwin, Stroud and Casterton.

'Buddy' Barrett Killed in Action

Wounded in the leg while fighting with his unit in France one month following D-Day, Rifleman James M. "Buddy" Barrett, 30, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Barrett, Coleman St., has been killed in action after returning to the front, his parents have been informed. Word of their son's death was received yesterday, the telegram stating he had been killed on October 25th.

Born in Belleville, Rflmn. Barrett attended St. Michael's school and enlisted in the infantry in May, 1942. He went overseas in December of last year and was transferred to the Queen's Own Rifles, the unit with which he went to France on D-Day. After being wounded in July he was flown back to England to convalesce but had recently returned to the front lines.

One brother Flying Officer Richard "Dick" Barrett, is a navigator with the R.C.A.F. overseas.

Amphibious Duck To Be in City On Saturday

Now termed a veteran invasion vehicle after being on the secret lists only one year ago, the amphibious "Duck" a two-and-one-half ton vehicle of war capable of travelling either on land or in the water will be seen in Belleville on Saturday in the interests of the Seventh Victory Loan, it has been announced by county officials.

Latest reports have it that the "Duck" will be seen on Front Street for two hours starting at twelve noon. It will be parked at the curbside, where all may have an opportunity of seeing in a small measure, where their Victory Bond money goes.

Valuable for landing operation in assaults on enemy shores and in hauling supplies from ship to shore, where dock facilities are absent, the "Duck" is as much at home on the water as on the land. It can travel from one to another without hestitation by a quick and easy shifting of the controls. Its rudder and wheels are guided by the same steering wheel.

The term "Duck" describes the machine completely. It can travel on regular roads or over rough terrain where no roads exist. Absence of bridges proves no handicap as it waddles to the water's edge and crosses the water.

Although allowed to be described for the first time in June 1943 from New Caledonia, the "Duck" had undoubtedly been used previously to this. It was used in Sicily landings and equipped with 50 calibre machine guns, did some shooting on its own behalf. The British 8th Army used hundreds of them in crossing the Messine Straits when they crossed from Sicily to the mainland in Italy, and the Americans relied heavily upon them at Salerno.

The "Duck" will leave Kingston at eight o'clock Saturday morning and travelling the highway will arrive in time for display in Belleville at noon.

Dots on Map Show Where Robots Crashed In Kent, England

When the sirens of Kent, England, wailed in the early hours of Tuesday, June 13, 1944 many sleepy-eyed people, clad in dressing gowns and slippers rushed into their gardens as they heard a plane roaring overhead. It seemed in trouble.

Flames were shooting from its tail. Excitedly they shouted that another enemy bomber had fallen victim to the British defences.

In the North Kent area onlookers saw the plane plunge down ward, and as it hit the ground there was a terrific explosion.

The plane fell on waste land. People dismissed it as an enemy bomber that had been shot down before it could release its bombs. The authorities, as it has since been proved, knew better.

And so-two nights later-did the public, for the planes with the flaming tails came over too frequently to be ordinary bombers.

Quickly it was realised that the Germans were using their much-vaunted VI weapon. The flying bomb menace had begun in earnest-and in 80 days 2,400 of the bombs were to fall in Kent, 200 more than fell in London.

The above figures refer to that part of Kent which is known for war purposes as the South East Region. Included are eight areas which while attached to London for operational and statistical purposes are still part of the administrative county of Kent and lie within the narrowing angle which finds its apex in the centre of London. In other words, comparative figures of bombs falling on London and Kent may appear distorted due to claims of the two districts.

"Kent Messenger"

Ingenuity of a Kentish newspaper editor is seen in a map of Kent received in the city recently by Mr. Arthur Thomas, caretaker of the Belleville Cemetery.

Small dots, each representing the spot where a bomb crashed are plentifully sprinkled over the map. Thicker in some places than others, the dots clearly define, in artillery parlance, the line of fire. Some 1,368 bombs fell on Kentish soil while 1,000 were shot down off her coastline. The cost was 152 dead, 1716 injured and vast material damage.

Kent's geographical location, according to the map, placed her central and western parts directly in the line from battery to target, presuming of course that London was the objective of the flaming weapons. Sussex, too suffered, from the buzz bombs that went off line. Kent was aptly named "Bomb Alley".

In tribute to the heroic people of his county, the editor writes, "Police, National Fire Service, Civil Defence, local Government, officers, W. V. S., all and every service has given of its best during this new phase of the war, but over and above all it has been the people themselves—the great and glorious people-whether a housewife, bus driver, or a waitress, who has been VI. It indeed has been a people's war and bravely have the people waged it, whether they be of London or of Kent."

Pastures Short In the County

Farmers in Hastings county are badly in need of more moisture to make fall plowing easier and to build up a water reserve in wells and creeks for winter use of their stock, according to the weekly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The weekly bulletin is issued from reports of agricultural representatives throughout the province.

Continuing in the general picture for the Bay of Quinte district, it is stated that pastures now are getting very short and milking herds are being stable fed. In spite of this however, the flow of milk is rapidly falling off.

In the report for Northumberland it is claimed the excellent fall weather has assisted greatly in the apple harvest with many orchards now nearing the finish. In many instances, however, the Spy crop still remains to be picked. Storage space and containers for apples are at premium with large quantities of processing apples being shipped out of the district.

Potatoes, cabbage and pumpkins are moving in large quantities to the processors.

The War Today—

Allies in Position To Tighten Plans for Final Blows on Japan

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

There's this satisfaction to be had from the developments growing out of the Chiang-Stilwell fuss: the Allied governments—and their publics—now know what's going on in China.

And the United Nations now are in position to tighten their plans for the final assault on Japan, without expending unnecessary effort in trying to iron out China's mountainous problems, which Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek prefers to handle in his own way.

Fortunately the Allies are so favorably situated they can adjust themselves quickly to an altered strategy if need be — and there are signs that the change already is on the way.

Direct Blows Upon Japan

Mastery of the Japanese Navy, together with successful invasion of the Philippines, will permit the Allies to make direct attacks on Japan without the elaborate preparations necessary to turn a shattered China into an efficient fighting machine. The Allies could defeat Japan even without China, if Russia provided bases—and could do it anyway in the long run.

I don't suggest for a moment that the Allies intend to abandon their efforts to aid China in every feasible way. Presumably the Burma Road will be reopened to handle a greater volume of badly-needed supplies, and there may be an Allied invasion of China's southeast coast to establish a base for military operations.

Still, hopes of setting a huge, well-trained and properly-equipped Chinese army to work to oust the Japanese from the continent are pretty well smashed.

China's Internal Political Situation

One of the chief reasons for this is China's internal political situation. Now that the lid is off we don't need to use any euphemism in describing Chiang's government. It's a rock-ribbed, one-party rule and he means to perpetuate it.

Chiang's method of keeping in power has involved maintenance of hundreds of thousands of troops to guard against the powerful Chinese Communist armies of the north. These two factions have been operating under a frequently-broken truce because of the Japanese war, but few if any impartial observers in China believe that the truce can do other than dissolve into civil war sooner or later—probably sooner.

The present show-down may perhaps come as a welcome relief to Allies who've been leaning over backward in an effort to meet Chiang's wishes. It should clear the air and result in more realistic relations between China and her Allies.

273 FRONT STREET

Crowds Inspect Reconstructed Nazi Buzz Bomb

Battered, twisted and blackened, but pieced back together through the efforts and skill of the Royal Canadian Electrical and Maintenance Engineers, a German robomb placed on exhibition at the Campbell Street entrance to Front Street was the object of close examination by several thousand Belleville residents this afternoon.

Left over in Belleville for a few hours enroute from Montreal to the western part of the province the "doodlebug" bomb was exhibited in the interests of the Seventh Victory Loan campaign. It was set up in Belleville only following an earnest request on the part of the county public relations committee.

Resembles Miniature Plane

Looking like a miniature aeroplane, the robomb differs from the conventional aircraft only in its comparatively short and stubby wings and in the projection jet which is placed above and rudder and tail assembly. As viewed the robomb weighs something like two tons.

A few minutes before twelve o'clock the robomb arrived in the city aboard a platform tractor trailer, and was quickly assembled by the two men in charge with the assistance of local department of public works employees who blocked off Campbell Street.

Crowd Up For Close View

Interest of the general public in the machine which following D-Day caused untold damage in the greater London area was quickly evinced as shoppers and school children crowded about to get a close view of the robomb. The "doodlebug" is approximately 20 feet long, its fuselage following closely the designs of an aeroplane. Short stubby wings six feet in length are fastened to the body by means of a transverse metal cylinder which passes directly through the bomb body. The explosive head is set in the nose just in front of the wings while the balance of the interior of the body is taken up with propulsion and directional machinery.

Propulsion Cylinder

The jet propulsion cylinder is ten to twelve feet in length and is open at both ends with a radiator-like burner apparatus of the front end where gasoline is mixed for burning.

The entire machine gives one the impression of being cheaply constructed as undoubtedly is the case considering the intention of its complete destruction at the end of its one way trip from its firing base.

PRIME MINISTER

He had read no correspondence in respect to the resignation of Col. Ralston as there had been none so far. The Defence Minister had resigned verbally in the presence of the cabinet, but had said he would send a letter.

"I see I have a letter from Col. Ralston this morning," said Mr. King lifting an envelope from his desk but indicating the contents had not been read.

'In Order to Serve Canada'

Gen. McNaughton said he had undertaken the task of minister "in order to serve Canada and to ensure our army overseas received the support in fullest measure which is needed."

He had always been favored with co-operation from the press, and while he was commander overseas press men had been treated as colleagues with an important function in giving information to the people of Canada.

He hoped for similar co-operation in his new office. The times were difficult for Canada and the world and he would be happy if the press deal with what he had to say in a spirit of responsibility. This attitude would be a great service to the common cause and he looked forward to his association with the press representatives.

When Gen. McNaughton concluded, Mr. King said he wished to add a few words to what he had said.

Overseas Men Confident in Ralston

"In inviting Gen. McNaughton to come into the cabinet and assume great responsibilities, I was seeking to get the one man who I felt at this time in that position could bring the greatest measure of confidence to the men overseas," he continued.

"I felt they would believe that their interests were foremost and the war effort would be maintained in the best manner possible.

"I also had in mind the confidence his appointment would bring to the fathers, mothers, relatives and other friends of the men overseas that every step would be taken to support them and that nothing would come before that support of the men overseas.

"I also had in mind that the people of Canada had the fullest confidence in Gen. McNaughton and will feel that this is the best appointment which could be made at this time in filling the post made vacant by the resignation of Col. Ralston."

Mr. Macdonald was understood to have backed Col. Ralston's advocacy of compulsory overseas service for call-ups. His resignation also was reported possible.

Air Minister Power is Associate Defence Minister and usually acts for Col. Ralston when the senior Defence Minister is out of Ottawa.

May Hasten Election.

Political observers said it was possible the cabinet division would hasten the date of the forthcoming general election, as the Prime Minister might decide to have the voters rule on the present voluntary overseas service policy being continued.

Mr. King was left with a majority of his 20 remaining ministers giving support to the present policy of overseas service being on a voluntary basis.

This policy has the firm backing of the five French-speaking ministers, while most of the remaining members give unwavering support to Mr. King personally, and accept his opinion that the present policy should be continued.

Overseas service for the call-ups, of whom there are more than 70,000 now on duty in Canada, blew into a major issue in the cabinet last week when lengthy and frequent sittings began.

Gives Views to Cabinet.

Col. Ralston returned from a tour of the European battlefronts three weeks ago and was able to give his cabinet colleagues detailed information on the need of men and the attitude of the front line soldiers towards the present voluntary overseas service policy.

The cabinet is understood to have considered suggestions that the Home Defence force be drastically reduced with the men returning to farming and other essential occupations, although liable to be recalled to Army Service in the event of emergency.

In a statement to the Commons in July, Col. Ralston said he would not favor the return to civilian occupation of call-ups while general service troops were engaged in combat overseas.

Under an order-in-council passed recently authority was given for men on active service to be sent to any jobs deemed in the national interest.

By this means, the number on army duty could be greatly reduced, although perhaps 35,000 would be required for coastal defence and similar activities. Call-up troops served with general service men in the joint Canadian-American occupation of Kiska last year.

Retired in September.

Gen. McNaughton retired from the Army in September, after being granted leave through illness from his overseas command on Dec. 26. He also has resigned his former civilian post as head of the National Research Council.

Gen. McNaughton is understood to favor only volunteers being used in overseas service, and his views thus would agree with those of the government.

Col. Ralston, who had left politics in 1935 after service as a cabinet minister, returned to the ministry in 1939 as Finance Minister, three days before Canada declared war on Germany. He had offered his services in any capacity.

He became Defence Minister in 1940, following the death of Hon. Norman Rogers who was killed in an air crash.

3 More May Resign.

Toronto, Nov. 2 — (CP) — The Globe and Mail says today in an Ottawa dispatch that three more Federal Cabinet ministers are almost certain to follow Defence Minister Ralston and resign from the government when the Seventh Victory Loan campaign is concluded.

The three are Navy Minister Macdonald, "who has buttressed his senior's recommendations on army policy from the beginning," Finance Minister Ilsley and State Secretary McLarty.

The story also quoted General A. G. L. McNaughton, former commander of the Canadian Army Overseas, as saying of reports he would succeed Col. Ralston as Defence Minister: "I have nothing to say at all."

Front Page News.

London, Nov. 2— (CP Cable) — Reported resignation of Col. J. L. Ralston as Canadian Defence Minister was front-page news in all three London Evening newspapers today.

Former Albert College Student Killed in Action

A former outstanding student at Albert College where he starred in football, basketball and other sports, Captain Thomas Edwin Wooley, 41 Victor Street, London, has been killed in action, according to information received here today.

Captain Wooley who won the Military Cross for conspicuous bravery in the field was serving with the Seaforth Highlanders at the time of his death. He is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Wooley.

Born in London twenty-four years ago, he was educated in London schools later attending Albert College here where he was a brilliant student. In 1939 he was awarded the Col. L. W. Marsh award for scholarship, character, leadership and athletics. He attended the University of Western Ontario for two years and enlisted in April, 1942 with the Perth regiment, going overseas in August 1942 with the Seaforth Higlanders after graduating from the Brockville O. T. C. He was also an instructor at Three Rivers and served for a time at Camp Ipperwash.

Capt. Wooley suffered shrapnel wounds last May while serving in Italy and it was here he was awarded the decoration for gallantry in the storming of the Hitler Line. He was only recently promoted to the rank of captain.

One American Force Already Within Carigara

By MURLIN SPENCER
(AP War Correspondent)

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 2 —(AP)— The village of Carigara tottered today, with elements of one American force already within the town and another probably less than two miles away.

The last Japanese concentration east of the Leyte mountains was on the verge of falling to units reported already battling for control of the town; and its southern defences were being pressed tighter by the forward push of another force moving northwest from the Jaro area.

U. S. troops first entered Carigara from the east more than a week ago during a patrol action after their amphibious landing on the north coast but had to retire when powerful Japanese forces appeared.

The Carigara fight if won would open the coastal road to the town of Pinamopoan and thus permit closing of the enemy's only vehicle route across the mountains from his reinforcement point at Ormoc Bay on the southwest coast. It was the principal action of the last 24 hours on Leyte.

Far to the south of this twin-pronged advance, other units were pushing west straight across the jungled hills. Some were reported half across the island, their objective of attacking the Japanese at Ormoc Bay now mostly down-hill from their painfully-gained positions.

Terrain rather than the enemy apparently offered most of the obstacles there.

In the air, the Leyte battle centred over Ormoc Bay with American fighters based on newly-won island airfields blasting at the Japanese reinforcement point—one ammunition dump was exploded—and at small freighters, luggers and barges. The air attack, coupled with P. T. boat raids, resulted in the sinking of one freighter and one lugger.

POLICE BLOTTER

Complaints that several boxes of apples were stolen from a parked motor transport on East Dundas St. late Wednesday night were investigated by police. The apples were removed from the transport during the absence of the driver.

Kingston police reported the theft of a 1939 model Dodge coach bearing licence plate No 8S665 last night.

Eva Maracle, 211 Coleman Street, attended a dance at the Conservative Club rooms last night, where she lost her coat. Some other party took the coat and left another in exchange.

While driving a transport truck east of the city Phyllis Dube, of Montreal, found the experiment rather complicated. The girl took over the driving while the actual driver was sleeping in the cab. Complications set in, police arrived and Phyllis subsequently found herself in police court charged with driving without a licence. The minimum fine was assessed.

POLICE COURT

Apprehended driving his motor car at an excessive rate of speed along Highway No. 2 east of Belleville cost James Trow, of Montreal, the sum of $20.00 and costs when arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in today's traffic court. The charge was preferred under the War Measures Act.

Lindsay Sills, West Huntingdon, paid $34.80, which included costs, after being convicted on a careless driving count, while a similar charge against P. Bronson was enlarged for personal service.

Otherwise in the day's court three pleas of guilty were accepted from a trio of Thurlow residents who faced charges of failing to obtain 1944 township dog licences. The conventional "two and costs" was imposed.

The 7th Victory Loan

The Seventh Victory Loan drive is moving steadily on. Half the time is now spent and somewhat over half of the minimum objective has been subscribed.

How needful oversubscription is, is clear enough to anyone who thinks over what effort the United Nations are throwing into the struggle at this very time to crack the Nazis. Expressions of opinion as to the probability of the length of the war have been again in the public notice and it is well it is so for it has served to bring the public to the full realization that the war at the present and for the rest of the fighting may be certain to be hard fought. The way of "the last lap" of the war to which Mr. Churchill referred has not been and is not going to be easy—that is the general opinion.

Those who are thinking of their duty at this hour in subscribing to the loan or adding to their subscriptions rightly do so for the financial needs of the effort of the war in Europe and then in the Pacific continue very heavy. It is a time to ask one's self, How much more can I give than I have given in subscriptions or how much should I give if I have not already subscribed?

There should be no hesitation, but generous weighing of the problem for the needs will remain great even after this Victory Loan.

So far the people of Canada have done well as the British people have done by the great amount they are paying directly into the cost of the war as the war goes on, and by the amount raised through the sale of bonds.

Those who have subscribed to the full measure of their ability have but done their duty and their example should be followed by all others.

To win this war with a crushing victory of the enemy is the intention of the United Nations and of this they are confident. For everyone to be thus confident and determined, everyone should do his or her utmost in every effort of the home front. Even in this the armed forces are supporting the home front by the strong example of their participation in the loan.

Well-Spent Hallowe'en

Celebration of Hallowe'en in Belleville was orderly except for the reported breaking of a few windows, which of course should not have happened. But the general observance was on a high plane and everyone enjoyed it the more for that reason.

The great success of the Kinsmen's effort to raise money for their "Milk for Britain" fund combined with the program for the entertainment of about 2,300 boys and girls of the city was something of which the club members must be very proud for this project served a double purpose, it was to raise money for their war project and also directed the attention of the school boys and girls of Belleville along constructive lines, to lend their aid to such a philanthropic object as well as to give them a model program of Hallowe'en entertainment. Altogether this program was constructive in the highest degree and conducive to the development of interest in good healthy entertainment and in the good spirit of competition in what is of much importance in the training of the interests of the young. This was brought out in costumes and in a contest for the best costumes. It is an ideal training for the young, giving them something to think about on that very interesting subject of what people wear, and boys and girls wear, and also how clothes reveal the man, the woman, the boy and the girl.

Dressing one's self up into a role is a good way to learn to study character since a costume competition has its lessons for the mind, through entering into the spirit of a person. The costume is supposed to clothe as well as making some impressions upon the young how to dress, how dress affects the character or disposition and how to enjoy a competition even if one does not win a prize.

Freedom Flames in Europe

Five years and more of German fiendishness and plotting against the world have not wiped out the human spirit. A Quisling thought it could be done, but vast multitudes of the peoples of the overrun lands knew that liberty and justice would not desert them. For a time they lived under the Huns, their unwanted oppressors, but the Hun could not lure the peoples away from their faith, their love of country and race, their culture and their habits and customs. In the underworld of Europe has lived a fiery freedom that has withstood the lure of swift Nazi advances in the early days of the war and the dangling of Nazi bait or the terrorism of the Himmler crowd of criminals. That freedom has burst into flame at the time appointed by the Allied strategy. The forces of liberation are one.

How much life there is in Europe which Hitler's power has failed to extinguish is shown everywhere. It is shown even in the ashes of those sent to their doom by the Hun and then burned. As the war moves across Europe there is this steady bursting into flames of this loyalty which will consume until the last vestige of the Hitler evil is destroyed.

Battle of London

(London Evening Standard)

The Battle of London has been no sideshow. If she had wavered, then the Reich of a Thousand Years might have become reality. Our losses alone reveal what we have suffered: 60,000 citizens of London have been killed; more than 100,000 wounded; while few among us have escaped the onslaught without some loss or injury.

Hundreds of thousands of our homes have been destroyed and wrecked; our treasured possessions blasted and defiled. The heart of our city has been swept by fire; her noblest monuments lie in ruins. There will be no joy-bells rung for the liberation of London; no flowers strewn, nor wine casks broached. It is a fact that the world will accept as calmly as it accepted the fact of our resistance.

The triumphant citizens of London, in the days of her liberation, send their greetings to the men across the Channel. She is shabby and battered, but her heart is warm. She has a welcome waiting for them.

Those To Remember

(Belfast Telegraph)

Victorious Allied armies, the navies, including the merchant seamen of many nations, have all contributed greatly to the improvement of the general position, but in the repelling of invasion, the gradual switch-over to counter-attack and then to strategic bombing the R.A.F. and its allies, in particular the mighty U. S. Air Force, took the foremost part, and to them supremely is due a people's gratitude. It is right to remember also that there was a time when the Home Guard was the main reserve of the army in these islands. Over here it was a purely volunteer force, which made its showing all the more creditable. Hundreds of hours given up to drills, training and parades represented a considerable sacrificing of time and personal comfort on the part of many men who might reasonably have left the job to others. And the same holds true of the many branches of Civil Defence, where the amount of splendid voluntary work, often carried out without little encouragement from those being helped, has been enormous. Men and women happily discovered a teamwork in these jobs that made the effort worth while.

Men and Women in Khaki

Men and women on balloon and gun sites have mostly had a thin time in this war. They are the "isolated units" spoken of with pity it appeals for comforts and books: But they end the war with a blaze of glory that so far the keepers of public opinion have not sufficiently noticed. Mr. Sandy's statement on the flying bombardment gave them the honor they have earned. It was the forgotten men and women in khaki and blue who made it possible for us in London to let victory in France pass on its way unimpeded by civilian fears. Half of General Pile's anti-aircraft command are women.

LIFELONG PRESENCE

'It's time that I went home," he said,
"It's getting late!"
And off he went at even tread
Beyond our gate.

And I supposed that he was gone
From Ma and me,
But here I find him lingering on
In much I see.

He praised that picture on the wall
Now, year to year
'Twill say: "He called me best of all

And there's a book from which he read
A line or two.
Now I'll remember what he said
My lifetime through.

"It's time I went away," said he,
But I believe
With friendships true that cannot be.
They never leave.

LADY GODIVA AND PEEPING TOM

A peeping Tom is a prying or inquisitive person, especially in respect to prurient matters, such as one who peeps at night through the windows of houses.

The term originated in connection with the legend of Lady Godiva of Coventry.

According to the legend, Leofric, Saxon Earl of Mercia and Lord of Coventry, imposed burdensome tolls upon his subjects. His wife, Lady Godiva, a sympathetic woman who had the welfare of the town at heart, appealed to her husband time and again to remit the obnoxious taxes.

Finally, to get rid of her importunities, Leofric agreed to grant her request if she would ride naked through the town on horseback.

To his great surprise Lady Godiva took her lord at his word and issued a proclamation requesting all persons to remain indoors and close the shutters of their houses while she rode through the town clothed only in her long hair and chastity.

Everybody complied except a tailor named Tom, who bored a hole through his shutter that he might see Lady Godiva pass. It is said that he was stricken blind for his impudence, which served him right.

At any rate, he has been known as Peeping Tom ever since and has become the type of all persons who pry into the private affairs of other people.

Leofric kept his promise and the oppressive tolls were abolished. Naturally Lady Godiva became a heroine in the eyes of the Coventry folk. The legendary incident was commemorated by a stained glass window in St. Michael's Church in Coventry, mentioned as early as 1690, and for centuries there was an effigy of "Peeping Tom of Coventry" in a niche in one of the public buildings in the town.

At one time the ride of Lady Godiva was the theme of an annual pageant in Coventry.

Some local historians insist that the modern version of the legend is a distortion and that Lady Godiva did not ride naked but merely barebacked. In other words, it was the horse and not the lady who was naked. They think the usual version of the legend is too barbaric to be true and that no proud Saxon of those days would have permitted such a thing to happen.

"This anecdote," wrote Isaac Disraeli, "some have suspected to be fictitious, from its extreme barbarity; but the character of the middle ages will admit of any kind of wanton barbarism."

WHY CHILDREN HAVE ENLARGED TONSILS

From the character or type of tissue composing the tonsils (both the ordinary visible throat tonsils and the third tonsil hidden from view up behind the soft palate—commonly known as "adenoids" when enlarged) it seems that the main purpose or function of the tonsils is to guard or protect against invasion by disease germs.

Nodules, collections or patches of the same type of tissue as that composing the tonsils (adenoid or lymphoid tissue—a framework or network of connective tissue containing masses of round cells identical with the small white blood corpuscles) occur in other parts of the body as well as in the tonsils—for instance in the lymph nodes or "glands", which when enlarged in any situation are commonly called "kernels"; in the spleen; in the solitary and aggregate nodules in the intestines known as Peyer's plaques or patches, characteristically ulcerated in typhoid fever; and in the red bone marrow throughout the body. There is even a ring of this same adenoid or lymphoid tissue around the base of the appendix.

Wherever such adenoid or lymphoid tissue occurs its purpose or function is to guard against infection.

It is my opinion, and merely mine, for perhaps a majority of good physicians do not share it, that enlargement of the tonsils (visible and hidden) in children is in the great majority of cases a physiological and normal state which calls for no treatment.

Recently I noticed how rarely an inquiry concerning croup comes in the mail nowadays, whereas twenty or thirty years ago a good many such inquiries came to this department. I hopefully inferred that maybe at last a little fresh air and exposure was getting to the children, but half a dozen mothers informed me that I was wrong about it, as their children and others in the neighborhood get croup at the drop of a barometer, thermometer or hat.

If I'm wrong in thinking and hoping that spasmodic or so-called "simple catarrhal" croup is much less frequent today than it was when I was a country doctor in upstate New York, then it might be well for all readers to ignore my present opinion that enlarged tonsils in children are generally normal. They're your kids, and this is a free country. If you ask me I say I believe enlarged tonsils and adenoids should be regarded as an indication that the child is reasonably capable of maintaining immunity to the cri. Provided, of course, that the enlargement does not seriously obstruct breathing. When normal breathing through the nose is impaired by enlarged tonsils or adenoids, then I say out with them.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Craving for Carbohydrate

I am 32, have been feeling sixty till I started taking your Iodin Ration and vitamin supplement. I find I now want only about half as much starchy food and sweets as I formerly ate, and certainly I have much more pep and feel my age again. (Mrs. J. P.)

Answer—That's what I've been trying to tell readers all along. When you get an adequate daily ration of minerals and vitamins you will be satisfied with just enough carbohydrate food (starches, sweets) to maintain normal weight and efficiency. For the why, how and wherefore of it send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope for "The 7 Keys to Vite."

Sour Stomach

I have sour stomach and indigestion. I am 74 inches tall—they say a tall person usually has more trouble with indigestion than a short person. C.B.D.)

Answer—One theory is that the long trunk contains a longer alimentary canal and so there is more mileage for "indigestion." Another theory is that a longer alimentary tract gives the tall person an advantage over the short person with shorter trunk and shorter inner tube or intestine—better chance to digest his food. You pays your money and takes your choice. Practically I doubt if there is any such distinction to be made. Anyway, what do you mean, "indigestion"? There is no such ailment. Instructions for use of calcium carbonate given in booklet "So You Have Indigestion?" as well as diet suggestions for hyperacidity and peptic ulcer. Copy mailed on request (not a clipping) if you inclose ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

SYSTEMATIC NAZI ATTEMPT TO DESTROY DUTCH RESOURCES

Paris, Nov. 2 (AP)—A systematic attempt by the Germans to destroy the resources of Holland so that economic recovery of the country would become impossible was described yesterday by Gerth Van Wyck, Netherlands Minister to Paris.

U.S. Air Ace Downs 9 Planes On One Mission

Pearl Harbor, Nov. 1 — (AP) — United States Navy fliers, paced by an ace who downed nine enemy planes on one mission to Manila, destroyed from 2,594 to 2,846 Japanese planes during the two months American troops invaded Palau and the Philippines and the navy crushed the enemy's Imperial fleet.

The Aug. 31-Oct. 31 scourge of the foe's air power in sweeps extending from the Philippines north to within 200 miles of Japan virtually nullified work of the enemy's assembly lines for the period and cut deep into his store of battle-tested pilots.

Admiral Nimitz, issuing this "conservative recapitulation of enemy aircraft losses," said the cost was approximately 300 carrier planes—a ratio of better than eight or nine to one in favor of U. S. fliers.

These achievements are those of 3rd and 7th fleet carrier fliers alone. They do not take into account for the same period a noteworthy bag by army fliers over such hotly-defended spots as the oil centre of Balikpapan on Borneo.

Showing the way for the navy is Cmdr. David McCampbell of Los Angeles with 30 planes to his credit, including nine he got in less than two hours Oct. 24 when he helped chase a numerically superior group of Japanese all the way to Manila. His bag that day also included two probables.

Underscoring Japan's deterioration as an air as well as a naval power, the carrier raiders blew up 1,132 of the enemy planes before they could get off the ground.

NORSE SECURITY POICE

London, Novv. 2 (CP)—A Norwegian security police force of 11,000 had been built up in Sweden and permission for it to enter Norway as soon as a considerable part of the country is liberated now is under discussion in Stockholm, it was learned yesterday.

Memorial Gifts Are Dedicated By Bishop Lyons

Stirling — The Rt. Rev. J. Lyons, D.D., Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario officiated at the dedication ceremony of the liturgical colors, chalice and paten and prayer book, donated to St John's Anglican Church by Mr. Earl Morrow in memory of his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morrow, also the unveiling of an Honor Roll including all the members of the Armed Forces who belong to St. John's Church, on Sunday, October 29th. The ceremony was followed by the celebration of Holy Communion. During the dedication service, the congregation remained standing, while the Lord Bishop conducted the ceremony followed by prayer and a hymn.

In his sermon, the Bishop expressed his appreciation of the very lovely and useful gifts that had been made to St. John's congregation and dedicated. In his message to the congregation, the Lord Bishop said he would like to leave with them words of encouragement which were something very much needed by everyone these days. The world is going through an unprecedented situation. Never was the future of our world so unpredictable. People are thinking more than usual and among all this the church stands for the things which inspire us and give us encouragement to face the future with confidence. Put on the whole armour of God and live in Him through a vital and living faith and all things that seem so uncertain will be forgotten. To go beyond even the realm of our understanding, launch out into the deep and put your hand into the hand of God, be adventurous in the cause for which our church stands.

We have got to be a living church, doing things we may not be willing to do. England could have easily have had cause to be filled with the spirit of defeatism but they had faith and a work to do for humanity and that is the spirit that brought her through. We may enjoy our heritage as Canadians, as a land of plenty and in our houses without danger.

The very fact that the church serves, after all these centuries, is an evidence of itself that it is divine. Today we mourn throughout the church of Canada with the church of England, in the sudden loss of the Right Rev. Archbishop of Canterbury. The whole Christian world mourns, as they were all looking to him to give leadership but he has been called to greater service. God will call a leader. I wish to express in a word our sympathy and to share the sorrow. And, not knowing who shall lead, we move forward in faith, believing that God will lead someone fitted for the task.

At the synod, the church decided to advance on all fronts, spiritual and we strive for reunion. It may not come in our day, but, have faith. The only way to defy nazism and pagan religion, is only by speaking with one voice. Work for it and pray for it, cultivate it, and when we are ready for it, God will give it. We are launching out into the deep believing that this way the world in which we now live will be made a better world than in which we now live.

Following the benediction of the Lord Bishop, the congregation sang "Lord of our Life, and God of our Salvation."

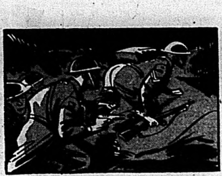
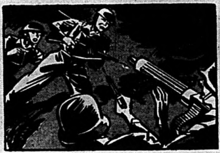
On the Night of January 19th, 1944...

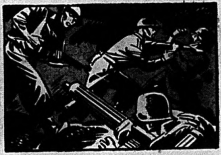
Corporal Harold Bradley Leppard was one of a patrol sent out to locate enemy positions on his regiment's front in Italy.



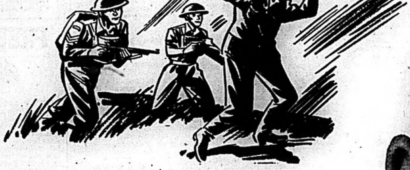
The patrol located an enemy post of unknown strength. Cpl. Leppard set out with the patrol commander to obtain a prisoner, leaving the rest of the patrol in observation.



The two managed to get within 5 yards of the post undetected—then rushed it. A machine gun opened up on them and wounded Cpl. Leppard in the stomach and twice in the arm.



Although severely wounded, Cpl. Leppard killed the German manning the machine gun and one other with his machine carbine. This enabled the patrol commander to overpower and capture the third member of the post.



In spite of the intense pain of his wounds, Cpl. Leppard then helped to escort the prisoner back to the patrol. For his courage, dash and determination, he was awarded the Military Medal.

Where does Duty end, Corporal Leppard?

If you can get men like Corporal Leppard to talk... which is apt to be difficult... they will assure you that in war there is no end to duty until the job is done—whatever the cost may be.

And you may think to yourself "That's all very right and proper for a fighting man, but surely it can't apply at this stage of the war to people at home like me".

Yet all the while, as surely as you ever knew anything, you know in your innermost heart that it does!

You know that to ease up before victory is an accomplished fact is neither courageous nor wise. Commonsense will tell you that the terrific intensity of the war in recent months has greatly increased Canada's borrowing needs for war purposes. And while more and more Canadian boys are risking wounds and death daily—counting desperately on your support—you surely cannot betray their trust.

So doubt no more what to do about Victory Bonds. Because the need is greater than it has ever been before, buy one more bond than you have bought in any previous Victory Loan.

Matching Hats to Hairdos

Evelyn Keyes has a most becoming hairdo.

By HELEN FOLLETT

TWO SUBJECTS always interest women, hats and hair-dos. Millinery is ridiculous or piquant according to the point of view. There are artistic masterpieces and there are atrocities. The oldsters just about swoon when they see some of the goofy ones. They remember, in their young days that everyone wore sailors, or everybody wore turbans, or all the sisters regaled themselves with Merry Widows or cartwheels. Life was like that in the old days. Mrs. Fashion said this or that, and all conformed.

Life is pleasanter now for shoppers when styles in hats include every design imaginable, relics of the past, funny ones the like of which have never been seen even in nightmares. All of them plead for a coiffure that is friendly, that conforms to pretty wavelets.

Considering the infinite variations of feminine faces there can be no strict rules for a happy marriage between hat and hair-do. The peanut sized bonnet may look well with the short cut, the high arrangement or flowing locks or it may not. Good taste and the looking glass will solve the problem seeing eye. Without question, the wrong combination can turn the prettiest girl into a caricature.

Form-fitting coiffures are more popular than those that are bouffant; that is as it should be for those edging into the late twenties or even further along the birthday march. Some women with uppity coiffures are dispensing with the permanent and wearing arrangements that are more severe than we have seen in a long time.

Girls in uniform have popularized the three-inch cut; it looks well with their army or navy hats. Teen-agers stick to long bobs. And there you are, sisters—the long and the short of it, the betwixt-and-between—take your pick.

Mr. Watts was much enjoyed by a large audience in the Oddfellow's Hall here when he showed a film of pictures which he had taken himself during a tour in the past few months of the Northern Anglican Mission posts in the Western Provinces and also along the new Alaska highway. He referred to the latter as a new road to the old mission centres, as many of these churches have been established for over fifty years. At some of these places people walk at least six miles to attend worship services. Many of the pictures of the Northern Missions showed the untiring work being carried on by half-breeds.

BONARLAW

R.E. Council Is Held at St. Mark's

Bonarlaw,—The annual convention of the Stirling, Rawdon and Marmora Township Religious Education Council was held in St. Mark's Anglican church Bonarlaw Friday afternoon and evening.

Sessions were presided over by the president W. J. Cottrell, asist. supt. of St. Paul's sunday school Marmora. At the afternoon session the worship period was taken by Rev. and Mrs. T.P. Townsend. In the unavoidable absence of J.F. Baker, superintendent of St. Mark's sunday school, a welcome was extended the delegates by Mrs. Arthur Brown, a valued teacher of that school. Included in the business session was the treasurer's and statistical reports given by Rev. J. R. Holden. Next came the roll call and appointment of resolutions and nominations committees. An interesting address on "Lay workers at work" was given by Rev. E.M. Cadigan, who stressed the fact that the command of Christ "Go ye into all the world" was not to be applied to foreign missions only but also to the home life of Christian. Rev. David Gray then introduced the Ontario Religious Education Council's representative Rev. Russell Harris B.A. of Toronto touched on some of the home problems in which the church can help. These included the teaching of children how to pray, the answering of children's questions, helping a child in the presence of death, finding helpful bedtime stories, the providing of family fun and stimulating family worship.

Mrs. Sharpe, a teacher of Hoard's Sunday school, with the aid of two adult delegates, gave an excellent demonstration of how a teacher should visit the home. A few departmental reports having been given several problems were discussed under the leadership of the O.R.E.C. representative. The closing prayer of the session was taken by Rev. David Gray.

A supper was served in the basement by the teachers of St. Mark's Sunday school. The evening session pened with a worship period conducted by Rev. J.M. Brownlie. This was succeeded by an inspirational talk on the theme of the convention given by Mrs. Burton Morton. The report of the nominating committee for the executive was accepted making the election of officers as follows; Honorary Presidents J. F. Baker and W. J. Johnston; President W.J. Cottrell; Vice-Pres. Geo. Williams; Secy-Treas- Rev. J.R. Holden; Executive Members, Lorne Johnston, J. F. Good, Mesdames Burton Morton, George Williams, Jasen Baker and Harper Rollins.

The resolutions committee's report containing thanks of the delegates for hospitality of the church, Sunday School and Rector of St. Mark's was adopted. J. F. Baker then gave a demonstration of worship in the Sunday School and conduct of the open session, and later with Rev. J. M. Brownlie sang "I heard the voice of Jesus say". The address of the O.R.E.C. representative dealt with "The home as an agency for Christian Education". At it's conclusion the officers were installed by Rev. C. C. Brazill. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. T.P. Townsend.

Dr. Len Hall Beats De Glane In Two Straight Falls In Main Bout at Hume Arena

Hollywood's Gift to Wrestling Much Too Smart for Montrealer

Before a goodly audience that gaped in sheer astonishment when Dr. Len Hall eliminated Montreal's Pierre DeGlane in straight falls at the Hume Arena last night, wrestling fans of the community went home still under the impression DeGlane wasn't exactly given somewhat of a break.

Dr. Hall appeared to be a very experienced ring workman, as a matter of fact one who has been around wrestling rings for some time past, for which Mons. DeGlane promptly learned early and often in rather foolish exchanges of body blows, that in no way assisted the Montreal lad.

Hollywood's gift to the grappling world moved rapidly to the fore and using methods not exactly in the book, rapped DeGlane hither and yon over and on top of the canvas for a fall. Under a questionable decision in the first round, the "Doc" wasn't to be denied and bounced back with an assortment of elbow smashes and kidney punches that left DeGlane practically hors de combat. In the meantime there was little to choose from as the principals went all out in a glaring effort to settle their ring differences, which was well taken care of by Mrs. Hall's elder son without too much trouble. Frankly the only mistake DeGlane made was in his efforts of getting too close and too often in the proximity of the Hollywood "physician".

When it came to the preliminaries, that's where the fun was enjoyed by some 1,000 patrons of the grunt and groan and muscle-bending business. For instance Al Dunlop (Bunny to you) played tricks and made the patrons dislike him more than ever before he knocked Joe Christie down with little trouble.

Why Babe Zaharias, one of a family of wrestlers took time off to get rough with Tom Collins from Buffalo you'll never know. However, the second best man in the Zaharias family managed to draw the wrath of Referee Cliff Fox upon his head and there's little more to report about that.

Promoter Frank Tunney passed through Belleville enroute to Montreal to pass along the word he had in mind bringing Yvonne Robert either to Belleville or Toronto.

(So, keep your fingers crossed.)

London — (CP) — A brown three-cent Newfoundland stamp, known as the "Hawker" issue and bearing the mark "First Transatlantic Air Post May 18, 1919." realized $1,350 at a stamp sale here. The stamp was from a private collection.

MAJOR LEAGUE CLUBS OUT AFTER BATTERYMEN

$137,500 Spent by Owners at Annual Draft Meeting Wednesday

Chicago, Nov. 2—(AP)—Baseball's major league strategists, already preparing for their fourth wartime season, apparently are determined to keep their batteries well-charged this winter.

When officials of 13 clubs spent $137,500 in less than 15 minutes at their annual draft meeting yesterday, they went hot and heavy after pitchers and catchers, who comprised 10 of the 19 players selected from minor leagues.

Neither of St. Louis' 1944 champions, the Cardinals and the Browns, made a bid. Only other club that did not dip into the minor league barrel was Detroit, although the Tigers sought unsuccessfully to draft pitcher Alex Mustaikis of Toronto.

The Senators, Philadelphia Athletics, Boston Braves and Chicago White Sox drafted two players each, while the Phillies, New York Giants, Cleveland Indians, Chicago Cubs, Boston Red Sox, New York Rangers, Pittsburgh Pirates and Cincinnati Reds bought one apiece. The total of 19 draftees was three more than last year when $110,000 was poured into minor league coffers.

Seventeen players were from class AA leagues purchased at the fixed $7,500 price tag. One was a $6,000 class A buy and the other a class B player at $4,000.

Among International League players drafted were outfielder Walt Chipple of Montreal, who hit .288 last season, and was claimed by Washington; catcher Leroy Jarvis of the Royals who hit .277 for Trenton in 1943, and was bagged by Pittsburgh; and catcher Herb Crompton of Toronto, a .287 batter and a valuable clutch hitter, who fell to the New York Yanks.

SOUTH AFRICA WILL ENCOURAGE TOURISTS

Johannesburg, Nov. 2 — (CP) — Visitors from other African territories to the Union of South Africa during war years have exceeded the numbers of pre-war overseas visitors, according to the annual report of the Johannesburg Publicity Association. Figures for 1943 are [illegible] as compared with 33,644 for 1937.

South Africa is now a credit country in the travel industry since the outflow of nationals has been virtually stopped by war conditions. The future is regarded as hopeful with the lead coming from the Tourist Development Association. The aim will be to maintain the present favorable position in Africa and to regain the northern hemisphere traffic.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Stop Me If.

"Yonder," said the Town Oracle, "in the sheltering branches of that oak tree lies the laziest man in this community."

"Oh, now," said the stranger charitably, "you may be too harsh in your judgment. After all, it's a hot day. What's the harm of catching a little nap?"

"Nap, heck!" snapped the Oracle. "Do you know how that lazy loafer got up into that tree? Well, I'll tell you. Thutty years ago he laid hisself down on an acorn."

A Good Pattern.

One reason why Oshawa has been going place in hockey for years can be found in the following paragraph by George Campbell in the Oshawa sport column: "The Oshawa Minor Hockey Association held its organization meeting for the 1944-45 season on Thursday night at the Hotel Genosha and made ready for another term of keen activity in helping to keep the young lads of Oshawa off the streets in wintertime, give them supervised healthy recreation and an opportunity of developing their hockey talents and in some cases commencing what will perhaps prove a sports career. Better known to Oshawa hockey fans and local lads as the "City League" this organization has been fostering hockey in "Canada's greatest Junior hockey city" for about fourteen years now and they have made improvements and advances almost every season. To our knowledge, this is the finest youth-sport organization in the country and has been a big factor in Oshawa's sport life for many years and incidentally has contributed a fair share of players to higher puck ranks, though most of them are now wearing the King's uniform in one branch of the service or another. "Army" Armstrong was again named president and most of the hard-working individuals who have "carried the "City League" for the past few years, were also returned to their offices. Oshawa will be represented in the Ontario Minor Hockey Association playoffs this season, in Bantam, Midget and Juvenile ranks and at Thursday night's meeting the president, secretary and treasurer were named as delegates to attend the O. M. H. A. annual meeting next month."

Ever Thus.

Arthur (New York Times) Daly comes up with a new football story regarding the old "Four Horsemen and Seven Mules" of Notre Dame. Arthur's story goes—"Knute Rockne was a bit perturbed at the avalanche of publicity his famed Four Horsemen received because he realized that the Seven Mules in the line were of considerable help to the backs. It was en route to the Rose Bowl, Notre Dame's only Bowl venture, that Rock became even more alarmed at the way the Horsemen were being glamorized in the public prints and the Mules snubbed. So he assembled his first team and put it to a vote: Which was the more valuable, the Four Horsemen or the Seven Mules? This balloting, it might be interposed, was typical of Rock's impish sense of humor. As you may have guessed, the Mules won, seven votes to four."

Then there was the time when Rockne deliberately started the Horsemen behind a second-string line and the backfield quartet bogged down. In came the Seven Mules, each wearing a grin which stretched from ear to ear. As soon as the first play was run off, Adam Walsh said sweetly, "Having a little trouble, boys? And do you need some help?" There was no answer.

Remember When.

John A. Heydler, for 15 years president of the National Baseball League, resigned that office ten years ago due to ill health. Ford C. Frick, sports writer at the time, took over the post on No. 8th of the same year and is still president of the senior baseball circuit.

Perfect Match.

The Reliance boxing promoters made little mistake in signing Hub Smith and "Jibber" Ellis for their main attraction on Friday night's mitt show. Smith, besides being 1936 Olympic runner-up has since gained for himself considerable reputation as a two-fisted scrapper while in the Air Force. He is 145-pound champion of the No. 1 Training Command of the R. C. A. F. On the other hand Ellis has beaten all of the Army boxers at his weight in the Toronto area and packs lethal blows in both fists. Also, it seems our own Rance Bush has battled his way out of the lightweight class and was forced to give away eight pounds in order to get Crabby Crandell of Oshawa, in the same ring as the semi-final go of the night.

Sgt. Hub Smith To Meet Ellis In Main Scrap

Tossing the cream of the Army and Air Force welterweight scrappers into the same ring as principals for their third fight card, the promoters of the Reliance Boxing Club signed Sergt. Hub Smith, welterweight champion of the No. 1 R.C.A.F. training command, to meet "Jibber" Ellis, 147 pound champion of the Army, for the feature fight at the Hume Arena Friday night.

Ellis is a willing two-fisted scrapper who should give the highly touted Smith a battle the whole distance. The fight is over the extended period of four rounds. Smith has the ring reputation of packing dynamite in both fists and boasts of a long list of ring decisions in Canada and the United States. This bout is undoubtedly a feature attraction as it brings together the best mittslingers from the two armed services in Canada.

Leading up to the main go sees Belleville's own Rance Bush, undefeated in five consecutive bouts, meeting Crabby Crandell, the crafty Oshawa scrapper in the semi-final. In order to procure opposition Bush had to concede some eight pounds to obtain a bout, but is confident he can hold his own against his heavier Motor City opponent.

Six other outstanding inter-city bouts are included on the preliminary card.

WELL, LUSHWELL, I'M GLAD TO SEE THE ARM'S BETTER AND THAT YOU'RE BACK ON THE JOB. ER—HOW DID THAT HAPPEN AGAIN?
I WAS DOIN' A LITTLE PLASTERING JOB IN THE RUMPUS ROOM AN' I FELL OFF THE LADDER. IT'S LOTS BETTER NOW. I CAN RAISE IT JUST A LITTLE.
I'LL SAY HE WAS DOIN' A PLASTERING JOB. AS I GET IT, HE WALKED OUT A NIGHT CLUB WINDOW, THINKING IT WAS THE DOOR.
IT WAS THE NIGHT HE FELL OFF THE WAGON—NOT THE LADDER. AND WOW! DID HE FALL!
LUSHWELL CAN'T GET THE RIGHT MITT UP TO HIS CAFÉ ANYMORE HE HAS TO TAKE THE STUFF THROUGH A HOSE.
HE WAS FEELING NO PAIN. HE DIDN'T KNOW HE HAD A BROKEN ARM UNTIL HE WOKE UP NEXT MORNING.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Nov. 2 — (CP) — With the days getting crisper and crisper the season for hockey hall of fame discussions surely must be upon us again, although as yet the expected arguments haven't started for the winter.

On the serious side, though, captain Jim Sutherland of Kingston, Ont., has come out with an instructive piece of literature on the origin of the game that takes the chronological data back to 1813 at least. He quotes a little-known work by the late Duke of Beaufort that gives credit for inaugurating ice hockey, or "bandy," to the stout citizens of Bury Fen. That community of note wasn't a suburb of Hamilton, Montreal or Halifax, but happened to be situated in the twin parishes of Bluntisham-Cum-Earith in the agricultural county of Huntingdonshire.

The good people of Bury Fen, there is reason to believe, galloped about the ice with their bandy sticks playing a "game much like hockey" even before skates were invented. However, after they equipped themselves with runners, the early historian recorded, they "could rush over the ice at a great pace, could suddenly stop and as suddenly start, could turn and dodge at full speed and maintain a pace impossible on land, then enthusiasm for bandy was assured; it became in fact . . . the most fascinating of games."

Any doubts that bandy wasn't the great-grandfather of hockey were dispelled when the rules of the early game were studied. Some of them were: the stick must not be more than two inches wide at any part (compared with 3 1/2 inches as at present); no player could raise his bandy above his shoulder for purposes of mayhem or otherwise, and only the goaler could hit the ball while in midair; there was a regular offside rule although no player was offside as long as he stayed within his own half of the ice; the game was started by the referee throwing the ball in the centre of the ice; and each team was limited to 11 players.

There's quite a similarity between those rules and present regulations, enough to prove this was the same game that later was brought to Canada by the Imperial troops who were garrisoned at Halifax, Kingston and Montreal.

Shinny is even rung into the matter, since the historian says it undoubtedly was the forerunner of bandy. The original game was played in the village street and was much like field hockey, except a great deal more boisterous. As our authority says, it was a "rough and ready frolic."

Hull Volants And Commandos To Change Loops

Ottawa, Nov. 2 — (CP)—Ottawa Commandos and Hull Volants will play in the Quebec Senior Hockey League this season despite the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's ruling that the Volants should remain with the Ottawa Senior City Hockey League, James P. McCaffrey, manager of Commandos, said today.

"The public has shown that it wants the type of hockey the Quebec league provides and regardless of the C.A.H.A. ruling we are going ahead," he said. The disbarment of players and executives of the clubs by the C.A.H.A. would not affect many and such disbarment would only be from C.A.H.A. controlled hockey.

Hull has played for several years in the Ottawa district league, but decided to transfer to the Quebec League this season. Commandos, a former district league entry, have played in the Quebec League for several years.

DOVER GUNNERS SCORE BULLSEYE

With Canadian Army in France, Nov. 2 — (CP)— The long-range gunners of Dover should take a bow.

When Canadian Maritime infantry captured the Germans trans-channel guns at Sangatte near Calais they found one of them put completely out of action and German prisoners told them that a shell from Dover had scored the 1,000 to 1 chance hit by going smack into the opening of the gun casement.

LESSON NO. 321

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

There is a time and a place for everything. Even for an immediate game bid in a suit; four in a major or five in a minor. In the right place at the right time, it could steal the show.

Each kind of an opening bid has its purposes. Each shows some fixed minimum basis of its own. Each shows some special features that are distinctive unto itself alone.

One in a suit shows better than average in all items. Two in a suit shows enough for a game. Three in a major or four in a minor shows a long-strong suit and some outside strength.

A four-bid (four in a major or five in a minor) admits having a long suit of seven or more cards. But it differs from the other bids in three features.

One is that it denies having enough for a lower bid of one or two or three. Another is that it denies having strength. Another is that it denies expectation of making its bid.

Such a bid does not admit or deny having strength in its long suit. If the suit has strength, it denies having outside strength. With outside strength, it denies having strength in the suit.

A bid like that is made with the avowed intention of going down in defeat. The bid is in the hopes that the loss will not be more than opponents could have made at their own bid.

When this bid sticks strictly to rule, it shows a hand that may take eight tricks if that suit is trump. But it promises no tricks in anything else.

Make faces at this hand:

♥ K Q 10 9 8 6 3 2

It is not a one bid or two bid or three bid. Pass. If you bid four hearts with it, do it in the right place at the right time.

A four bid hurts a lot unless it hits the spot.

BLACK HAWKS SHOW REAL SKILL IN 8-3 VICTORY

Scoring Power Apparent in the Second and Third Periods

By ERIC SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Any doubts that Paul Thompson's Chicago Black Hawks lack the scoring punch and will to win that last year carried them into the National Hockey League finals can be shelved.

The 1944-45 edition of the windy city's Stanley Cup contenders last night came from behind a 1-0 first period deficit to register an 8-3 victory over New York Rangers.

Just prior to schedule-opening it was believed Thompson would ice a much weakened team because of the loss of such players as Doug Bentley, ace winger on the line with Clint Smith and Billie Mosienko; Cully Dahlstrom; George Allen and Art Wiebe.

However, the addition of Pete Horeck on the line with Smith and Mosienko paid off last night as the trio accounted for three of the 8 goals, each netting one. Smith, former Ranger centre, assisted in three other goals, Horeck in two, and Mosienko in one.

The Hawks, although controlling most of the play in the opening period, were unable to score and ended the session trailing 1-0. Big Bucko MacDonald counted for Rangers just after the seven-minute mark.

Smith, who manager Lester Patrick took to the Rangers several years ago, started the victory march for Hawks three minutes and goals by Mosienko, Horeck, Lude Check, and Harvey Fraser followed with almost lightning-like rapidity. Check, acquired this year from Montreal Canadiens, also rammed home another during the last minute of play to give the Hawks a 6-1 lead going into the final period.

Veteran defenceman Earl Seibert drove home Chicago's last two goals. Fred Hunt and Grant Warwick netted for Rangers, after the Hawk pressure relaxed.

TWILIGHT TEAR EASY WINNER OF PIMLICO SPECIAL

Three-Year-Old Queen Will Likely be Horse of the Year

Baltimore, Nov. 2 (AP)—Twilight Tear, today apparently headed for selection as the horse of 1944, will have another year in which to go after Top Flight's $275,900 earnings record for their sex.

The Tear, first filly ever to start in the Pimlico special, romped home ahead of Devil Diver and Megogo yesterday to win a $25,000 purse and boost her winnings to $202,165 in two years of racing in which she has won 18 of 23 starts.

Trainer Ben Jones of Warren Wright's Calumet Farms said after the race "we can't afford to retire her" and that she would compete for another year. The Tear may make one more start this season at Pimlico, he added.

Running as smoothly as if she were on ball bearings, the three-year-old queen won by six lengths over Greentree Stable's Devil Diver, one of 144's top handicap performers. It was the biggest margin of victory in the eight years of the special.

Megogo, from H. L. Lunger's Christiana Stables, was clearly outclassed and finished another 10 lengths back.

The Tear made it look simple, and not until the time was posted did the crowd of 12,961 realize how fast she had been travelling. A clocking of 1:56 3-5 equalled the special record made by Seabiscuit in his match with War Admiral and was only one-fifth off Riverland's track standard.

The Tear was the favorite, paying $3.30 for $2.

Pueblo, Colo.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey, 80, one-time featherweight and lightweight boxer who reputedly knocked out Young Corbett and handed Abe Attell a boxing lesson, died Tuesday night. Corbett later became world lightweight champion. Dempsey was not related to William Harrison (Jack) Dempsey, former heavyweight titleholder.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Nov. 2 —(AP)— There's always something going on in Brooklyn . . . General Manager Tom Gallery and ex-coach Pete Cawthon of the Football Tigers still were exchanging words hot enough to make the Gowanus Canal boil when Branch Rickey, at whom the Bleacher Birds have been bellering "cheap, cheap," all season, come along and buys a quarter interest in the Dodgers. . . . Some of the customers probably will say that's the only thing Branch has bought all season. . . . At any rate, it wasn't a small amount that Rickey put up for a share in the club that hasn't paid dividends in years. . . . When Max Meyer was negotiating for the club last Spring he was ready to pay $260,000 for the same block of stock.

Everything was Jake.

Alex Robb of the Thoroughbred Racing Associations (Inc.) comes up with this one about Jacob Pincus, a famous horse trainer in the old days and later a race starter. . . . Seems that one day at Jerome Park, Pincus was having trouble with a start, especially with a horse ridden by an English amateur rider . . . Finally Pincus sent the field away but the Englishman was left . . . Hoping it was a false start, the amateur asked: "Is it a 'go' Mr. Pincus?" . . . "Yes," said Jacob, pointing up the track, "and I think they went that way."

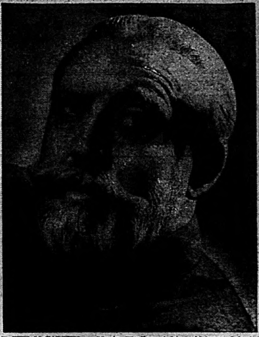
Del Bissonette, former member of the Brooklyn Dodgers, has been signed as coach of Boston Braves of the National Baseball League. Bissonette, who managed Hartford in the Eastern League last season, replaces Tom Sheehan, who resigned.

Gordon (Moose) Sherritt, defenceman for Indianapolis Capitals of the American Hockey League, has been rejected for the third time by the Canadian Army, the club management announced last night. Sherritt is expected to return from London, Ont., in time for the Capitals' game with Buffalo tonight.



AT THE McCARTHY — Monty Woolley at his acid-tongued best in David O. Selznick's panorama of the home front, "Since You Went Away," now at the McCarthy Theatre.

Tommy Gorman, manager of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, said yesterday the Habitants would not part with Bob Fillion "at any price," and that Johnny Mahaffy and Nils Tremblay still were property of the Montreal club. He was commenting on a Toronto report that quoted manager Art Ross of the Boston Bruins as saying the Bruins would "talk business" with the three players and Rosie Rozzini if the players showed they would improve the present Boston lineup.

Gorman said Rozzini had been made a free agent and that Mahaffy probably would try out with the Bruins, after which a deal may be made.

The Winnipeg Tribune said yesterday an east-west services rugby football playoff might be played in Winnipeg late this month if Toronto Navy wins the championship of the Eastern Canada Services League. The series would be played with the winners of the Manitoba Armed Services League, either Winnipeg No. 3 Wireless School or Rivers, Man., No. 1 Central Navigation School.

HOCKEY SCHEDULE DRAWN

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

"Jimmy darling", Verna broke in. "Let's dance". And when they were dancing she leaned her head in mock weariness on his shoulder. "Boy, what a bull session", she said. Jimmy grinned weakly and thought of Margaret asking Punchy about Tiger Moths. That was what he wanted, he realised but he couldn't quite put his finger on just where the trouble lay, or just why Verna seemed very unimportant now, and her beauty merely something to look at. He hadn't realised the difference between being beautiful and being lovable, between love and fascination, between shallowness and wittiness on the one hand and true deep love and quiet interest and sincerity on the other. He had not known those things, but he was learning fast. He was learning too fast, growing up too swiftly, and it was all on account of the war. Verna, he was to learn, was not the type for war.

They said they put the steady plugging stolid lads on multiple engines in Service Flying Training School and the daredevils with a flair for acrobatics on singles—but it wasn't a hard fast rule. Punchy was as slow and stolid as they came but he was on single engine at Service Flying Training School with Jimmy when they went back . . . potential Fighter Pilot material.

In Service Flying it was "Beware of the Hun out of the Sun"; and they flew Harvards, fast little yellow ships hat droned along at two-twenty-five and dove at three-twenty-five, roaring their variable pitch props as they gave the tyros a foretaste of the hot chips, the Spits and Hurries, Warhawks, Beaufighters, Typhoons and Thunderbolts that were to come. They flew charted courses cross country and they flew at night and did aerobatics and he stood in the sun after ten weeks of it and couldn't help feeling a little proud somehow when "Billy" Bishop himself, who happened to be down at the Coast, pinned the double wings on his chest and the band played. This was it. He was a pilot. That was at Moncton and Embarkation leave was just ten days. He held a hurried council of war with Punchy. They could just make it. They hopped the next train.

It was packed with uniforms and as they walked down the aisles everybody was friendly, including the boys playing Blackjack. "Hit me. . .another. . .that's it".

"Hit me—easy—too much, brother, too, much".

"Another,— another— another — I can't miss fella, another, that's it, five under".

Jimmy dropped a couple of bucks but he didn't feel like playing anyhow. He sat at the window and watched the scenery rolling endlessly by and thought. I'm going over. Verna'll see it my way now. She's got to. She's got to. I've got to have something. He phoned her from the station.

"Where you off to?" Punchy asked him when he came out of the booth. Jimmy grinned.

"I'm going to get engaged". Punchy grinned back. "Good luck fella. See you later."

It called for the family hack and they drove out to the Chateau and danced and ate. Jimmy, he said, it's now or never. You've got to have something to come home to. He grabbed her hand and they went out and drove along the back road and he parked. Verna was lovely and he wanted her now very much and the superficial letters were forgotten. She hadn't understood but she would now. He knew. He kissed her and said, "Verna, I love you darling. I love you. I want you more than anything. Will you marry me?" And he wondered why she just stared at him, with her lovely mouth open. He kissed her again and said brother, you're in. But he wasn't.

When she found her voice he listened to her, far away, saying. "Oh, Jimmy, that's impossible. After all you're going overseas and you know what it'll be like. We can't get engaged now". She stared at him as he looked straight ahead, and he tried hard not to think at all. She put her hand on his arm. "It's crazy, Jimmy. What security is there? What future? We've only started to live, Jimmy", she insisted. But he just sat there, staring straight ahead. Future? Security? Hell.

Verna put her arm around his neck and dragged his head down. "You're just a little excited, that's all, Jimmy. And you are sweet", she said, and she kissed him—but it wasn't the same. He didn't want to kiss Verna anymore. He tried not to think as they drove home. He was very glad he was so tired that he fell asleep right away—he was twenty but he felt as if he were going to cry.

At six-thirty he woke up automatically and thumbed his nose at the clock, said 'to hell with you' to an imaginary bugler, rolled over and went to sleep. At ten-thirty he woke up again out of a light doze and stretched lazily and comfortably in the warm bed; and then sank back and just lay there, perfectly content and comfortable and forgot about everything but not having to get up and shave in cold water and run and do things. The next thing he knew it was eleven. He rolled out of the side of the bed and stretched again and he could feel the muscles along his stomach reacting pleasantly, quivering a little, glowing. He sauntered into the bathroom and took a slow shower, not hot, not cold and then shaved and felt very good after it with the smell and coolness of the shave lotion on his face. He rubbed his hand along his smooth cheek and felt like purring. Then he went downstairs and into the kitchen. His mother was there, frying him up some eggs and bacon and he kissed her behind the ear.

"Morning mom", he said, and she laughed a little and said, "Oh, James", and almost stopped looking at the pan. He drank some orange juice and then ate breakfast and went into the parlor and switched on the radio. It was that regular recording broadcast he hadn't heard for so long and he just easily sat in a big chair and smoked the cigarette that tasted best of all during the day, and didn't think at all. They were mostly old records but he liked them best. Hell, you're living in the past he told himself, grinned, but when it was Artie Shaw playing 'Temptation' he smiled even more. Brother, he said to himself, you don't know how lucky you are. All it cost you was some time and money . . .but Margaret, not Margaret. Hell no, she'll understand. All a big mistake, that's all. But just the same he was somehow a little uneasy when he finally went to phone her. He heard the bell ringing in her house. Margaret's house, and suddenly he realized how he really loved her, wanted her, her loveliness. He wondered too how he could have been so absolutely 'off the beam'. Still it had happened.

"Hello".

"Hello, Margaret?"

"Yes, speaking".

"This is Jimmy, how are you?"

"Oh, hello Jimmy. I'm fine, how are you?" He thought her voice sounded funny somehow, almost uneasy and frightened, but dismissed that to his own strangely pounding heart.

"Right in there", he said, and chuckled. He wasn't scared any more. This was Margaret. She'd understand. After all she loved him and it was a great day. . . the sun shone through onto the little telephone table and onto the bright flowers Elaine had put there. There was almost dew on them.

"Say", he continued. "How's for welcoming a lost wolf back into the fold". There was no answer for a moment, then he heard her gasp.

Then, "Oh, Jimmy, I'm terribly sorry. . ."

"What's wrong, dated up?"

"Yes, Jimmy. I've already promised Punchy. . ."

"Oh. . ." He disregarded the sudden pounding of his heart, the sudden bitterness that was swelling up inside him. Forget it, James me boy, he said to himself. She's only a girl and there are hundreds of them; but at the same time he knew that he was wrong and that there was only one Margaret.

"That's OK darling, just thought I'd phone. See you around". He didn't hear what she said in reply. He waited for the click and then he hung up and went gack to the parlor and listened to radio some more but he didn't hear that either. She cold have broken that date. . . no, she couldn't. Not Margaret. She wasn't that kind. Not with Punchy anyway. Punchy was a great guy, salt of the earth. Don't get down in the mouth, Jamesy, he said. You can phone her again. Why didn't you make a date for tomorrow night, Bullhead. You can phone her again anyhow. And in the meanwhile you're on Embarkation leave, fella, and you can go and get drunk, good and stinking, thoroughly plastered, with at least three sheets to the wind, absolutely tanked, and very very very high, fried, and boiled. But when he got to the Club he couldn't. It wasn't any use. He crossed the street and tried the Piccadilly.

"Jimmy", somebody screamed and the party was on. It was Cus and Chet and Gus and all the gang who were in town and who had some of the girls with them. Including an extra one. It was great.

"You old wolf. What the hell have you been doing anyway? Overseas? Do you hear that kids, he's going overseas. This calls for a celebration". They ended up at the Room some time later. The little girl who clung to his arm with eyes glued enormously on the wings on his tunic was small and blonde and plump and she laughed a good deal. She called him 'Jimmy darling', and went so far as to say sadly that she would sure miss him when he went overseas. He liked her a lot and he laughed too. It was good for the soul even though he had known her for all of five hours. He was reflecting humorously on Barrie's lines.

"'Tis the front towards life that matters most
The aim, the point of view;
The constancy, that in defeat
Remains untried and true. . ."

when Punchy walked in with Margaret; and he was in a mood to laugh with the little blonde girl and to say "Oh hello there', when they came over, and then turn back to the party. He didn't think about Margaret, at least he tried not to. He didn't want to make a scene. Perhaps in the back of his mind he told himself 'you can phone her tomorrow'. But Punchy's words stopped that.

Rundown Man Surprised With Syntona Results

Was Unable to Work or Sleep Because of Sore, Swollen, Aching Joints and Muscles. Condition Followed Years of Stomach Gas, Acid Indigestion, Headaches and Dizzy Spells.

MR. VICTOR CLOUTHIER

"Because of the grand results I got by taking a treatment of Syntona, I am glad of this opportunity to recommend it to others," said Mr. Victor Clouthier, 76 Hamilton Road, London, Ontario, in a recent statement.

"For years I have been troubled with sour stomach, cramps, gas and bloat. I was subject to headaches and dizzy spells and I always had to be taking something for constipation. Then, these rheumatic pains set into my joints and muscles. The pains and stomach gas kept me from getting my proper sleep, so I had become very nervous and rundown. There was a bad taste in my mouth, my tongue was constantly coated and my skin was rough and pimply. I couldn't do any work because I felt so miserable all the time.

"I must admit I wasn't very hopeful when I began taking Syntona for I had tried so many remedies without getting any real benefits. But right from the first it settled my stomach and I liked the way it acted on my bowels so I thought even that much was well worth while. Now, after taking Syntona for a few weeks, I am surprised with the improvement in the way I feel. For the first time in four years I can enjoy my meals without all that stomach misery. I got relief from those rheumatic pains, my nerves are relaxed and I get a good night's sleep once more. I don't have those headaches and dizzy spells like I used to and I feel better in every way than I thought was ever possible again."

The above are often common results of disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Syntona is compounded to act on these four organs at the same time and the results that it gives are vouched for by thousands of delighted men and women who have used it. Make up your mind to begin taking this pure herbal medicine today. See how much better you, too, can be feeling in just a short time.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Shipping Industry Has Eyes on Post-War Prospects

By JOHN DAUPHINEE

(A.P. Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 2 (C.P. Cable) — A statement in the House of Commons yesterday by A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, that the post-war shipping situation is not being overlooked in the midst of war responsibilities pressing upon the British cabinet is welcome reassurance to an industry which necessarily must face its most difficult days when peace is restored.

But it was only one of several official statements that the government recognizes the importance of shipping in peace-time economy in these islands. Such recognition has long been urged in action as well as words by shipping spokesmen.

Briefly, this is the picture which resulted from yesterday's Commons debate:

1. Britain no longer has the world's biggest navy. Her pre-war tonnage is cut in half by war losses—from 18,000,000 tons to perhaps 9,000,000, although exact figures remain a secret. United States tonnage in the meantime has risen from about 12,000,000 to an estimated 30,000,000 tons after the war.

2. Replacement of wartime losses with 10,000-ton utility ships left Britain with a surplus of these slow, large freight-carriers and a lack of smaller craft which carried out many pre-war services.

3. Wartime restrictions have meant virtually no passenger ships have been built in British yards since the war began, and it now is considered impossible to get British ships back on all passenger routes immediately the war ends.

4. Despite air transport advances, shipping still is the main factor in maintaining Britain's living standards, since she relies largely on export trades for external revenue, and imports huge quantities of raw materials and foodstuffs.

5. The merchant navy and shipbuilding industry have been providing employment directly and indirectly for about 2,000,000 men and women and much unemployment will result unless this industry remains active.

Demobilize Canadian Fire Fighters Overseas

Ottawa, Nov. 2—(CP)—National war services department today announced plans to demobilize the civilian corps of Canadian firefighters overseas.

Present strength of the corps is 342. The first group will leave the United Kingdom shortly and others will follow at brief intervals as stations are closed.

The announcement said conditions no longer made it necessary to maintain the corps as protection against enemy attacks and while some had volunteered for service with a special contingent to serve on the continent there was insufficient ground for them to remain overseas.

APPOINTED CHAIRMAN

Ottawa, Nov. 2 —(CP)— Pensions Minister Mackenzie today announced the appointment of Col. Dougall Carmichael of Ottawa as chairman of the War Veterans' Allowance Board. Col. Carmichael has been acting chairman of the Board since April, 1941.

A veteran of the First Great War he was a member of the original Board formed in 1930 and he remained on the Board until his enlistment in the present war in 1940.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Nov. 2 — (CP) — The gold stocks were strong in the early Toronto session today, posting an index gain of .46 at noon, while other groups were only slightly higher. Volume was 314,000 shares for the first three hours, a moderate decline from Wednesday's three-hour total.

Sizable gains were boarded in the gold group for Pickle Crow, Teck Hughes, Wright-Hargreaves, Aunor, Madsen, MacLeod-Cockshutt, Negus and some of the cheaper issues. Northland firmed 1 1/2 cents in active trading, Aubelle added a cent and Broulan 2.

Hudson Bay and Lake Dufault were stronger base metals and small fractions were dropped by Nickel and Noranda.

In the industrial section the utilities and steels were on the up side and other groups were steady. Bell Telephone firmed a point and Gatineau Pfd added 1 1/2.

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 2 — (AP)—Scattered rails, industrials and utilities achieved modest progress in today's stock market but some of the recently sprinting aircrafts stumbled over profit cashing. The new, including dividends, earnings and war front developments served as antiliquidating arguments and inspired a little bidding here and there.

Although fractional advances predominated near the fourth hour, minor losses were plentiful. Activity was slack throughout.

In front most of the time were Chicago & North Western Common and preferred, Southern Pacific, Chrysler, General Motors, Westinghouse, United Aircraft, International Harvester and Du Pont.

Canadian issues were slightly lower. Dome gained 1/8 but C. P. R., Seagrams and Lake Shores slipped that fraction.

Woman With Broom In Chase for 2 Steers

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 2 (AP) — A squad of policemen, the dog catcher, a cowboy, a group of howling youngsters and a housewife with a broom all joined in a chase after two steers which scattered terror among pedestrians about downtown Tulsa yesterday. The steers hurdled the side of a truck and trotted twelve blocks to the downtown district, occasionally lunging at citizens along the way. One ultimately was shot, the other lassoed under a viaduct. The housewife with the broom? Oh, she was irate, because one of the animals tracked up her nice clean porch.

"To remain ignorant about V.D. is to endanger not only your own health, but that of your family and your community."

Minister of Pensions and National Health.

From a statement March 28th., 1944

LET'S be quite frank.

When you read—as you probably did during the past few months—that more than 300,000 people in Canada have syphilis, what was your reaction? Did you say, "That's too bad; something should be done about it", and then turn to the comic page? Chances are you did.

But if that article had told you that Tommy Jones, the lad who used to mow your lawn after school had syphilis—how would you have felt about it? Or that the young couple who built that cute house in the next block, had just lost a baby through syphilis . . . would that have made you stop and think?

Or, if you suddenly discovered that your Mar - - . . . No? That couldn't happen? But it can. And it does . . . to hundreds of Tommies and Marys every year, right here in Canada. Right in your community. You'll never read articles like that, of course, for these are the personal tragedies that people bear in silence.

So, when you pick up the paper sometime and read, ". . . there were 5,000 new VENEREAL DISEASE cases reported in this province last year . . .", remember! These are not cold figures. They represent 5,000 heart-breaking . . . heart-aching situations.

Yes, VENEREAL DISEASE is a serious problem. It's a problem for parents; for taxpayers; for young people on the threshold of life; for everyone.

VENEREAL DISEASE need never strike if we all do our part. If we know the facts. If we use these facts to advantage. If we don't shrug our shoulders and say, "This couldn't happen to anyone in my family."

You have a duty to your family and the community.

PORT OF FLUSHING OVERRUN BY ALLIED UNITS

BRITISH FREIGHTER RIPPED BY 2 EXPLOSIONS

Most of Nazi Guns Holding Approach To Antwerp Taken

American Units Restore Bridgehead South of Meuse

London, Nov. 3 (CP) — British forces have overrun the fortified port of Vlissingen (Flushing) German stronghold on the south side of Walcheren Island commanding the entrance to the Schelde Estuary.

Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, reported in a field dispatch today that the town of 23,000 population fell after bitter street fighting which began Wednesday after British Commandos and infantry effected a landing. Most of the enemy guns on Walcheren commanding the Schelde approach to Antwerp have been captured, the dispatch said.

Only a few scattered snipers remained to harass 1st. Canadian Army forces on either side of the estuary mouth, entrance to Antwerp port.

British and American units smashing against the hard circle of German defenders holding south of the Maas (Meuse) on the road to Rotterdam, restored a bridgehead over the Little Mark River within six miles of the Moerdike bridge.

Germans Admit Loss

The German communique admitted that the German garrison in the Schelde pocket had been overwhelmed. A Nazi spokesman over the German Transocean agency said: "The towns of Middleburg, Domburg and Veere are in flames.

"Thus, the battle for the mouth of the Schelde and the Maas has been conluded for the time being. The storm centre on the western front has therefore switched to the West Vosges."

Southeast of Aachen, where the United States 1st. Army attacked on a limited front and broke thru' the Hurtgen Forest with gains of one to two miles yesterday, the Americans continued to advance today but against increasing resistance, Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters announced.

Battle Deep in Passes

On the southern reaches of the Allied front Allied troops battled deeper into the rising hills of the Vosges, capturing eight towns and villages and approaching to within from three to eight miles of the first towns inside six passed leading to the Rhine flatlands.

All the vital part of Walcheren Island was in Allied hands with the fall of Vlissingen, third port of Holland. Allied supreme headquarters announced that the Allied amphibious forces on the island which landed Wednesday at Westkapelle on the western tip and at Vlissingen had come to within two miles of a junction. Thus the coastal belt of dikes and dunes on the southwestern edge of the island where German guns were stationed, as well as the northwest corner, had been seized.

Win Foothold

British infantry battled forward under a crossfire at the western end of the narrow granite causeway connecting Walcheren with South Beveland and won a foothold two miles southwest of the causeway.

Some hard fighting evidently remained before every German is driven from Walcheren, an island eight miles long. German forces were still in Domburg, at the northwest corner of the island where there was street fighting, and at Middleburg, in the centre of the island.

Three Harbors Available.

Capture of Vlissingen, formerly a great fortress in The Netherlands' battles for independence, placed at the disposal of the Allies three harbors, a commercial port and shipbuilding and machine-building facilities.

The battle for the Schelde Mouth, which began Oct. 6, when Canadians crossed the Leopold Canal, also saw the clearing of the last snipers out of Zeebrugge, the capture in rapid succession of Knocke, L'Eclue (Sluis) and Heyst, and the liberation of the last inch of Belgian territory. Captured were 12,244 Germans—more than were estimated in the entire German force when the battle began.

The 1st Canadian army's total bag since D-Day had now climbed to just over 100,000 prisoners.

At the eastern fringe of the Allied front in Holland, British troops probed into the outskirts of Meijel, 12 miles west of The Netherlands border town of Venlo, and found the enemy had pulled back toward the Maas after several days of exhausting counter-attack.

Meijel and Liesel—the latter already recaptured by the British 2nd Army—were taken by the Germans at the highwater mark of this thrust, aimed at distracting Allied attention in Western Holland.

Infantry of the U.S. 7th Army and Poilus of the French 1st Army battled forward on a 14-mile front southeast of Nancy and northeast of Epinal on the approaches of all three of the northernmost Vosges Passes.

Advance Five Miles.

They had advanced five miles at places in the last 24 hours. Baccarat, 32 miles southeast of Nancy, was seized in a tank battle along with the villages of Gelacourt, Domjevin, Deneuvre, Bazien, Nossoncourt and Menil-Sur-Belvitte on either side of Baccarat.

This placed the Allies within four miles of Raon L'Etape, first town inside Schirmeck pass to Strassbourg.

Farther south, Americans captred La Bourgonce, six miles northeast of St. Die, first town inside the Ste. Marie pass.

Gains also were made in the bend of the Moselotte, where the Allies were within six miles of Gerardmer in the Schulcht Pass.

Allied forces were within three miles of Moyenm Tier in the Saales Pass, eight miles from Fraise in Bonhomme Pass, and five miles from Bussang in Bussang Pass, north of Belfort.

Panic Prevails in Budapest As Russians Close in on City

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Nov. 3 —(AP)— Russian tanks, guns and men rumbled today toward the outskirts of Budapest, where front dispatches said panic prevailed as the noise of battle swelled 23 miles away.

The Red Army already was smashing into the outer defences of the ancient city of 1,162,800 on the Danube. At Domsod, the Russians were within 100 miles of the Austrian frontier and 140 of Vienna.

The Russians were pushing toward the Hungarian capital's southeastern limits. The main drive was along the concrete highway from Kecskemet, although other columns were converging from other directions.

(The German communique said a fierce battle was in progress against Soviet infantry and tank formations "advancing in the direction of Budapest" from northwest of Kecskemet and that difficult weather hampered air support.)

In five days, the Red Army had advanced 50 miles over the level Hungarian plain, one of Germany's greatest breadbaskets. The opposing German and Hungarian forces were reported to have lost half their trucks and a large share of their ranks as well as 8,000 prisoners recently.

Sixty Towns Seized.

Northeast of Budapest Russian columns cleared the enemy from a 85-mile section of the eastern bank of the middle Tisza River, on a front between Csap on the Czechoslovakian border and reaching to captured Polgar, 93 miles from the imperilled capital.

Sixty towns and villages were seized in the advance on Budapest from the south and the enemy was rolled back on a 60-mile front. The capture of 2,080 prisoners, including Col.-Gen. Janus Voeroes, former Hungarian Chief of Staff, brought the total for the first three days of the offensive to 7,518.

It was believed here that Red Army advance columns might already have speared across the Tisca northeast of Budapest in a drive to link up with forces to the south for an all-out assault on the city.

CANUCK FRIGATES IN COLLABORATION SINK GERMAN SUB

Saint John Given Special Credit And Swansea Figures In Third 'Kill'

Ottawa, Nov. 33 (CP) — Navy Minister Macdonald announced today that the Canadian frigates Saint John and Swansea have collaborated in the sinking of a German submarine.

It was not indicated where or when the action took place. Both ships have been congratulated by the admiralty for their destruction of the U-boat, the Saint John receiving "special credit for the tenacity" with which she carried out the lengthy series of attacks which resulted in concrete evidence of the U-boat's destruction.

For the Swansea, it was the third time the frigate had been in at the kill in an anti-submarine battle. Her two previous successes were announced earlier this year.

The Saint John is commanded by Lt. Cmdr. William R. Stacey of Vancouver, and the Swansea by Cmdr. Clarence A. King of Oliver, B.C.

The Saint John steamed into a south England port recently with indisputable evidence of the successful attack.

When first contact was made the Saint John probed around, dropping its first pattern of depth charges. Two more patterns were dropped at intervals, but the frigate still maintained contact. An oil slik appeared on the water early in the action, but nothing decisive could be assumed from oil indications until a later pattern was dropped.

Seconds after this explosion a tremendous gushing of oil was seen, followed by the appearance of considerable wreckage. A boat was lowered from the Saint John to probe the debris for evidence, but so thick was the oil that it completely obliterated everything from close range.

Articles taken from the waters included a German rubber life raft; a small wooden locker door complete with lock and key.

The morning following the attack, an oil slick stretching 2 1-2 miles could be seen from the bridge of the Saint John.

German People Told Their Country Soon To Be Battlefield

London, Nov. 3 (CP-Reuters)—Moscow radio today told the German people their country soon would become a battleground.

"Budapest has become merely a milestone and the Soviet Union troops are already shouting 'on to Germany'," the announcer said.

He added: "Many Germans are being killed in riots which have broken out in German-held Hungarian T.'."

The broadcaster concluded: "German's resistance in the Balkans has become absolutely futile."

LEYTE CAMPAIGN NEARLY ENDED SAYS MACARTHUR

Set Death Trap for Ormoc, Last Port of Flight for Japanese

By MURLIN SPENCER
Associated Press War Correspondent

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 3 —(AP)— Gen. MacArthur, from a room where an enemy flier's bullet missed his head by 12 inches, announced today the near end of the Leyte campaign as his land, sea and air forces set a death trap for Ormoc, last port of flight for the Japanese.

Just two weeks after he returned to the Philippines, MacArthur's four divisions were cornering bewildered enemy troops on Leyte's West Coast, pressing for a kill which would swell enemy casualties, already past 30,000.

Today's communique suggested attention was swinging to other islands of the Central Philippines, reporting attacks by four-engined bombers on Cebs and Negros, west of American holdings on Leyte and Samar.

The General had a close brush with death. A strafing Japanese plane sent a bullet into the wall of his room, just missing him.

Disaster fast engulfed the fleeing survivors of Japan's 16th Division which once tortured American and Filipino survivors of Bataan.

Carigara has fallen. A U. S. force crushed the enemy's last big stand south of the town yesterday and swept out of Leyte Valley to the northwest shore.

Climaxing 12 days of bloody fighting, triumphant troops rolled forward over a red-smeared highway to a juncture with a unit which battled into Carigara from the west.

The Japanese, hastening to reach Pinamopoan and turn south on the one escape highway to Ormoc, abandoned Capoocan west of smoking Carigara. Ormoc is about 25 miles south of the advancing invaders.

South of Ormoc on the West Coast, other forces cut across from Abuyog and reached Baybay. From there a coastal road leads 25 miles north to Ormoc.

OVER 30 MILLIONS AHEAD OF SIXTH VICTORY LOAN

Members of Corvette "Belleville" $1,400 Over Their Quota of $3,000

Ottawa, Nov. 3 (CP)—Canadians yesterday bought $84,043,400 worth of Seventh Victory Loan bonds to make the cumulative total for more than half the three-week drive $745,141,150 compared with about $715,000,000 at the same stage in the Sixth Loan when an all-time record of more than $1,400,000,000 was raised.

Individual Canadians rolled up a total of $36,630,750 to pass the half-way mark of the $643,000,000 which they raised in the Sixth Loan.

Officials said today that sales for the final eight days of this campaign must average about $86,000,000 daily if it is to be the largest loan in Canada's history.

New Brunswick joined other provinces and signed an application for $1,500,000 in bonds: This equals the province's record subscription in the Sixth Loan.

Within Million of Objective.

The Canadian Pacific Railway system was over the $7,500,000 mark today, 61,934 employees having subscribed a total of $7,579,900. The company is now within a $1,000,000, of its quota.

Two Saskatchewan regiments fighting in the western European war theatre have exceeded their quotas by good margins. They are the South Saskatchewans of Weyburn, with $47,150 for 151 per cent of a $31,000 quota, and the Regina Rifles with $30,500 for 113 per cent of a $27,000 quota.

Ships which are beginning their sixth winter of anti-submarine patrol and escort duty with the North Atlantic cargo convoys have subscribed at least $513,000, with reports from a number at sea lacking. The command as a whole has $2,955,000 for 110 per cent of a $2,688,000 quota.

On her maiden trip H.M.C.S. Belleville was greeted at Three Rivers, Que. by Mayor A. Rousseau and 15,000 citizens. Speaking from the bridge, Lt. Cmdr. J. Korning said the corvette's crew had subscribed $4,400 of a quota of $3,000.

208 NAZI PLANES DESTROYED BY AMERICANAIRMEN

1,000 Heavy Bombers Rain 4,000 Tons On German Armaments Centre of Dusseldorf

London, Nov. 3. — (CP) — One thousand R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavy bombers laid 4,000 tons of explosives and fire bombs last night on Germany's greatest arsenal of Dusseldorf after a day in which United States fighters of the 8th Air Force won "their greatest victory of the war over the Luftwaffe."

A special communique from U. S. Strategic Air Force Headquarters gave this description today and told of the destruction of 208 German aircraft over the synthetic oil centre of Merseburg. It scaled down American losses to 40 heavy bombers and 19 fighters. One bomber and nine fighters, previously listed as lost in yesterday's operations, landed safely at French bases. The communique said "still others probably landed behind our lines in Europe."

Fighter pilots destroyed 130 German interceptors in the air and 25 aground, some on Berlin airports 100 miles from Merseburg. Bombers shot down 53 while attacking the great Leuna synthetic oil plant, which once supplied Germany with 50,000 tons of petroleum products a month.

The German air force made one of its rare stands to protect the oil city, sending 500 planes to battle the armada of 2,000 attacking craft, 900 of which were fighters.

Switch to New Target.

The assault on Dusseldorf marked a switch to a new target in the heavily industrialized Ruhr area.

Airmen who left Dusseldorf a flaming mass of wreckage said the Germans attempted without avail to mislead bombers through use of dummy fires and decoy target indicators.

Sgts. J. Maguire, Toronto, and Bill Gardner of Sudbury, Ont., Goose Squadron gunners, destroyed a FW190 during the return trip. The fighter came in astern, was hit in the fuselage and fell in flames.

A Halifax of the Thunderbird Squadron piloted by FO. Jerry Fidler of Walkerton, Ont., fought off a pair of JU88s and registered hits during a running 45-minute fight.

"They teamed up, first one coming in, then the other, firing cannon from 500 yards," said Sgt. R. Baker of Toronto, a rear-gunner.

Flt.-Sgt. L. A. Thorndycraft of Winnipeg said his plane passed Oberhausen en route to Dusseldorf and "Oberhausen still was burning from the all-Canadian attack of the previous night."

Halifaxes and Lancasters of the Canadian bomber group destroyed one of the nine enemy night fighters shot down by the entire attacking force. An R.C.A.F. communique said many enemy planes

Italian Girl Rides Into Shell Hole, Sinks Over Head Into Water, Saved

By BILL BOSS
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians on the Adriatic, Nov. 3 — (CP Cable) — The rains came to the Canadian Corps area again yesterday, a deluge this time mercifully without strong winds.

Operations in this sector still are stalled, and more bridges needed by the Canadians for their advance have been carried downstream by the swelling currents of the coastal rivers.

Condition of the roads is typified by the jeep driven by Cpl. Eric Oen of Admiral, Sask. Proceeding yesterday along a lateral road joining coastal route No. 16, Oen was swishing along through water at least a foot deep.

An Italian girl cyclist was forging her way along the side of the road, umbrella in hand. Suddenly the girl disappeared from sight, with only the umbrella in view above the water. She had cycled into a shell crater concealed by the water.

She came to the surface once, disappeared and came up again. Sgmn. Morris Capel of Montreal, passenger in Oen's jeep, sprang out, dived fully clad into the water, grabbed her and shoved her to Pte. Ed Sander of Toronto, another passenger in the vehicle.

He then returned to the crater and retrieved the bicycle and the umbrella, hung the cycle around the jeep's spare tire, presented the sodden girl now resting in the back seat of the jeep with her umbrella and apologized for having broken it in the course of salvage.

Route 16 running toward Ravenna is blocked by German infantry and self-propelled guns, even if the weather would allow the Canadians to advance.

To the west, however, Canadian armored units cleared an enemy outpost, taking prisoners, including two German company commanders.

The action around the Forli airport is developing nicely, with Canadian tanks and infantry now surrounding the field on two sides. The enemy still is resisting strongly at the northeast and northwest corners, supported by tanks.

45 of Crew Missing And 17 Survivors Landed at Matane

Ship Outward Bound In St. Lawrence Below Quebec

Matane, Que., Nov. 3 — (CP) — Two explosions ripped through a Canadian-built freighter of British registry in the St. Lawrence River Thursday night, in what might have been the first revealed enemy action in the waterway since 1942.

Seventeen crew-men of the 10,000-ton ship landed at nearby Petite Matane early today after several hours of rowing across the swift St. Lawrence current. They believed that theirs was the only lifeboat to leave the ship and they were not sure of the fate of 45 officers and men still aboard the ship, when they pulled away.

The men, on deck at the time of the first or two blasts, got away soon after an order to abandon ship had been given. Ten minutes after they left they heard a second explosion, just as the current carried their boat out of sight of the freighter in the gloom.

There was no indication as to whether the explosions resulted from blasts within the ship — such as a boiler explosion — or whether the vessel had been attacked by a submarine or had run afoul of a mine. The crew-men reaching here said they were not able to determine whether the blasts were internal or external. Enemy U-boats accounted for 20 merchantmen and two warcraft in the St. Lawrence area during the summer and fall of 1942.

Matane is 235 miles below Quebec City on the south bank of the river, and the St. Lawrence is about 30 miles wide here. It widens gradually from Matane down to the point 100 miles below Matane where it becomes the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The ship was outward bound, sailing alone, at the time of the twin blasts.

OS. Sidney Langmead, one of the 17 survivors, said that he was on deck when the first explosion occurred "and the whole ship vibrated—no one seemed to know whether the explosion came from the boilers inside or from a torpedo outside."

Ordered to Abandon Ship

Immediately after the blast, the order was given to abandon ship, he said. The survivors all were in the first lifeboat to leave the ship, with the order to shove off coming from the vessel's first officer who remained on deck.

"We were adrift for about ten minutes when we heard a second explosion," said Langmead. "The ship went down fast after that and we could not tell if any other boats had gotten away. We were carried downriver quickly by the current and didn't see anything more of the rest of the crew." Langmead said the crew of the ship totalled 62. First reports placed the number at 65.

The survivors were all English-speaking. After rowing across the swift St. Lawrence current for six hours they reached land at nearby Petite Matane early this morning.

Subs May be in River

With the cause of the sinking remaining obscure, there was speculation along the River today as to whether German submarines had again penetrated the St. Lawrence area.

If the ship was torpedoed it was the first merchant vessel reported sunk in the St. Lawrence and its approaches since the Summer and Fall of 1942 when a heavy campaign of submarine action resulted in 20 sinkings.

In addition to the merchant ships, submarine victims that year included the Canadian corvette Charlottetown and the armed yacht Raccoon.

In addition, the heavy minesweeper Chedabucto was sunk in a convoy collision in the Gulf area the following summer.

One ship torpedoed in 1942 partially foiled the U-boat attacker by remaining afloat, with most of her bottom ripped out, until she could be beached. She later broke in two on the south shore of the St. Lawrence several miles below the location of the present sinking.

PONY KILLED BY MOVING TRUCK

A pony, owned by 12-year-old Robert Alexander, of 144 Station St., was killed after being run over at the intersection of Pinnacle and Station Sts. Thursday evening. The youthful Alexander lad, who was riding his pony at the time, escaped with by minor lacerations and injuries.

Floyd Goodfellow, Shannonville, the driver of the truck involved in the accident, told police he was about to make a righthand turn off Station St. to proceed into Pinnacle and did not see the actual impact. In some unknown manner the pony was knocked down with the rear wheel of the truck running over its head. The pony died almost instantly, police were told on their investigation. It goes without saying the little Alexander lad was deeply affected upon the loss of his pony, to which he had become firmly attached.

WOLVES PLENTIFUL IN NORTH HASTINGS

North Hastings farmers are beginning to take toll of marauding wolves that of late have been raiding sheep and cattle both individually and in packs.

County Treasurer James Haggerty has received two large pelts of the grey killers, which were brought down near Coe Hill and Fort Stewart respectively. Bounties will be paid.

The wolves are reported to be more plentiful than usual in various areas of the northern part of the county. Raids have proved damaging and a number of sheep have either been killed or so severely injured that they had to be destroyed.

PRISONER OF WAR PICTURES BRING HAPPINESS TO MOTHER

When Flying Officer Bill Stephenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Stephenson, 105 Great St. James Street, sat for his photograph in a German prison camp a few months ago, he little dreamed that the picture would bring untold happiness to the mother of one of his fellow prisoners of war.

A print of the photograph was sent to Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson here, who in turn sent it to a prisoners of war publication which published it.

The mother of one of the airmen pictured in the print recognised her son in the picture. She had received information that he had been captured by the enemy but had had no word from his for months, or since his capture for that matter.

Flying Officer Stephenson was shot down behind the enemy lines during the North African campaign and taken prisoner. He is now in Lufte 3 prison camp.

CUSTOMS RETURNS SHOW INCREASE

An increase of $31,690.15 in customs returns for the Belleville office for the month of October, 1944, as compared to the corresponding period last year has been shown according to the monthly report from the local office. Returns for the past month totalled $305,570.65, and compared with $273,880.50 for October last year.

WINNER OF BICYCLE SOLD 3,800 TICKETS

Owing to an error the number of tickets sold by the winning girl in the Kinsmen Hallowe'en Shell-Out contest was reported to be approximately 3,100, when actually the number should have read over 3,800. The winner, Shirley Mifflin, received a bicycle as first prize offered for the girls. Several other girls came close to equalling the winner's sales record and parents seeing the 3,100 figure quoted in the Ontario Intelligencer protested to Kinsmen officials.

POLICE BLOTTER

As the result of too much Hallowe'en spirit Floyd Dainard and Neal Sawyer, Belleville, were charged with disorderly conduct and admitted to their folly. Today in city police court, held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, the names of Sawyer and Dainard were called at which time it was disclosed they had paid the minimum fine of two dollars and costs prior to the opening of court.

"It was just one of those cases of too much Hallowe'en spirit, although nothing serious resulted," commented Deputy Chief Harman in court today.

Case Enlarged.

Martin J. Green, 19, of Toronto, appeared charged with the theft of a motor car belonging to Harry Moorman of this city. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., asked Green if he desired counsel and received a reply in the affirmative. The matter was enlarged for one week during which time Martin will be given legal advice.

Motorists, who continue to violate the city parking by-laws in the downtown area, find themselves in police court and paying the conventional dollar and costs for such infractions.

Belleville Seaman Shows How

When pretty Sub.-Lt. (SB) Stella Davidson, R.C.N., of Vancouver, a Navy occupational therapist on the staff of an R.C.N. hospital in Newfoundland, visited the corvette H.M.C.S. Owen Sound to sell Seventh Victory Loan Bonds, one of her first customers was cheerful Leading Seaman Johnny Noakes, R.C.N.V.R., of Belleville, Ont. Then Stella learned that Noakes is gun-captain of an Oerlikon—and coaxed him to demonstrate to her the mechanism of one of these deadly, quick-firing guns. Johnny obliged, and the cameraman clicked the shutter just as Stella peered smilingly through the sight. Sailors on board the Owen Sound bought more than $6,000 worth of Victory Bonds within a few hours.—(R.C.N. Photo by Warrant Officer G. Murison, R.C.N.V.R.)

Sale of Bonds in Belleville Good, Well Over Half-Way Mark

Stirling, Rawdon and Huntingdon Area Lacks Only $37,050 of Objective

With over one half of the elapsed time for the Seventh Victory Loan now past, only one or two of the Hastings county sales areas have as yet recorded sufficient sales of bonds to assure their exceeding their respective objectives when the campaign closes on November 11th, it was pointed out today by county loan officials.

Taken collectively the nine sales areas in the general sales division have now passed the halfway mark of their three million dollar objective, but several of the areas have yet to attain 50 percent of their quotas despite the fact the campaign is now more than one half over.

Doing the best job in the general sales division is the Stirling, Rawdon and Huntingdon area which has raised $137,950 of its $175,000 objective and has only to raise another $37,050 to attain its quota.

Victory Bond sales in Belleville are progressing favorably, according to loan officials who today announced this area to be well over the half-way mark toward its objective of $1,260,000. Sales reported up to Friday morning in Belleville totalled $760,800 with $499,200 yet to be subscribed to attain the objective.

Over in Trenton a total of $251,100 had been subscribed up to Thursday evening with another $288,900 needed before the objective is reached. The village of Deloro is doing splendidly, however, with $22,150 of its $35,000 subscribed.

Deseronto, Tyendinaga and district is past the halfway mark with $53,350, with another $51,650 needed.

The other four rural areas, however, are lagging behind the leaders with a noticeable increase needed in the daily sales average if respective objectives are to be achieved. In the Sidney, Thurlow and Frankford area with an objective of $410,00, only $168,850 had been reported up to Friday morning, while the Tweed, Hungerford, Elzevir and Grimsthorpe area still lacked $96,100 of its $150,000 quota. The Madoc area had subscribed $82,950 of its $175,000 objective with another $92,050 needed. Bancroft and district sales totalled $62,000 with another $88,000 required to reach the objective.

County campaign officials pointed out that a special effort would be needed in several of the county sales areas if respective objectives were to be reached by the end of the campaign and urged that residents "Invest in Victory" by buying one more bond than before.

Lorne McDougall Elected President Of Kiwanis Club

First choice of the club executive for chairman for the next year, Mr. Lorne McDougall, well-known local clubman and social worker, will act as president of the Belleville Kiwanis Club for 1945, it has been announced following a recent executive meeting. He will assume his new office on the first of the year, succeeding the current president Mr. Jack McVeigh.

Although a member of the Kiwanis club for only three years, Mr. McDougall is nevertheless well versed in service club activities and appreciated fully the responsibility going with the president's position. He has been director in the Kiwanis club for the past two years and is past president of the former local Y's Men's Club.

A native of North Bay Mr. McDougall came to Belleville ten years ago to establish the insurance business of the firm which now bears his name. Proving himself a citizen willing to accept responsibilities of a community nature, Mr. McDougall quickly was appreciated for his true worth as an organizer as the many positions he holds would indicate.

Chairman of the local air cadets and of the citizens' committee, Mr. McDougall is also secretary of the post war planning committee and acting secretary of the rehabilitation committee. He is director of the Y. M. C. A. and also director of the Bay of Quinte chapter of Industrial Cost Accountants for Ontario. He is president of the local insurance agents association and a member of the local industrial commission, and also chairman of the board of managers at St. Andrew's Church.

Then, taking an interest in the municipal field, he offered himself for council last autumn his popularity again being proven with his successful election as alderman.

Installation of the new slate of Kiwanis club officers will take place at the new year on the annual Ladies' Night.

Summer Cut Of Lumber Lost

Bancroft, Nov. 2 — The Martin Brother's Lumber Company of Baptiste, Ontario, suffered a disastrous fire on their summer cut of timber when three-quarter million feet of lumber also ties and slabs were completely destroyed, Wednesday afternoon. The mill and yard are situated near Algonguimn Park, 47 miles north of Bancroft. The loss is covered by insurance. Cause of blaze not yet determined but investigations are under way.

JAPS EAT HORSES

San Francisco, Nov. 3 — On invaded Leyte in the Philippines, the Japanese fortified a 1,400-foot peak up which they had to bring equipment by pack horse, George Forster, NBC correspondent, reported yesterday. "When they were isolated by the American drive," Forster added, "the Japanese ate their pack horses."

Drastic Measures Taken To Stop Black Market

With food at premium and people resorting to underhand methods to take advantage of supplies not going legally over the counter, the Belgian government is taking drastic measures to overcome the black market, according to a recent letter received by Mr. Albert Jones from Bandmaster Alf. Cooper, formerly of this city.

The letter describing conditions in Belgium since the Allied occupation was written to Mr. Jones in appreciation for cigarettes received from the local Canadian National Railways War Veterans' Association. "Again will you please thank your C.N.R. war vets for their gift of cigarettes," he wrote. "As usual they are just as welcome as ever."

"The stores here are full of goods, in fact much more goods than you would see in England, but there is a great scarcity of food unless you have money enough to buy on the black market," he said. "The Belgian government has taken drastic steps to smash the black market and have called in all 100-franc notes and issued new ones. They have also frozen all funds over 2,000 francs. So now people with plenty of money have to buy in the stores the same as the poor people."

"I am seeing many interesting sights and travelling quite extensively," he continued. "Just now, however, we are enjoying a lull in our work as our truck tried to carry away a bridge in Belgium and we got the worst of the deal. Several of our instruments were damaged and are now laid up for repairs.

Bandsman Cooper tells of the welcome which Allied troops received from the French and Belgian people who lined the streets to cheer, offer them fruit and pelt them with flowers.

"It almost makes us think we had done something," he said.

As a bandsman however, the writer stated he felt like an impostor because his share of liberating was nil. "I am more likely to be wounded by an apple hitting me in the eye than by stopping a piece of shell," he concluded.

Boys in India Receive Fags In Good Time

From far away India came thanks for smokes sent overseas by the Kinsmen "Fag Fund". The letter of thanks was received from Allan Dempsey, who is serving in the far east with the R.C.A.F. and was dated last July. "It was simply grand to get smokes from the old home town, as Canadian tobacco is by far superior to that made here in India," wrote Allan. This, along with scores of other letters received from all battle fronts, express hopes that Canadian cigarettes will continue to be sent to our fighting forces.

The list of Belleville boys sent individual shipments of 300 cigarettes or tobacco through the Kinsmen Fag Fund this week include:

208 NAZI PLANES

were encountered in the Dusseldorf operation, from which 21 planes, 8 of them Canadian, failed to return.

Speedy Mosquitos struck at the rail centre of Osnabruck while the heavies were blasting Dusseldorf, where Rhein Metal Borgis plant is the largest arms producer in Germany now that the Krupp works in Essen have been partially knocked out.

Enemy planes destroyed by American airmen yesterday represented a record single day's bag by fighters and bombers in 1944.

The long-dormant Luftwaffe sent up 400 to 500 planes, including scores of jet-propelled fighters, against a force of 1,100 American heavy bombers and 900 escorting Mustangs making a concentrated assault on the huge synthetic oil plant at Merseburg and rail yards at Bellefield and Rhine. The U.S. 8th. lost 41 bombers and 28 fighters.

Flak Like Hail

The Americans destroyed 208 German planes, 183 in the air and 25 aground. Four victims were swift jet-propelled craft. The victories fell 99 planes short of the record of 307 destroyed in a lengthy running battle over and around Schweinfurt and Regensburg on August 18, 1943. The jet planes attacked in formation, but only a few were able to penetrate the fighter screen convoying the bombers.

Returning bomber pilots said the flak "rattled like hail" on their planes. Others told of the rapier-like stabs by the Nazi jet planes zooming "straight up" from the ground.

Meanwhile, the Air Ministry estimated that during October British, Canadian and United States bombers showered 100,000 tons of bombs on Germany, almost twice the tonnage of any previous month.

On Limited Scale

Operations of R.C.A.F. squadrons based in Holland were on a limited scale yesterday due to unsettled weather but Spitfires and Typhoon fighter-bombers cut enemy rail lines at several places north and east of the British 2nd. Army's Nijmegen salient. Locomotives and trucks were strafed with cannon and two direct hits were scored on a bridge.

Toronto Youths Apprehended By Trenton Police

Trenton, Nov. 3 (Special) — Suspicious actions of Marjorie Hawkins, 18, and Harry Tilley, 18, both of Toronto, and a known third party, led to their arrest early today by Constable George Crawford following the police officer's investigation of their sudden appearance from a laneway near the Shoniker meat shop. The two are being held here on charges of vagrancy.

Later it was ascertained, that the trio had travelled from Toronto in a stolen Ford de luxe roadster. It was parked at the time of their arrest in a lane alongside the Trenton wholesale tobacco store on King Street. In the car were found 100 feet of cable wire, a pail and piece of hose, and two quarts of oil. Tilley admitted stealing the car from a Toronto parking lot at the corner of Jarvis and Wellesley Streets, police said.

Constable Crawford on patrol shortly after five o'clock this morning saw three people emerging from the Shoniker laneway. He stopped his cruiser car, and the trio started to run. He gave chase and apprehended Tilley and Marjorie Hawkins. The thiry party made his escape. Lodging the pair in the town jail, the police officer with Sergeant Jack Taylor immediately seaphed the district for the missing member of the trio.

During the ride to the station, the officer heard something fall to the floor in the rear of the car. Search later revealed the objects to be three hack-saw blades, police stated.

The Hawkins girl told police during questioning that the party was on its way to Belleville to visit her brother who has been sentenced to a reformatory term for car theft, and who was awaiting transference to the reformatory.

FRANKFORD

Independence Day Marked at Batawa By Czechoslovakians

Frankford — The anniversary of the Independence of Czechoslovakia was fittingly observed in Batawa on Saturday evening Oct. 28th by all the members and friends of the Czechoslovak National Alliance and Sokol Gymnastic Association. The recreation hall was filled and a delightful program thoroughly enjoyed by all. Dr. Jiri Udrzal, president of the Sokol Club, presided as chairman for the group and introduced the visiting artist, Miss Olga Gardavsky, and the guest speaker, Rev. J. Pelikan, of Chicago.

Strength of Unity Emphasized.

In his splendid address, delivered in both English and Czech, Rev. J. Pelikan stated that out of the present turmoils and strife will come a new spirit of unity in which national and racial barriers will be let down and men of this earth shall turn their minds and hearts to the building of a new era in which they will live in peace one with the other. To emphasize this trend in present day human relations, he quoted these words from a recent speech of Prime Minister Winston Churchill: "Let the hope die in every German heart that there will ever be dissension among the three great Allied powers." That is the spirit of the people in all United Nations with the single aim and purpose of constructive peace for all peoples.

Excellent Program.

Other numbers that filled out the well-balanced program included a piano recital by the brilliant young pianist, Miss Olga Gardavsky, of Montreal, who delighted her audience with her treatment of Debussy in Clairde Lune and Arabesque and Fantasia by Chopin. Miss Gardavsky was presented with a beautiful bouquet which symbolized the deep and sincere appreciation of her artistry by all present. Music lovers were also given a treat in the fine performance of Otto Hejtmanek as he offered a violin solo of the Dvorak-Kreisler Slavonic Dance No. 3. Other numbers in the musical part of the program included children's choruses in both Czech and English and choral work by the Sokol Men's Glee Singers under the leadership of Tony Stavjanek and there were also gymnastic displays by the Sokol boys and senior members, as well as dancing by some of the older girls.

The entire program revealed considerable training and practice and was a fitting tribute to this most important day in the history of their native country Czechoslovakia, Oct. 28th, on which day it was held.

"Polite Crooks" Steal $250 From 2 Men

Toronto, Nov. 2 — (CP) — Two men, described by one of their victims as "polite crooks," held up the proprietors of a west-end Tea Room last night and stole $250 from the pair. Mrs. George Rogers, one of the victims, said the men were very careful not to leave fingerprints, wiping off everything they touched.

In response to her husband's plea not to take the papers in his wallet, she said the hold-up men handed it back after removing the money.

TRENTON

Auction Sale To Aid Hospital Fund Successful

Trenton, Nov. 2 — Excitement loomed high at the Market Square on Wednesday afternoon when bushel after bushel of fruits and vegetables fell under the block of the auctioneer to an enthusiastic crowd. The auction was under the direction of the Lions Club of Trenton and was in aid of the Trenton General Hospital Fund. Two local auctioneers gave of their time and efforts, while all the produce was donated by nearby farmers, anxious to do their bit to establish a hospital for their town.

Every known variety of vegetable was offered and prices in many cases soared high. Apples offered a wide range of variety and price with one hamper of "Specials" going as high as $15.00. Live fowl fell to the block, as well as many fully dressed birds. A pig which was offered, however, brought only a very small price, as apparently buyers were not willing to give the little squealer a winter home.

The size of the crowd attending the sale was not all that might be desired but, alas, all the produce was disposed of and a tidy sum realized to be turned over to the Hospital Committee.

A. Kerr of 86 Dundas St. East. The latter was later found and returned to its owner but Mrs. Sharpe has not been so fortunate.

PICTON

Bishop Lyons Addresses Rotary Club at Picton

Picton, Nov. 2—Importance of moral regenerations to be accomplished by participation in and support of the work of the church, was urged by Rt. Rev. John Lyons, Bishop of Ontario, if we are to have a post-war period which will make possible the establishment of the ideals for which we fight.

Bishop Lyons addressed Picton Rotary Club at the weekly meeting.

Strengthening of our moral character is the only way I can see which will bring peace and security, the Lord Bishop asserted.

I can't think of a good post-war world if the pre-war materialistic spirit exists. The spirit that we must build upon is none other than that of Christ, touching on every phase and manifestation of life.

He suggested that the church, including all its divisions, is the fountain head of the ideals for which we fight, which alone are sufficient to meet and overcome pagan philosophies.

Every political system may have a panacea for our ills but the Christian church has the only solution, Bishop Lyons, declared. He urged association with the church so that all may develop on a more perfect and enduring bases those qualities of spirit which are the foundation of a good post-war period, and these ideals for which we fight.

Bishop Lyons was introduced by Rev. W. G. H. Swayne and thanked by F. L. Ward K.C.

A Canadian ensign was presented to the club a gift of FO. L. M. Lewis of the R.A.F. Having been posted elsewhere, Group Capt. P. J. Collingwood, D.F.C., made the presentation and expressed thanks for kindnesses shown the R.A.F. during their stay here.

Half Quota Obtained.

With the Victory Loan period half over last night, Prince Edward County had reached more than half its quota. With a million dollar objective, $521,400 had been invested. This is for the general canvass, and is $110,000 better than any previous loan at the half way mark.

The total does not include Mountain View R.C.A.F. station which, with an objective of $160,000 has reported $207,500 to headquarters here.

Salesmen report the best cooperation yet and many new investors are reported.

The only large investor is W. H. Benson, local canner, who subscribed $50,000 in the special names section.

Mussolini's Wealth

Mussolini's personal property and real estate are being seized and confiscated by a Rome court while Roman newspapers claimed that the greater part of the former Duce's goods had been transferred previously to outside by an airline of which Mussolini's son, Vittorio, was president.

How correct the news is as to Mussolini's getting his wealth out of Italy is of course not known to the public. The report is like stories of attempts at the wholesale removal of the wealth of German Nazi leaders for a considerable time back. If true this would show how the Germans and Italian Fascists had fears that their scheme or plot would miscarry and that it was better to provide against a possible contingency.

The world's conception of the Nazi and Fascist gangsters that were Mussolini and Hitler as well as the members of their gangs is that they were at heart thieves, robbers and killers, typical gangland figures on the wide range of the world.

Stories now and then still linger about plans of the Nazi heads to escape. How much truth there is in them is unknown but there seems to be a reasonable ground for thinking that men who have made wealth in the way in which the arch gangsters worked would take little chance of losing all their loot if they could devise a way to prevent it.

Nazi Robomb Inspected

Residents of Belleville and district had for two hours on Thursday an opportunity to ponder over and examine a reconstructed robomb or buzz bomb put together in England by engineers in order to show what manner of thing this Hitler projectile was.

In the flying bomb assault upon southeast England and the London area from early in June until August, more than 21,000 persons were killed or injured and more than 1,104,000 houses destroyed or damaged. The losses would have been much greater but for the preparations and steps taken to counter the attack. Timely measures taken before the robot bombardment prevented losses which would have been multiplied still further. These were the measures taken against the factories and launching sites in Germany and France.

The bomb opened up another phase of the Battle of London. This battle actually lasted eighteen months, the first six months being a time of inquiry and speculation over reports suggesting that the Germans were developing a long-range bombardment weapon of a novel type. It is an intriguing story how the investigation pointed to what was going on in the Baltic coast area at Peenemunde on an island in the Baltic Sea. Later came news of the Nazis building concrete structures along the French coast from Cherbourg to Calais. Reconnaissance revealed the sinister fact that the constructions were oriented towards London. Attacking of sites started last December. The Germans then attempted structures of simpler design and of more rapid construction and these were well camcuflaged. The British inquiry led to the plans for the protection of London.

British defences were able to take toll of the bombs from the coast within twenty-four hours. During the first month the defensive preparations brought down 40 per cent. The enemy tried saturation methods and used dull days for intensifying the bombardment. The bombs came at a height of 2,300 feet, some much lower. Greater knowledge led to improvement of defence plans. Some re-deployment of defence weapons took place in July. In the first week after this re-deployment, the guns shot down 17 per cent of the bombs which entered the gun belt, in the second 24 per cent, in the third 27 per cent, in the fourth 40, in the fifth 55 and in the sixth and last 74 per cent. Many of the bombs knocked down came down harmlessly into the sea.

A small percentage of bombs were then noticed coming from an easterly direction not from the Calais and Dieppe areas. It was known there were no firing sites in Belgium or Holland. Soon there was information that these bombs were fired from aircraft, Heinkels acting as pack-a-back. Effective measures, taken by the British, reduced the scale of airborne launchings which had not proven as accurate as those from land.

Over 8,000 bombs in all were launched by the enemy or about 100 a day. Of these 2,300 got through into the London area. This does not include many bombs that came to grief in France. Of the successful launchings some 25 per cent were inaccurate or erratic. Many dived into the sea of their own accord. The remaining 46 per cent were brought down by the combined efforts of guns, fighters and balloons.

The increase in toll of the bombs was steady. In the first week about 33 per cent of them were brought down, while rather more reached London. By the end of the period there was a different story. Some 75 per cent of the bombs launched were being brought down by the defences and only 9 per cent reached London. The record bag was on Aug. 28. Then out of 101 bombs which approached the coast 97 per cent were brought down by defences and only four reached London.

The increase in effectiveness of the defences was reflected in the casualty figures. At the beginning there was an average of one death for every bomb launched. At the end three bombs had to be launched to kill one person.

About 92 per cent of casualties occurred in the London region. British defences succeeded in bringing down bombs in the sea or open fields as far as possible.

Canada's Seventh Victory Loan is over the crest, the half-way mark and there are reasonable grounds for the belief that with every person using as much as possible of purchasing power the loan will go on to a magnificent success. However there can be no let-up, no over-optimism that this will be achieved. It is up to everyone to see that as far as he or she is concerned it will be a full measure of support he or she gives the loan.

Rocket Propulsion in Navy

Rocket propulsion units are being used by the Royal Navy to assist carrier-borne aircraft to take off in light winds, with heavier loads and at greater speeds than formerly.

These rockets, containing cordite, are mounted on the aircraft in two groups, one on either side of the fuselage. Each group consists of from one to four rocket-tubes, the number varying according to the type of aircraft and the weight of the load carried.

The aircraft starts its take-off in the ordinary way, and the pilot fires the rockets on reaching an optimum point which is marked and determined from a graph. All rockets are fired simultaneosly. They give an assisted take-off lasting about four seconds until all the cordite is expended. The rockets and carriers are then jettisoned. The rockets are fitted to Swordfish aircraft operating from escort carriers, and they have proved extremely valuable for aircraft operating from the comparatively small decks of these vessels.

Key to Bastille

(Tricolore, London)

One of the most interesting incidents in the General's stay was his visit to the Washington Museum where he was shown the original key to the Bastille.

This relic was sent to America in the early days of the nineteenth century by the Municipality of Paris. In the course of his tour of inspection, the General placed a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, which stands in the Arlington National Cemetery, and paid a visit of pious homage to the tomb of Lafayette.

He also called upon General Pershing, who commanded the American armies in France during the last war.

Truth is not only violated by falsehood; it may be equally outraged by silence.—Amien.

YOUTH AND AGE

"It may be there's a better way,"
A bright-eyed youngster said,
"And find it, if I search, I may."
An old man shook his head.
"You'll get in trouble some fine day.
Sit safe at home," he said.

"If I could get around the bend,
What's farther on to see,
Perhaps the books as they've been penned Mistaken all might be."
"Believe the books from start to end,"
Said Age, "and stay with me."

"If only one or two would dare
Adventuring to go,
We might find something over there
Which science ought to know."
"I wouldn't," murmured Silver-Hair.
"Few wiser wish to grow."

Young man, beware of counsel cold
And wisdom's furrowed brow;
Shun all contented men, grown old;
Escape their clutch, somehow.
They fancy all the years can hold
Has been discovered now.

Canada Stands by Proposal For Competitive System Of Post-War Civilian Aviation

—Howe

Chicago, Nov. 3 (CP)—Munitions Minister Howe Thursday told the International Conference on Civil Aviation that Canada is standing by her proposal for a competitive system of post-war civil aviation administered by an international air authority.

The plan, placed before parliament last March 17, includes what Mr. Howe described in a prepared speech as "four freedoms of the air" for airlines operating under the authority of the international body.

They are:

1. The right of air transit.
2. The right to land for servicing.
3. The right to carry passengers, freight and mails from the country or origin to any place in the world.
4. The right to bring passengers, freight and mails back to the country of origin from any place in the world.

Solution of the problems of international co-operation in air transport might well pave the way to a lasting peace, Mr. Howe suggested.

Outlines Position.

"An enlightened settlement of the problem of International Air Transport will mean that the nations of the world have gone a long way toward establishing a lasting peace and a new order of security," he said.

"Taken with the organization foreshadowed at Dumbarton Oaks it would constitute a model for the settlement of other difficult international problems, and would create an atmosphere in which the settlement of these other problems would be easier.

"On the other hand if we cannot devise a working system of co-operation and collaboration between the nations of the world in the field of air transport, there will be a smaller chance of our enjoying peace for the remainder of our lives."

He outlined Canada's position this way:

"We are firm believers in healthy competition. We are convinced that it will develop most fruitfully under an international authority.

"We want to see free choice for the traveller between competing airlines, competition in service but not in subsidies, a guaranteed minimum of routes and frequencies to the airline companies of all nations—large or small, the most frequencies where need exists, whether of nations large or small, the substitution of International Regulation for National Restrictions and the complete absence of discriminations, preferences, exclusive rights and arbitrary landing fees and charges.

Proposes Assembly.

"We also seek control of subsidies, not through any impractical methods of direct control, but through control of the uneconomical consequences of subsidies, such as rate cutting, and the maintenance of services at levels greater than traffic warrants."

The international authority Canada proposed would consist of an assembly, a board and a number of regional councils. All member states would have representation on the assembly while the board would be composed of 12 members. Each of the eight major states would elect one member and the other four would be appointed by the assembly.

The regional councils would have authority to issue certificates to airline companies in their region. Where more than one region was involved, this authority would rest with the board.

Member states would be required to provide and maintain airports and other ground facilities. To ensure service in thinly-populated areas, the international authority might opportion costs between states interested.

Purposes Cited.

Mr. Howe cited seven purposes of the international air authority:

1. To avert misuse of civil aviation creating a threat to the security of nations.
2. To avert conflicts capable of creating friction among governments and peoples.
3. To avoid the development of economically wasteful competitive practices.
4. To ensure equitable distribution of international air routes and to give every member state opportunity to participate in international airline operations in accordance with its needs and resources.
5. To encourage the continued development of aircraft design and operation.
6. To discourage discrimination in operations, the use of bases, definition of prohibited areas and customs regulations.
7. To offer safe, convenient and economical services, a free choice of alternative services and "generally to meet the needs of the people of the world for efficient and economical air transport."

Must Make Selection.

"From our study of the problems, we believe that a selection must be made between the kind of proposals we have made and a continuance of that dangerous and unsatisfactory pre-war system," he said.

"We think that it is unrealistic to talk in terms of a multilateral grant of freedom of air transit and commercial outlet unless those grants of air freedoms are accompanied by the establishment of an effective international authority, with power, in the ultimate resort, to regulate frequencies and to fix rates.

"Without an effective international regulatory authority, mere freedoms of the air would lead either to unbridled competition or to domination of the airways of the world by a few."

Nations could exercise, in an anti-social way, their present right to refuse foreign airlines transit over their territories or to prevent landings. Both such abuses could be remedied or curbed by an international authority.

"If this conference is unable to reach a sufficiently large measure of general agreement and we therefore have to continue with substantially the pre-war system, Canada has no intention of pursuing an obstructive attitude in dealing with transit or landing rights," he continued.

"Our record has been good in the past. It will remain good in the future. But though Canada's immediate and direct national interests probably would not be endangered by a continuance of the pre-war system, we know that our long-run interests, in the creation and maintenance of a peaceful and prosperous world, would be gravely endangered.

Lesson is Clear.

"In our opinion the lesson to be drawn from the history of international air transport in the period between wars is clear. To permit a reversion, after the war, to the inter-war system, would mean a revival of the pre-war international rivalry in air transport . . . the international friction which would result would be much more serious than formerly, partly because air transport is so much more important now than it was then, to the prosperity, security and prestige of nations and partly because a continuance, after the war, of the pre-war regime of the closed sky would result in unbalance between international regime in the air.

Mr. Howe said the Canadian plan had been discussed with a number of governments but there had been some misconceptions. Canada did not propose the internationalization of air transport; the international aspect was restricted to regulations.

The proposed authority would not have power to tell a nation whether its airlines should be government-owned or privately-owned. The Canadian plan was designed to facilitate rather than make it difficult for companies to obtain rights to operate on international lines.

There would be no interference with the powers now exercised by national licensing bodies, such as the Civil Aeronautics Board of the United States.

"We have discovered from our conversations with other governments," Mr. Howe said, "that of the difficulties which they foresee the crux is the proposal that an international air authority should have the right to say to a state 'your airline companies cannot operate on such-and-such a route' or 'your airline companies can only operate on so many services a day or so many services a week on such-and-such a route.' This, it is said, would put efficient airline companies in a straight-jacket.

A FEW GRAY HAIRS

I have been taking the anti-gray hair vitamins and also the iodine ration for 5 months. Both of them have aided me greatly, but my hair has not regained its natural color. It is still disgustingly streaked with gray. I am 42 years old. As far as I know my health is good. Do you think I have given the treatment a fair trial?

(Mrs. C. B. L.

What treatment, Ma'am?

I have recommended the anti-gray hair vitamins and the Iodin Ration (my spelling of iodine) only as prophylaxis or prevention—to prevent premature onset of old age of which graying of the hair is just one manifestation.

For twenty years I have been receiving reports from readers who declare that after taking the Iodin Ration (instructions mailed on request if you provide stamped self addressed envelope) for a year or more they have found their gray or graying hair getting back its natural color. At least they assure me this is so. I have formerly attributed this to the more cheerful spirit or outlook induced by the correction of iodine deficiency—that is, I think the iodine-deficient individual sees and counts his or her gray hairs and the individual who gets enough iodine sees and counts rather the hairs that still have their pristine color and life.

In the past four or five years, however, it has become fairly well established by animal experimentation and, I think, corroborated by human experience, that certain vitamins, components of the natural vitamin B-complex, are essential to prevent premature aging, of which premature graying of the hair is a familiar manifestation.

As in taking an Iodin Ration or getting your iodine, in whatever way you can, so in supplementing the ordinary diet with the so-called "anti-gray hair vitamins," the primary effect to be sought is rejuvenation, increased sense of well being, more energy, less fatigue. If you get this effect after a few months, then stay with it and maybe in a year or so—well, let Mrs. H. T. describe her experience, she'll be right here tomorrow.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Hernia

I have what is called a prospective hernia. Have you any suggestions which I should follow?

(H. E. M.)

— Pamphlet on "Hernia" describes simple exercise which tends to prevent and cure small recent hernias. For copy send stamped self addressed envelope. No attention can be paid to clippings or unsigned requests.

Words Are Adequate

The relief I experienced is like magic and these words of gratitude are totally inadequate . . . the first two days I took the potassium as described in the Allergy pamphlet, with no noticeable improvement. On the third day I added the calcium treatment as described in the Hay Fever pamphlet, and by the third evening all symptoms had cleared up—nor has any trouble returned.

(M. B.)

Answer—Thank you. Your words seem adequate enough. On written request I'll mail any reader who provides stamped self addressed envelope a pamphlet "Relief for Allergy," or one on "Hay Fever." If you ask for both pamphlets inclose ten cents with stamped self addressed envelope.

Lime Water

Why can't one take a tablespoonful, more or less, of lime water instead of all these calcium pills or tablets? Yes, of course we need the vitamins, but we are getting them all the time in various foods.

(G. B. E.)

Answer — I'm afraid we don't get much vitamin D in our foods, and D is essential for utilization of calcium (lime) whether in food or in medicine. Lime water contains scarcely as much calcium as milk does. If you wish to get the rights of the calcium (lime) question send stamped self addressed envelope and ask for (no clippings, please) pamphlet "The Calcium Shortage."

"The last thing the Canadian plan contemplates is putting efficient airline companies in a strait-jacket. In reality the purpose is to make it hereafter impossible for any of the countries over which the airline wants to operate to put that airline in a straight-jacket . . ."

MINE CLEARANCE HAZARDOUS WORK

London, Nov. 3 — (CP)—Despite strict precautions, 19 officers and men in one command area alone have been killed in the last six months while clearing Britain's beaches of mines sewn to guard against invasion.

Clearance work is slow and dangerous. The number of skilled men is reduced by the overriding needs of European operations and many mines have been moved by the tide. Some mines have been buried under several feet of sand and others have exploded during four year's exposure to the elements so that the exact number remaining is not known.

Explosions, it is stated, may be expected for some years to come.

WHAT DOES AUTUMN BRING US?

What does Autumn bring us?
Wind and cloud and rain,
Mellow, golden sunshine
Parting the clouds again,
And a cavalcade of color
Passing o'er hill and plain.

And lo! in her hand she carries
Of fruits, a golden store,
And freighted fields of harvest,
And barn bins running o'er,
And at eve a cosy hearth-fire
Within a close-shut door.

What does the Autumn bring us?
The Maple's crimson crown,
The blazing trees on the hill-top
Like sentinels gazing down
On the river's edge where the sumachs
Are wearing their scarlet gown.

But soon the trees will be barren,
And winds will wail and weep,
And all the world of nature
Be folded in Winter sleep,
But oh, that the days might bring us
Peace, Peace, so calm and deep.

—Helen B. Anderson.

Leafs Remain Undefeated In N.H.L. Taking Canadiens In Montreal by 4-1 Count

Sweeney Schriner Proves to be Hero by Scoring the Winning Goal

By ERIC SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The sixth wartime campaign for the National Hockey League championship and the Stanley Cup that goes with the title has become unpredictable.

Last night the defending champions, Montreal Canadiens, who coach Dick Irvin said were back in the form that won them the Stanley Cup last season, dropped a surprise 4-1 decision to Hap Day's undefeated Toronto Maple Leafs before more than 12,000 fans while Jack Adams' classy Detroit Red Wings larruped New York Rangers 10-3 before a crowd of 7,223 in the border city.

The Leaf victory was a pleasant one for Day who, unable to obtain Paul Bibeault, Montreal's spare goalie, had signed Frank McCool, former Calgary sport writer who recently was rejected by the Canadian Army, to guard the nets. Bibeault played 29 games with Toronto last year, starring all the way.

As a result of the win, Leafs remain on top of the circuit with six points, Detroit moved into sole possession of second place with Montreal and Chicago tied for third.

For the second time in the young season, Dave (Sweeney) Schriner, making his return to hockey after a one-year lay-off, drove in the winning goal. Last night he scored what proved to be the winning tally in the first minute of the third period.

Metz Scores First Counter

Nick Metz netted Toronto's first goal and Toe Blake got the equalizer for Canadiens. Gus Bodnar and Lorne Carr scored the other Leaf markers, the former being the only one to count when the teams were at full strength.

By losing, the Rangers extended a jinx which has kept them from victory on Detroit ice since Christmas 1942. The triumph was Detroit's second high-scoring win this year. They trounced Boston Bruins 7-1 in their initial game last Sunday.

The redshirts played on even terms with the Rangers during the first period and then New York wilted, allowing Wings to ram in four successive tallies without a reply in the middle session and another in the third before Walter Atanas of Hamilton, Ont., got their other goal. Detroit then added three more to finish the counting.

Rookie Jud McAtee led the Wings' goal-getters with three while Bill Quackenbush and Steve Wochy collected two apiece. Modere (Mud) Bruneteau, Carl Liscombe and Ted Lindsay, rookie from Port Colborne, Ont., got the others. Kilby Macdonald and Joe Shack each netted for Rangers in the first period.

PLAYOFF SPOT VIRTUALLY WON BY ST. MIKES

Albert College Scored First Points but Finally Beaten 24-5

Stunned early when Albert College broke through for the initial score of a safety touchdown, St. Michael's Academy roared back to score four major tries and virtually cinch first place in the Bay of Quinte COSSA. six-man senior series by beating Albert 24 to 5 on the Collegiate gridiron yesterday afternoon.

As the result of victory the "Irish" now boast of four wins without a single defeat and cannot be headed out of the slot with but two more games to play.

With Avdichuck, Lindsay and Boyd driving hard, Coach Pepper's Alberts smashed through the Irish line in a four-man line attack, that earned them an early-game safety touch for a brace of points. From then in it was pretty much St. Mike's with their big line carrying the play into scoring position from where quarterback Dick Fitzpatrick hurled four successive and good passes, all of which went for touchdowns.

Trailing two to nil Fitzpatrick fired a 21-yard pass to Jerry Moher, who galloped home and for good measure "Fitz" booted home the convert as the Irish moved to a 6-2 lead that was added to. Before the halftime whistle Fitzpatrick again pitched to Doug Green and the teams lined up to start the second half with St. Mike's on the long end of an 11 to 2 score.

Kennie Lindsay booted over the Irish goal line early in the last half for an Albert point, following which Bob Wilson ran 31 yards to Albert's 21, where Fitzpatrick fired a pass to Moher for another Irish major score, that was converted. With the count standing 17 to 3 against them Albert went on the offensive but the Irish held on their own 14 forcing Lindsay to boot for another single point. Coach Doran's lads were on the march and added a safety touch for two more Irish points with George Wilson and "Butch" McCauley the aggressive players. Lindsay booted and there was a rouge behind the St. Mike's line for a fifth and final Albert score. Again on the offensive Fitzpatrick fired to Bob Lucy who raced along the touchline some 11 yards for a touchdown that ended the game. Lucy had previously galloped 30 yards to put the Irish into scoring position.

The lineups:

Albert College—Lindsay, quarterback; Avichuck and Boyd halves; Christie, centre; McDonald and McCullough, ends; Healy, McIntosh, Haymand and Shields, alternates.

St. Michael's Academy: Fitzpatrick, quarterback; Moher and Geo. Wilson, halves; Green, centre; Lucy and Bob Wilson, ends; Donovan, McAuley and Duffy, alternates.

Officials: Schrieder and Townsend.

DUTCH LEONARD OFFERED BRIBE TO THROW GAME

New York Papers Say Pitcher Asked to Drop Last Game of Season

New York, Nov. 3 — (AP) — Dutch Leonard of the Washington Senators turned down a bribe of "several thousand dollars" to throw the final game of the American Baseball League season to Detroit Tigers, according to two New York newspapers.

Leonard was reported to have been called on the phone at his Detroit hotel room Oct. 1, the final day of the season, and offered a chance to make several thousand dollars by "getting himself knocked out of the game early" the Herald-Tribune said in a copyrighted story. A story in the Mirror carried the same version.

The Washington ace was said to have hung up without answering, later confiding the incident to coach Clyde Milan. Then he went out and set down the Tigers with a four-hitter while St. Louis was defeating New York Yankees to break a first-place tie and win the American League pennant by one game.

Leonard was unavailable for comment last night, having checked out of his New York hotel.

WITHOUT A SCRATCH

Toronto, Nov. 2 —(CP)— Yesterday was a lucky day for Ivan Nelson of Toronto. He crawled from a car which had been in collision with a bus at St. Clair Avenue and Warren Road with neither scratch nor bruise and little or no damage to his clothing. Police said the car was demolished. No one was hurt.

Toronto, Nov. 3 — (CP)—Amateur hockey organizations in other provinces could take a leaf from Manitoba's book. The Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association is laying plans already for expansion and improvement of the sport, with special emphasis laid on minor hockey, and an encouraging hand extended to the harassed seniors.

One of the important points of the new program aims to interest the 100 or more smaller communities in the province which have no organized hockey — that is, no affiliation with the provincial body. Besides encouraging hockey, A.E.H. Coo, chairman of the committee studying postwar plans, suggests that all winter games should be included in the over-all program.

It's a start on a plan that should be adopted in all provinces—sort of a winter national physical fitness scheme.

"Ol' Man River:"

This business of "If at first you don't succeed," seems to have something in it after all. Silas McLellan, 48-year-old marathoner from Nova Scotia's Hants county, has been rolling along in the Halifax Herald and Mail annual full-length marathon race for 20 years, man and boy, without chalking up a win — until this year. He finally romped home a winner, leading a field of three whippersnappers about half his age.

Incidentally:

The wrestling gentlemen are having difficulties in Vancouver, and a provincial wrestling commission is being mooted to straighten things out. The trouble started when the Vancouver Boxing and Wrestling Commission told promoter Jack Whelan he couldn't promote any more cauliflower capers on Saturday nights, after nine years of it begorrah, and Whelan said he would keep it up . . . Remember Bob Pearce, the 1932 Olympic sculls star? He's Lieutenant Bob of the R. C. N. now, and in charge of the navy swimmers in Montreal . . . Bill (Ottawa Journal) Westwick reports the Big Four football loop will be revived next autumn, with Hamilton, Toronto Argonauts, Ottawa and Montreal back in the groove . . . They used to have many and spirited verbal battles, but Ross came away from the meeting with nothing but kind words. Time heals, etc.

LAST SCHEDULED FOOTBALL GAMES FOR SATURDAY

Chief Interest Centred in Balmy Beach - Wildcats Game at Hamilton

By The Canadian Press

Officials of the Ontario Rugby Football Union and the Ontario Armed Services Football League meet jointly tonight to plan the play-off schedule in the two leagues on the eve of the two last scheduled games tomorrow.

The two-game program brings together Toronto Balmy Beach and Hamilton Wildcats at Hamilton in a game which will settle the first-place position in the O.R.F.U. The two now are tied with four wins and one loss apiece. At Toronto, the Navy Bulldogs play Camp Borden R.C.A.F. Hurricanes. Hurricanes are slated for a third-place spot in the league no matter what the outcome, but Navy can take over first place with a victory and will finish in second place, one point behind Hagersville R.C.A.F., if they lose.

Hamilton and Beaches play off for the O.R.F.U. title and Hagersville and Navy meet in the services league play-off. Details will be arranged at tonight's meeting. Service regulations prevent a play-off between the two leagues.

One exhibition game is billed for tomorrow, Hagersville meeting the unbeaten University of Western Ontario Mustangs at London. The Mustangs are unbeaten in three exhibition games so far.

Chief interest, however, lies in the Beach-Wildcats meeting at Hamilton. In their previous game this season two weeks ago in Toronto, Beaches turned in a 10-4 victory and the Cats are out for revenge.

Led by Joe Krol, top scorer in Ontario football, the Wildcats have been preparing forward-passing offensive. Beaches looked none too strong against Ottawa's forward-passing last Saturday.

Beaches will be at full strength and will have Billy Myers, the schoolboy star who was idle last week, back in action.

A special Victory Loan show will feature the Toronto game.

Buffalo Bisons Held To Tie by Capitals

By The Canadian Press

Indianapolis Capitals held Buffalo Bisons to a 3-3 tie in the only American Hockey League game last night but the result failed to bring any change in the league standing. A crowd of 3,756 fans turned out at Indianapolis to witness the game.

Kenny Kilrea started the Buffalo scoring in the first period but Butch McDonald set up the Caps' first goal in the second frame to force a 1-1 deadlock. The Bisons went ahead again before the period ended on Roger Leger's goal and Doug Lewis put the Buffalo club two ahead in the third.

McDonald scored a second goal for Indianapolis and Johnny Sorrell counted the equalizer.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Abe J. Green, president of the National Boxing Association, said yesterday the title bout between Sal Bartolo of Boston, world featherweight champion, and "Whistling Willie" Roach, of Wilmington, Del., has been indefinitely postponed because of a serious nose injury suffered by Bartolo. The bout was scheduled for 15 rounds at the Boston Garden Nov. 17.

Boston Bruins yesterday announced the signing of forwards Gino Rozzini and Armand Gaudreault, both members of the Allan Cup championship Quebec Aces last season. They will join the club at Boston next Tuesday. From Toronto, where the Bruins now are working out, Manager Art Rross reported Harvey (Busher) Jackson, veteran winger-defenceman, had practised with the club and indicated he might change his mind about retiring from hockey.

Guelph's new indoor hockey school project met an enthusiastic response when 77 boys turned out for the opening session. Directed by Harold Cole, Guelph Mercury Sports Editor, the school will meet weekly with a view to promoting interest and knowledge in the game among younger players.

The 55th annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association will be held at Toronto Saturday Nov. 25, it was announced last night.

BODY RECOVERED

Peterborough, Nov. 2 —(CP)— A body identified as that of Peter Scollard, 16-year-old son of Frank Scollard, was discovered in the Trent Canal here today. Mr. Scollard reported the boy's disappearance to police Sunday when he didn't return from a party Saturday night.

SIR PERCY MILLS APPOINTED

London, Nov. 2 (CP)—Sir Percy Mills has been appointed head of the economic division of the British division of the control commission for Germany, it was announced last night. He has been controller general of machine tools and head of the production division of the Ministry of Production.

Grandpa was coming home one night this week and saw his hired man standing near the house with a lantern in his hand.

Grandpa—What are you doing out here so late, Zeke?

Hired Man—I'm just a-courtin Ann, who helps out in the house.

Grandpa—What's the idea of the lantern, you nitwit? I never took a lantern along when I courted Miranda.

Hired Man—No, sir, you didn't. All of us can see that you didn't do that.

Room for Argument.

Baseball writers at the world series were so completely fascinated by the acrobatic fielding of Slats Marion that they went overboard on the young man and gave him the most extravagant praise they could. They even mentioned him in the same breath with Hans Wagner.

As far as Pittsburgh is concerned, however, that is sheer heresy. The city is up in arms about it, and baseball followers there are quite upset to think that a mere mortal is being compared to their beloved Flying Dutchman. Of course, the writers were careful to state that the comparison applied only to the relative fielding abilities of the two, but the Pittsburghers refuse to admit even that.

They hold that Wagner was faster than Marion, had a stronger arm and played a deeper field. He also had an uncanny seventh sense of anticipation which would draw him into position for wrapping those massive hands of his around every batted ball, whether it was hit in back of third or in back of second.

Chili Doyle, the veteran Pirate scribe, recently recalled in the columns of The Sporting News a conversation he once had with the late Chic Fraser, one-time scout for the Buccaneers. Someone had asked Fraser how he rated Wagner with the modern crop of shortstops—with Glenn Wright, Dave Bancroft, Rabbit Maranville, Travis Jackson and the others.

"You can pick out the greatest asset owned by any of them," snapped Chic. "Tell me what it is and I'll tell you that Wagner could do it better than any of them could."

It must be clear by now that Marion and Wagner never should be bracketed together—at least not in Pittsburgh.

This and That.

Belleville will have four teams in provincial basketball circles throughout the 1945 season . . . "Y" secretary Joe Shortt says his association will sponsor a boys' juvenile and men's intermediate team, as well as junior and intermediate girls' squads . . . Players interested should contact "Y" officials as soon as possible . . . Over 30 players answered the call for the first football practice called at the Belleville Collegiate the other day . . . However, the sad part of the situation was the fact there wasn't sufficient equipment to go around, as a matter of fact they say there wasn't enough shoulder pads to equip a conventional team . . . As a matter of fact only one football was tossed into the scrimmage . . . After all when upwards to 33 teen-aged lads are anxious to play the fall classic game at a school the size of the Belleville Collegiate some assistance and adequate material should be available . . . However, the kids are far from discouraged and will tackle it again this afternoon . . . They do say that George Savitsky, Penn State 200-pound tackle, wears size 14½ shoes . . . He could ski on leather without much trouble . . . Columbia has a backfield of dwarfs, not one stands over five foot eight.

Remember When.

Baseball's "Georgia Peach", Tyrus Raymond Cobb, resigned as player-manager of the Detroit Tigers 16 years ago today. Cobb started with that American League club in 1905 and cracked out a double in his first appearance at the plate. He was at that time baseball's greatest player and ended his diamond career with the Philadelphia Athletics.

Box-fighters.

All roads naturally lead to the Hume Arena tonight for the third Reliance Boxing Club fight show. Promoter Bill Crawford suddenly decided the best policy was to get two outstanding scrappers for his main bout and made no mistake when he procured "Jibber" Ellis, the pride of the Army, to meet Hub Smith, the Air Force titleholder at 145 pounds. This is the type of a bout that should jam the fight customers to the rafters, as it is a fight natural. Another good scrap will be the Jerry Downs-Joey McPhee go with each having won a decision in two previous meetings.

HASTY MARRIAGES DEPLORED IN WILL

London, Nov. 3 — (CP) — The sixth Earl of Cottenham, Pall Mall racing motorist and writer on motoring topics who died in July last year at the age of 40, left £1,969 and asked his daughters in his will to:—

"Shun marriages until the age of 25, and to try to avoid the hasty bestowing of what is not perhaps thorough affection and the troublesome complications of divorce proceedings which might follow the choice of a husband made in their immature years."

He left a gold pencil that belonged to Sir Henry Segrave to his friend Richard Seaman — "by far the best British racing driver of his generation."

Bags Coyote and Wild Goose

Yukon, Okla., Nov. 2 —(AP)— Meredith Osborn, 16, bagged a flying goose and a coyote on the ground with one shot — he says. Here's how — he says. On a hunting trip he aimed at a wild goose. Just then a coyote started slipping up on the bird. The goose took off and Meredith fired, crippling the goose and wounding the coyote—he says.

OVER-OPTIMISM BLAMED

Toronto, Nov. 2 (CP) — Over-optimism about the end of the war has resulted in a falling off of volunteer attendance in Red Cross work rooms across Canada and thus reducing the vital work done by these volunteers, Premier George Drew told a meeting of the National Council of the Canadian Red Cross Society here yesterday.

LESSON NO. 532

The Kibitzer

An expert is a funny duck. He wins with rule instead of luck. But just when he should follow rules, he tries his luck like other fools.

An opening four bid (in a major suit) is an immediate game bid. But it does not promise to make a game. If it was that kind of a hand, it could have started with a two bid.

If partner has as many as three tricks, an opening one bidder would find that out. So, an opening four bidder expects to find his partner with no more than two tricks.

For a chance to make game, therefore, an opening four bid should have eight tricks. And that is its standard showing. That and a long suit of seven or more cards.

But an opening three bid in a major suit also shows a long suit with eight tricks. Why, then, should a four bid be used when a three bid seemingly shows a hand that can take the same number of tricks?

Hear four quick reasons. A three bid includes a sure outside trick. A three bid has material for a slam. A four bid denotes all outside weakness. A four bid may have much less than it says.

You see, a four bid is also used for other purposes. Maybe to shut out opponents. Maybe as a sacrifice. Maybe as a warning sign to partner. Maybe to satisfy an uncontrollable urge.

Thus, a player is likely to use a four bid with less than eight tricks. Or with a suit that is not as long as expected. Or when the suit is limp. Or a combination of these.

Stagger through this hand:

♥ K Q 10 9 8 5 3 2
♦ K 9 3 2
♣ None

It has not what it takes for a one bid or two bid or three bid. If you open that hand at all, it should be with a bid of four hearts.

Partner does not know that you have that much. You may be in good shape. You may be out on a limb. He should not saw it off.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Nov. 3 —(AP)— The Women's Professional Golfers Association has been granted a charter in North Carolina and now its founder, Hope Seignious, is trying to get past "that awful word, tentative," to provide a tournament program for the gals . . . Miss Seignious, assistant to George Corcoran at a Greensboro, N. C., club, says the first task is to convince the girls who want to play tournament golf that there will be enough events for them and the tournament-makers that there will be enough good players for the events . . . Already she is planning a Woben's P. G. A. championship and hopes some day there will be winter and summer "circuits" just like the men have . . . "The girls have shown tremendous interest," she says, "and I think people should be able to make a living at something they're good at."

Big Green Schoolhouse

Opportunities for women golf pros aren't limited to tournament play, Miss Seignious believes, and she has pretty good evidence . . . About one-third of the golf club members are women . . . Besides, a lot of men can be helped by lessons from women pros . . . "They say 'If a woman can do that, so can I,' " Hope explains. "It encourages them. Since I've been teaching I have had almost as many men pupils as women."

PICTON

Thomas W. Kinney Elected President Of P-C Association

Picton, Nov. 3 — Prince Edward Lennox Progressive Conservative Association held its annual meeting here, Wednesday afternoon. Speakers were George J. Tustin, M. P., and James Hepburn, M. P. P. Officers elected were T. W. Kinney, president, Wesley Young, Mrs. Ross Bush, Mrs. A. Beckwith, Mrs. L. McLean, vice-president; Secretary, Goldie Smith, with Earl Brummell assistant; auditors, J. A. Maher, P. U. Laidley.

Believing that the Ontario Liberals would not think it in their best interests to ally themselves with the C. C. F., Mr. Hepburn expressed the opinion that these two parties would join to bring along a want of confidence vote in the Drew Government.

Mr. Hepburn charged the Toronto Star with misrepresenting Premier Drew and declared no party had a more brilliant or courageous leader. Drew, he said, has no intention to allow the Federal Government to usurp Provincial rights. We should be glad to have a man of Drew's courage, to bring the facts re the 'baby bonus' fairly and squarely before the people of this province, as regards the comparative records of enlistment for overseas service, he said.

Referring to the so-called zombie army, Mr. Hepburn alleged the Liberal party is afraid of the solid vote in Quebec. They want power so badly that they will endeavor to retain it at the expense of your sons and my sons, he said.

Causing Disunity Charged

Mr. Tustin declared the manpower muddle is creating disunity and distrust. We hear some politicians talking about unity, but the fact is that today we have more disunity in the country than ever before, Mr. Tustin declared.

The next election will see a three-cornered fight for election, Mr. Tustin said. The C. C. F. is devoted to policies of socialism, which depends upon government control. That party would socialize most of the production of the nation, Mr. Tustin said, and consequently, a C. C. F. Government would be the greatest monopoly of all time, with an abundance of regulation and control. I am not satisfied that politicians, no matter to what party they belong, are the best people to handle the business of the country on a monopolistic basis, declared Mr. Tustin.

Chinese Troops Retake Lungling

Chungking, Nov. 3 — (AP)—Chinese troops have recaptured the Burma Road town of Lungling, the semi-official Chinese Central News Agency announced today, climaxing a five-day assault upon the last remaining major Japanese defence bastion in Yunnan province.

Remnants of the Japanese garrison defending the town fled southward, the announcement said. The commander of the victorious troops made a triumphal entry into the city, over which the Chinese flag was formally hoisted.

The Chinese captured Lungling June 10 of this year, but had to relinquish their hold just nine days later. Tengchung, 35 miles northwest of Lungling and another prime objective in the Salween campaign to clear the Burma Road, fell to the Chinese Sept. 14 after a prolonged siege.

Hopes To Boost Min. Wage of Women To $15.00 per Week

Toronto, Nov. 3 — (CP) — Revision of Ontario's minimum wage act now is proceeding with a view to boosting the 12.30 weekly minimum wage for women in the near future, Labor Minister Charles Daley said here today. A conference with the industry and labor board on this revision opened today and Mr. Daley said he hoped the minimum would be raised to $15.00 a week.

The act has not been revised for some years and does not meet existing conditions, the minister said. Though in wartime conditions few women receive the minimum, in post-war days the act would affect a great number of women in the province.

The revision will also deal with domestic servants and other groups with a view to bring them under the act on a set basis.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN.

"Listen everybody", Punchy said. "You're sitting with Pilot Officer James Riley". Then, in the general hurly burly of sound that followed, the screams of congratulations and the little blonde girl throwing her arms around his neck and kissing him, he confided to Jimmy quietly that he had called in at his house before coming up North after receiving his own letter. "It's Sergeant Pilot, and good enough for me too", he grinned wryly and Jimmy liked the big fellow more than ever. But not quite so much when he said, leaving,

"Oh, by the way, Jimmy, I looked at our timetable again. The last train we can catch is at nine tomorrow morning. See you there. And don't be late, for heaven's sake". Jimmy grinned weakly and promised . . not to be late. He turned away quickly before he had to look at Margaret and let himself get involved once more in the new surge of celebration evoked by his promotion. Margaret turned quickly too, Punchy noted, and he saw a sparkling in her eyes that could be tears.

He took her by the arm and they went outside into the night. It was barely cool and he put his arm around her waist. She leaned against him and sighed, and when they came to one of the lounge chairs by the pool that was empty now, he stopped her and she buried her head against his chest. He could feel her shivering slightly against him and he patted her awkwardly on the back.

"Don't cry, Margaret", he said, and his voice was suddenly husky and deep and the usual slow and amused drawl was very much absent. "Don't cry, darling. I couldn't stand to see you cry". She stopped trembling after a while and he held her close and still and put his hand, his big hand now amazingly gentle under her chin and lifted her face. She blinked at him and he kissed her on the forehead. A cloud scudded darkly across the moon, tinged with silver at the edges. She still clung to him and her fingers twined themselves under the lapels of his jacket.

"Peggy", he said slow then. "I know this is on the rebound, but that's all I could ever hope for from you. I love you".

She stared at him, almost unbelievingly he thought, and he stared back into her eyes and noticed that the lashes were wet. "Look, Peg. I've always loved you, right from the first time I saw you, remember". He kept staring at her, his face with the broken nose and all softened by the night and Margaret was suddenly sorry for him, more sorry than she had ever been, even for herself. She leaned against the strength of his big body again, felt the thudding of his heart. Her own was strangely quiet now and she listened while he continued, "I've always loved you Peg", and she noticed that he was breathing quickly, at a task far removed from anything he had ever done before, at making love to a girl. "Right from the beginning. But I knew I didn't have a chance. 'Till now. I don't like to barge in on you like this Peg, but I promise you you'll never be sorry". She leaned back against his arms, big and strong, and turned her head so that she was looking at the stars. They were big and bright but she hardly saw them realizing that Punchy, big blundering lovable Punchy, was asking her to marry him. And she thought of Jimmy, lean, flashing, quick, and the person who had had her heart during all the past months while Punchy stood by and watched. . .she wondered whether it would ever be the same and knew at the same time it never would be. It was all over. And Punchy needed her. Nothing mattered now. And she could make Punchy very happy.

He had his face against her cheek now, her lovely hair on his face, the fragrance of herself in his head. He said, "I won't ask you to marry me now, Peg. Just say you'll be waiting for me if nothing else turns up. I need you to say that, Peg". And she knew what it meant. The war had caused even stolid Punchy to realize how little there was that was stable, and caused even in him a need and a vacancy for the one thing that did last, no matter what. And she didn't think of Jimmy any more right then. She turned her face to his and said, "Yes, I'll wait for you, Punchy". She felt his arms tighten around her, felt his lips close to her own.

"May I kiss you then, Peggy", he asked. She answered by pressing her own lips hard against his, by twining her arms around his neck, by kissing him with a fervor that was new to her for it was the first time she had ever promised herself to anyone, and much as she had wanted it to be somebody else, now that that was over this was all that was present, all that counted. And Punchy did need her. After a while she realized he was no longer kissing her but had his face in her hair again.

"You'll never be sorry, Peg, I promise". His voice was husky in her ear and she could feel his shoulders, big, tensed, trembling under her arms. "And maybe someday you'll even come to love me". She tightened her arms about his neck and hugged him and then he kissed her again and there was nothing but his lips and their kiss and she was part of their kiss and he was the other part. After a while they went back inside. Jimmy and the party had gone but it didn't matter any more. Jimmy had gone. And that was all. And the next day Punchy was gone too.

Otu was over. He flew Spits and Hurries till he knew them backwards, always with the real thing an unspoken promise in the background—Operations. And one day, it was Operations. The first. He sat sweating in flying jacket and muffler, heavy fur-lined flying boots and listened to the little Squadron Leader with the livid scar down the side of his face, who had been burned and grounded during the Battle of Britain and was now in Administration, outlining in quick clear language their mission. He looked at the other pilots of the flight, trying to remember them though he knew most of them, trying to see whether they felt as he did—scared, nervous and clammy.

They didn't seem to and he tried to relax. With an effort he did for a moment and had no feeling; but as soon as he looked again and listened the tension was back, the tightness across his belly, the perspiration trickling from under his armpits. It was no use. And the lad with the scar said, "By the way, Riley is going to win his spurs today". He chuckled half-heartedly with the rest and then tried to listen and draw comfort from the English kid, no more than twenty, who turned when the Briefing was over and said, "Well, chappie, this is you first—and we'll look after you. Tim here and myself will stick on your tail the whole time so just forget that for now. Once you've nicked your first you won't feel nervous like this any more". Jimmy smiled and tried to imagine how the kid knew he was nervous.

The Spits were ticking over, the taut skins along the pencil bodies shivering to the vibrations of the motors and they relaxed, sitting on their parachute packs on the cool green grass till it was time to scramble. There was a wind and the English kid, a veteran of the Battle of Britain too at twenty, joked with him with the wind blowing his long fair hair across his face and they smoked.

Then they were in, the rigger was helping adjust the harness and then they were moving, slowly, then faster and they were airborne, swiftly climbing towards the dull overcast of stratocumulus at 6,500 and then out into a brightly-glittering new world of breathtaking beauty. It was a sun-spacious universe, so different from the dull world on the ground, an endless stretch of billowy white cotton batting, clean and free and shining under the sun.

The flight levelled at 20,000 and droned down the air and glancing out on either side of him the other ships were motionless, still, silent in the rarified air. He was alone and isolated by the radio silence and even the muffled roar of the cruising engine was so monotonous as to become non-existent. For a weird moment he had the impression of flying in a company of ghost ships with dead men at the controls—in the footless halls of air—he remembered a poem by a pilot, John Gillespie McGee, who had died. He knew now what he meant,

"Oh, I have slipped the surly bonds of earth,
And danced the skies on laughter-
silvered wings;
Sunward I've climbed and joined the tumbling mirth
Of sun-split clouds — and done a hundred things
You have not dreamed of—wheeled and soared, and swung High in the sunlit silence. Hov'r-ing there
I've chased the shouting winds along and flung,
My eager craft through footless
halls of air.
Up, up the long, delirious, burning blue,
I've topped the wind-swept heights
with easy grace,
Where never lark, nor even eagle
flew;
And while, with silent, lifting mind
I've trod,
The high untrespassed sanctity of space
Put out my hand and touched the face of God. . ."

He knew now why there was always a spiritual upsurge in wartime, for, suddenly, putting out is hand and touching the face of God did not seem quite so strange as it had when he had first read the poem. With death so near he found it repugnant for there not to be a God, for there not to be something after this, for it to end completely with death—for there not to be a purpose to life. The end could not be here—for death was so easy, and it was even easier a bit later.

They came high over the banked clouds, dots growing larger by the second and the squadron leader's voice over the radio intercom was dispassionate, incongruously calm. He glanced behind and to the left and the English kid was a very dear friend giving a 'Thumbs Up' and Jimmy knew he was smiling in spite of the oxygen mask that hid the lower part of his face. When he looked back again, the bigger part of the Spits were peeling off to dive through the overcast at the bombers and then they were drawing the Messers off them by holding back and steeply banking around their flank. They were no more than a couple of hundred yards away and they were Teutonic-looking with their grim war paint, yellow prop hubs, black crosses on the fuselage and swastikas on the rudder. The English kid was talking quietly, instructing, and his palms were sweaty, slippery wet, he was nervous as a cat and the prickling of the skin on his scalp, over his arms, up his back, was like nothing so much as the sensations of making love—and he thought of Peg for an instant—there was the scent of death in the tiny cockpit and he could make out quite clearly the German pilot in the nearest ship as they swept past.

As he twisted and turned several times with the two comfortable blurs of the English Spits behind him all the time, his senses were preternaturally alert and suddenly in front going away from him was a Hun and, as he lined up the little electric sight and led the target and touched the fire button, the little red blobs of tracer floated away from the plane and seemed to curve in behind the Hun and he touched the rudder slightly and they floated right into it and it hesitated a split second then started to smoke, black with a dull red core, and a little bundle that he knew was the pilot shot off at a tangent but no chute opened though he watched it for a long time. He had no feeling about the bundle at all. But he was no longer scared. He listened to the English kid again and they turned and headed into the scrimmage. It broke up almost immediately. The other boys had not been idle. They hung around upstairs for a while and then went home. He was blooded.

Back in the Rec Room the English kid, grinning, made him buy him a drink and they talked.

"It'll be the other way round soon now", the British said.

"How's that?" He was still thrilled and tense.

"I mean we'll be escorting, instead of them. They'll have to wait for us."

And he was right. The tide was turning and Jimmy Riley with it. And German cities began to feel the weight of British bombs. He flew and fought and killed, and in the end it was a pattern of living and dying and he was part of it. He wondered what death would be like. There were new faces in the Squadron and he had another stripe and once he had to bail out. He became acquainted, first through observing his mates, and later on in himself, with Fighter strain, Operational nerves. He tried to relax in London while a record played "I'll see you again, whenever Spring breaks through again. Time may lie heavy between, but what has been is past forgetting. This sweet memory across the years will come to me—though my world may go awry. . . .it was awry all right he thought, and then he saw Cus—the same old Cus—and they celebrated, or tried to, with weak English beer. They reminisced.

"How about Frank?"

"He was shot down over Germany, Jimmy. He's missing".

"Hell—and Eddy's a prisoner of war".

"Uh huh—say I met Punchy the other day".

"Not Punchy. I haven't seen him since we came over", Jimmy said. "How is he?"

"He's great Jimmy, great", Cus paused and looked at him. "You know he's engaged, eh—to Peg I mean?" He had known, more or less. Now he knew for certain and he knew it wasn't Operational nerves. It went deeper than that. He thought of her in the beginning but learned to know and steer clear of the pain after that by not thinking of anything at all not immediately connected with the business in hand and his Operational nerves disappeared.

During the months that followed he became a nerveless, slightly introspective machine—calm and vicious and he wore the little diagonally-striped ribbon under his wings now. And as he withdrew more and more into a shell, a small personal world, became a hard fierce emotionless fighting machine, promotions came with the swelling list of his victories.

But when he awoke one morning, sweating, after a few hours of troubled sleep, after dreaming nightmarishly of her, he knew it was no use. He applied for North Africa where things were shaping up—where, perhaps, in complete undiluted fatiguing activity he might forget, temporarily at any rate.

The sight of Punchy at the Libyan base when he landed there and they were assigned to the same squadron was not so much a surprise as a feeling of joy, a sort of homecoming, and they pounced on each other and pounded each other's back. But with the feeling of joy was a poignant and bitter memory stirred up anew, for when he saw Punchy he thought of Margaret and there was suddenly an aching void under his ribs.

They walked over to the Canteen and bought beers and talked for the rest of the afternoon. They had never managed to get together in England. Finally all subjects had been exhausted and Punchy said slowly, a trifle uncertainly.

"Peg was asking about you—how you were". And with it out in the open at last, he wondered whether the sudden surge of emotion he felt showed up in any way on his face. He lit a cigarette to regain his composure, asked as casually as he could "Oh? How is Peg by the way?"

Punchy grinned, relieved. "Hell, she's fine, Jimmy. Great girl. How is your love life, by the way?" Jimmy grinned back and winked, stifling all feelings, resolved only to keep this, their friendship, his one stable value intact. Punchy laughed.

"Same old wolf eh Jimmy?" They dropped that and sat meditatively for a while and Jimmy rather than delve more painfully into the memories that Punchy evoked, the old crowds, the parties, dances, up North, stared at Punchy instead, noting his features which had matured somewhat but not changed—the rugged cheekbones, deep-set eyes, flattened nose—the texture of his skin, dry with large pores and rather thick lips—extremely masculine. He was glad he had a man like Punchy in his Squadron for he found lately that the responsibility weighed on him, the new additions of which he had once been one long ago—the thought that on his decision rested the action of other men, whether he led them to death or safety. It was a year since he had won his spurs and he had won them again seven times since.

He started talking again quickly to escape a touch of moodiness he could feel coming on and as they discussed the Post-war, what they wanted, the same Canada, the same homes, decent jobs, the common dissent against Socialism—which were the universal sentiments of the servicemen, he tried not to remember, or if to remember then only as something gone forever.

The paper from his hometown was six weeks old and his mother had sent it to him with 'Look on page ten' written on the front. It was himself—a group picture, astride the nose of a Spit and he remembered the cameraman.

He thumbed through the rest of the paper avidly, sitting on the sand-covered cot with the grit inside his shirt and under the wrinkled blue battledress and he glanced back when he saw it . . .

"Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Foster announce the engagement of their daughter Verna, to Mr. Philip Sutton. . . ." She was lovely looking but it didn't stir him. He didn't even wonder why Sutton wasn't in uniform. He lit a cigarette and after a while he saw the Padre and he crossed quickly to him.

Father Carl was big, dark, blunt, and they talked and smoked and the Padre nodded and James Riley knelt beside him. The push was due and he listened humbly to the big priest who talked slowly and soothingly, "What doth it profit a man to gain the whole world and suffer the loss of his soul?" He left later feeling very humble and very elevated too—and the greater part of the tension had disappeared and he slept like a baby. The next day it began.

Things moved swiftly. They swept along ahead of the exultant and unstoppable Eighth, tank-busting, strafing, taking off from one advanced drome to land at a new one, further advanced, within range sometimes of the Korps' artillery. In the heat of action he found himself thinking calmly: what does it matter if a man has to die before he's tasted security a home, love, life—why not live in the present, get what you can and laugh at the Tracers. He carried a poem with him, clipped from some magazine months old. . . .

"Not to grow old, is it so much
Not to totter away a useless decade Dependent on others, living in the past
A second infancy, not natural as the first
But only showing fear and hate and doddering inconstancy?
No! let me live and die with fire and love
Nor stretch out endlessly the struggle
But quickly flaming in a second it's done
And that is all there is to life and you, my love. . . ."

But through it all, in the sun and sand and sweat he could not deny how sweet life was and underneath he knew he wanted nothing so much as to get this over with, to go home, to Margaret. . . They flew cannon-mounted Spitfires and had sometimes four sorties a day and Punchy was a blur on his left and his need for her was an empty aching hollowness under his heart.

It was in such a mood on a clear sun-swept day, after destroying one enemy aircraft, his own was caught in the blazing tracers from an ME as he shot down a Hun off Punchy's tail; and he fell, flaming luridly and fiercely, towards the Mediterranean. The plane and the oil formed a blazing pyre for three brief minutes on the steely blue water and then there was nothing. But over the spot on the blue Mediterranean a landing barge loaded with men swept, curling a white wake from its blunt bow, towards the blur of land against the skyline that was the continent.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 3 — (CP) — Golds were higher this afternoon on Toronto exchange. Other groups weakened moderately. Volume was quiet at 260,000 shares.

Prices were stronger for Malartic gold fields, Cochenour Willans, McKenzie, Wasa Lake and Upper Canada. Giant Yellowknife lost 10 and O'Brien 5. In base metals Noranda, Steep Rock and Hudson Bay slipped off moderately.

Mild weakness showed in industrials for papers and miscellaneous issues. Western Grocers Pfd, up 2 to 147, was strongest of foods. Senior oils held steady but for a loss of 1/4 for B.A. Oil

WALL ST.

New York, Nov. 3 —(AP)— Buyers continued highly selective in today's stock market and, while scattered rails and industrials were pushed up fractions to 2 points on fair-sized turnover, numerous leaders faltered. The direction was rather obscure near the fourth hour.

Aside from a bulge in Chicago and Northwestern issues, modest advancers most of the session included Bethlehem, Public Service of N. J., Goodyear, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse and Kennecott.

Canadian issues were mixed. Hiram Walker gained ½ and C. P. R. ⅛ but Dome and Seagrams each eased ⅛.

HOGS

Toronto, Nov. 3 —(CP)— Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Dressedweight, Grade A, delivered, Hamilton $17.50; Barrie and Hull $17.40; Stratford, to farmers $17.40, to truckers $17.55; Brantford $17.25 plus transportation.

Montreal Man Is Fined $500 In Police Court

Liquor with a retail value of over $800 was recently seized by Provincial and Federal police as it was being transported through Belleville, allegedly en route from Montreal to Toronto.

In Thursday's police court held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd Nathan Ledgin, Montreal, appeared charged with the illegal possession of 155 bottles of Quebec Liquor Control Board whisky. Ledgin pleaded guilty and was fined $500 and costs. The entire cargo of liquor seized and the automobile in which it was being transported in were all ordered confiscated, the liquor to be turned over to the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, while the motor car is to be used for the benefit of His Majesty.

Constable James Driscoll, of the Provincial Police, and Constable M. Kennedy of the R.C.M.P., both stationed in Belleville, observed a man acting strangely at the south end of Front Street the other evening and upon subsequent investigation found the 155 quart bottles of whisky in a nearby motor car, that was being operated by Ledgin. The fine and costs were paid forthwith in cash.

Heavy Bombers Hit Rail Bridge

Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 3 — (CP-Reuter)—Heavy bombers made a 13-hour flight to bomb the important railway bridge at Dara, in Siam, 284 miles north of Bangkok, just before dusk on Wednesday evening, it was announced today.

Damage to the bridge, which takes the main Bangkok-Chiengmai line over the wide Menan Nan River, will force the Japanese to ferry cargoes over the river, causing serious interference with their traffic for Eastern Burma and Northern Siam.

Today's communique reported that troops of the 5th Indian Division captured Japanese strongpoints on the slopes of Sialum Vum, 8,000-foot mountain overlooking the road from Tiddim to Fort White along which Allied forces are advancing through the Chin hills area of Northern Burma.

CAPITAL WATCHES DEVELOPMENTS IN CABINET CRISIS

No Statement Yet Made by Retired Defence Minister

Ottawa, Nov. 3 — (CP) — This politically-minded capital watched today for further developments—if any—from the cabinet crisis which resulted in the resignation of Defence Minister Ralston and his replacement by Gen. McNaughton, former Commander of the Canadian Army overseas.

As yet, there has been no statement from Col. Ralston, 63-year-old soldier of the First Great War who resigned his post dramatically at a Tuesday night cabinet meeting. Whether he intends to comment is not known.

His successor, the 57year-old general, was expected to continue conferences began yesterday at defence headquarters a few short hours after his swearing-in as Defence Minister by the Earl of Athlone at Government House.

He, too, has issued no statement, except at a press conference yesterday, at which his appointment was announced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, that he assumed his new duties with the desire of serving Canada. He later was taken to defence headquarters by Mr. King and went immediately to work, calling a meeting of staff council as one of his first actions.

Difference of Opinion Believed Cause

Upshot of a series of cabinet meetings, Col. Ralston's resignation was understood to have resulted from a difference of opinion concerning reinforcements for Canadian troops overseas and whether the home defence army of 70,000 men should be made available for service anywhere.

Meantime, there was lively speculation about the possibility of further cabinet resignations.

Some ministers who had supported Col. Ralston's stand that call-up troops be sent overseas as reinforcements were disappointed when the proposal was turned down. It was understood, however, they would not go to the extent of resigning because times were too critical.

Winnipeg Free Press Story

Winnipeg, Nov. 3 — (CP) — The Winnipeg Free Press, in an Ottawa dispatch yesterday from Grant Dexter, says that at the final cabinet meeting which ended with the resignation of Defence Minister Ralston, "discussion had centred upon the advisability of making a further appeal to the zombies."

"Mr. Ralston proposed that the appeal take the form of 'either-or,'" the dispatch added. "The government should say that if they did not enlist by a given date compulsion would be applied. It was at this point, it is understood, that the Prime Minister announced he was accepting a letter of resignation written two years ago on a different matter."

Ralston's Tour Of Battlefronts

Ottawa, Nov. 3 — (CP) — The Federal Cabinet did not have a clear outline of the Canadian Army reinforcement situation overseas until Hon. J. L. Ralston, outgoing Defence Minister, returned from a tour of the battlefronts a few weeks ago and made a report on his trip, it was learned reliably last night.

A source close to government affairs said that during Col. Ralston's tour he got a first hand view of the situation and in his report to the cabinet said that men were needed overseas. He was said to have urged that home defence troops be sent overseas.

The ministers were said to fear that national unity might suffer if force was resorted to at this stage of the war and preferred to find other methods of obtaining the reinforcements.

In the Commons last July Col. Ralston said he had no intention of disbanding men called for compulsory service as long as all or some of them may be needed as overseas reinforcements.

AIR MARSHAL LINNELL KILLED IN ACCIDENT.

London, Nov. 3 (C.P. Reuter) — Air Marshal Sir Francis John Linnell, former deputy air officer commanding-in-chief of the R.A.F. in the Middle East, was killed in an accident on the Oxford-London road, near Wheatley, Oxfordshire, today. He was 52.

Avoid Election If Possible In Wartime

Ottawa, Nov. 3 —(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King reiterated in a prepared statement last night that he would do everything in his power to avoid calling a general election in wartime if this could be done without denying the people the right of choosing their representatives in the House of Commons every five years.

"I notice that the question is being asked: 'have I in mind a general election at an early date,'" Mr. King said in the statement. He added:-

"To prevent any misunderstanding arising as to any intention on my part of holding a general election in wartime, I wish to repeat definitely what I have said consistently for more than a year, that I will do everything in my power to avoid a general election until the war is over, subject to one condition which I have also consistently stated—that the people will not be denied the right the constitution gives them of choosing their representatives in the House of Commons every five years."

Earlier, at a Press Conference at which Mr. King announced the resignation of Defence Minister Ralston and the appointment of Gen. McNaughton to the post, the Prime Minister said he had no comment to make on the possible date of a general election. The mandate of the government expires next April.

Churchill, Eden To Visit Paris

Paris, Nov. 3—(CP-Reuter—News that Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Eden of Britain are to visit Paris shortly was acclaimed today by the Paris Press.

"The visit signifies the solidity of the Alliance which unites both nations and which has never ceased to manifest itself, despite the reverses of the last four years, especially through the agreements between Britain and the Free French," was a typical view.

(It was announced in London last night that the Prime Minister and Mr. Eden would visit France at the invitation of Gen. De Gaulle, the date of the visit to be arranged later. Mr. Eden at present is in Italy but is expected home in the next few days.

(Except for Mr. Churchill's visits since D-Day to Normandy, this will be the first time he has visited France since the tragic days of 1940.)

British Sink 3 Enemy Destroyers

Rome, Nov. 3—(AP)—The British detroyers Wheatland and Avon Vale engaged and sank three enemy destroyers Wednesday west of Pag Island, off the Yugoslav coast in the Adriatic, Naval headquarters announced today.

Marshal Tito announced last night the capture of the Adriatic port of Zara, 90 miles south of Fiume. The Germans yesterday acknowledged the loss of the sizeable Yugoslav ports of Split, Metkovic and Dubrovnik on a 100-mile stretch of the Yugoslav Dalmatian coast.

British Armor, Foot Advance Nearly Mile In Sector of Forli

Rome, Nov. 3 —(AP)— British infantry and armor have advanced nearly a mile south of the Rimini-Bologna highway in the Forli sector but the Italian front generally was mired by unusually heavy rainstorms.

Fighting raged around Forli airfield, two miles southeast of Forli, with the Germans holding two sides and British forces two sides.

German guns and infantrymen blocked the Canadian advance along Highway 16 toward Ravenna on the Adriatic coastal sector. The Canadians were approximately five miles from the city.

Canadian Troops Learn Old Chief Defence Minister

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the 1st Canadian Army on the Schelde, Nov. 3 —(CP Cable)— Over field wireless sets on this cold and foggy Schelde front officers and men of the 1st Canadian Army last night heard the news that their old chief, Gen. McNaughton, had become Canada's Defence Minister in succession to Col. Ralston.

It was the biggest news on the front, topping even battle reports. The first reaction of the troops was astonishment, and then delight that "the General," as he is known to thousands of Canada's fighting men, had returned to active participation in the war.

The BBC broadcast a brief item on its Forces network and soon all the troops knew about it. Speculation on the reasons behind the cabinet change was rampant, with most of it revolving around the reinforcement situation.

Few Had Slightest Knowledge.

Few Canadians here had the slightest knowledge that Col. Ralston was at odds with the Prime Minister or that Gen. McNaughton would enter public life. Many had been wondering what "the General" had been doing lately and they could not envisage him being idle long.

It was a sad blow to the troops when Gen. McNaughton was forced to leave his command last Christmas. For the troops, McNaughton was the creator of the Canadian Army. He developed it and directed its training from the days of the 1st division until five divisions were ready for battle.

In Sicily, Italy, France, Belgium and Holland these men have shown the merit of their training and now that Gen. McNaughton has come back to share in the fight as a leading figure they are pleased.

In Italy.

With the Canadians on the Adriatic, Nov. 3 —(CP Cable)— The Canadian Corps area has been buzzing with speculation since it was learned yesterday that Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton was to replace Col. J. L. Ralston as Canadian Defence Minister. Other war news paled in comparison in the interests of the average soldier.

Enthusiasm at Gen. McNaughton's return to active participation in the war effort was practically unbounded.

Col. Ralston's resignation following so closely upon his inspection of this theatre and return to Canada with a number of soldiers' "beefs," promising either action or enunciation of a policy covering them, invited surprise and puzzlement.

All are eager to find out all the details as soon as possible, so they can form an opinion of the affair. They are jealous of the General's high reputation and do not want to see his name become a political football.

The War Today—

Hitler's Twisted Mind Fights To Save Self From Vengeance

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Sometimes I am asked to try to explain what impels Hitler to continue fighting for a lost cause, and whether the German leader still has some tricks up his sleeve.

Maybe such an attempt is not a bad idea in view of yesterday's great air battle and other signs that a showdown is impending. The difficulty is that while I've seen a good deal of Hitler at one time or another — Berchtesgaden, Godesberg, Munich, Berlin, Sudetenland— I can't claim to read readily one of the most twisted minds the devil ever moulded. Still, this abnormal mind surely reacts to some typical human emotions, so let's try.

Knows He is Defeated

First off, Hitler no longer has the slightest hope of averting defeat. He's surrounded by overwhelming military strength, backed by unlimited resources. His own fighting machine is crippled. His war supplies are nearing exhaustion. The majority of his vital industries have been knocked out. His communications are in terrible shape. His food supplies finally are running short.

Why then does he hang on? He's responding to the primary human emotion — self-preservation. He isn't fighting for the sake of Germany, but is using the final resources of the Fatherland to try to save himself from Allied vengeance. His captains are battling for life in the same corner.

There's small doubt, as I see it, that Hitler would surrender immediately if the Allies were foolish enough to promise immunity for him and his gang.

Hopes Only to Save Own Hide

So every move the Fuehrer now makes is directed to one end — to delay defeat in the hope that some fortuitous event may save his hide. What sort of a break is he looking for? The answer is that he has nothing particular in mind. He's just a terrified murderer to whom any reprieve is a good reprieve.

He says to himself: "Maybe the Allies will get tired of war and make a negotiated peace. Maybe the advocates of a soft peace will triumph." Always it's "maybe, maybe, maybe," without any specific likelihood in view.

Has the Fuehrer any secret weapon or special scheme up his sleeve? Yes, probably both. But he has nothing that he expects will give him victory — only the bare possibility of a lessening of his own punishment.

Henry Wallace Leads Attack On Mrs. Clare Luce

By R. J. ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 3 —(CP)— Vice-President Henry Agard Wallace will go down in American history as a man of vision, an able Secretary of Agriculture during his chief's first term, a Liberal who took philosophically his rejection by the conservative wing of his party at the Chicago Convention last June.

But he stepped out of character last night. And proved beyond dispute that he is a man of courage.

While President Roosevelt and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey were putting on the main show in last night's presidential election campaigning, Mr. Wallace went to Bridgeport, Conn., to aid the cause of Miss Margaret Connors, pretty, brunette Bridgeport lawyer who is the democratic candidate for representative from the fourth district. The vice-president boldy trod where no man previously had dared to raise his voice.

Mr. Wallace spoke at a rally on the old mill green and, incidentally, disclaimed any intention of telling Connecticut folk how to vote in the election in which Mis Connors is seeking to unseat Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, the playwright and author who is seeking re-election on the republican ticket.

Terming Mrs. Luce a "sharp-tongued glamor girl of 40," he took the bit in his teeth and affectionately termed Miss Connors a "solidly-built Irish girl of 29."

Said Mr. Wallace:

"Both girls play tennis but if there were to be a match between them I would advise those of you who want to be right to lay your money on Maggie.

"If there were to be a debate between them I would back Maggie. Maggie is Irish and no Clara Brokaw Luce can beat the fighting Irish."

(Throughout, Mr. Wallace referred to Mrs. Luce as "Clara" and to Miss Connors as "Maggie.")

Comparing Mrs. Luce with "the common women who have to think straight to get their work done," Mr. Wallace described the congresswoman as "this glamor woman of broadway and Sunday magazine and wise-cracking fame who sometimes when running around the country without a mental protector puts her dainty foot in her pretty mouth."

"Clara," he said, "in her secret yearnings sees herself as the Marie Antoinette of the Bourbons. Marie Antoinette Luce proudly disdains anyone who is not of Royal American blood."

Bracken Says People Want Information About Situation

Ottawa, Nov. 3 —(CP)— John Bracken, National Progressive Conservative leader, said last night in a statement that there was a "clear obligation" on Hon. J. L. Ralston or Prime Minister Mackenzie King to "tell the Canadian people the truth about the reinforcement situation."

Commenting on Col. Ralston's resignation as defence minister, Mr. Bracken said:

"Following the trip (overseas) which Mr. Ralston took for the purpose of getting all the facts, there is a clear obligation on one or other of these men to tell the Canadian people the truth about the reinforcement situation.

"The urgency for giving the information has only been emphasized by Mr. Ralston's resignation . . .

"The people of Canada are deeply concerned and desire to be told the truth—be it good or bad—in the frankest possible terms by one or other or both of these men."

CEDE VESSELS TO FRANCE

Paris, Nov. 3 — (AP) — The French Marine Ministry announced last night that the United States navy had ceded 60 small vessels to the French navy, including 11 patrol craft, 31 submarine chasers, 20 minesweepers and six tugs.

HIS POLITICAL OPINION

Idaho Falls, Idaho, Nov. 2 —(CP) —Charles C. Gossett, Democratic nominee for governor, stopped in an Idaho Falls barber shop for a shave and on leaving the chair found someone had taken his coat. "It must have been a Democrat," he mused. "A Republican would have taken my pants."

RUSSIAN TROOPS LAY SIEGE TO BUDAPEST
NAZIS WARN ALLIES MASSING FOR HUGE DRIVE

Fighting Raging Well Within Outer Defences of Capital

City Reported Enveloped In Wild Disorder, Panic

By EDDY GILMORE
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Nov. 4 — (AP)—Russian troops laid siege today to Budapest and front dispatches said the German and Hungarian defenders had fallen back into the Hungarian capital itself.

Red Army tanks were said to be battering at the outskirts of Pest in the city's southeastern suburbs, with fighting raging well within Budapest's outer defences.

(A Reuter news agency dispatch said the Russians had hurled an armored column around north of the city in an encircling move. This column was said to be storming the approaches of Ujpest, on the east bank of the Danube 2 miles north of the capital).

The capital itself was reported unofficially to be enveloped in wild disorder as the Nazi remnants poured through the streets. Hundreds of fugitives were said to be jamming the railways and highways toward Vienna, 140 miles to the north.

Red Star reported that the "field army" formed by the Hungarian puppet government had been routed outside the capital and that a captured captain said that of one division only 200 men remained after three days of intensive battle.

The newspaper described German and Hungarian losses in manpower as "immense," particularly near the tributary of the Danube just south of Budapest where Red troops wiped out 20 tanks in a great "slaughter" last night.

The capture of Pest appeared imminent but the fall of Buda on the west side of the broad Danube was another matter.

City Appears Lost.

The Soviet communique last night reported the capture of Alsonemedi seven miles south of Budapest, as the nearest point to the capital reached by the Red forces sweeping across the boggy plains between the Danube and Tisza. It was one of 100 communities enveloped in the fast-moving offensive.

Front dispatches reported severe fighting just outside the perimeter of the besieged capital but for practical military purposes the city appeared lost. The reported disorganized condition of the city's defenders presaged an early capitulation.

There was no intimation that the Red Army had trained its big guns on the capital itself, the inference being that the Russians will seek to take the capital by storm rather than subject it to a steady bombardment.

Try to Pull Out of Pocket.

To the southeast Germans and Hungarians sought any means of transportation available to pull out of a huge pocket near Szolnok. With their way blocked into Pest, the Nazis tried to make headway across the plains north of Szolnok to a highway, which runs on the east side of the Danube to Vienna.

Red Army units pouring across the Tisza, on a long front, also raced for the highway.

Berlin described the Budapest situation as "critical".

The battle for Budapest was for great stakes. Capture of the capital of the last Nazi vassal could raise the curtain on a Russian invasion of Hitler's homeland from the south over Austrian soil. Soviet troops at their nearest point were barely 90 miles from the German frontier.

Reports to the Turkish press from correspondents in Budapest said the capital was being bombed incessantly.

A Moscow broadcast last night said the Germans had been cleared from all the Baltic states "except for a patch around Liepaja, Latvian port, which is being mopped up".

The cumulative total of individual purchases now stands at $372,622,600. Average purchases by individuals have amounted to about $34,000,000 daily.

Armed Services.

Combined total of the Armed Forces is better than $43,000,000, against an original quota of $40,800,000. It is 85 per cent of their $47,853,200 total in the last loan.

Northwest Atlantic Naval Command reached $3,030,000 for 112 per cent of quota, or 80 per cent of the original objective for the whole service. The base at Saint John, N.B., has topped its $70,000 quota.

Unit organizers of the Northwest Territory and Yukon used Royal Canadian signals to make their appeal by radio and the unit reached 185 per cent of objective. This is the only unit believed to have been canvassed entirely by radio.

Canadian National Railways announced its employees invested $7,955,350 in the first nine days of the drive, an increase of $1,876,350 over the same stage of the last campaign.

The Brotherhood of Railroad trainmen, one of Canada's largest labor organizations, announced a purchase of $500,000, boosting its investments in Victory Bonds to $3,375,000.

BERLIN ATTACKED FOR SIXTH TIME IN NINE NIGHTS

Daylight Bombers Out in Strength To Bomb Special Targets In Western Germany

By HENRY B. JAMESON
(A. P. Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 4 (AP) — The U.S. 8th. Air Force staged a mass attack on German synthetic oil industries and railways today with more than 1,100 bombers and 800 fighters fanning out over targets from Hamburg to Saarbrucken.

One force attacked oil plants and refineries in the twin cities of Hamburg-Harburg.

Another hit an oil plant at Gelsenkirchen in the Ruhr. A third formation blasted military objectives in the Hanover region and a fourth flew southeast of Luxembourg against the railroad yards at Saarbrucken.

The big daylight operation followed the sixth R.A.F. Mosquito raid on Berlin in nine nights.

The Mosquitos, usually operating in small force and carrying one 4,000-pound bomb each for some specific target, again raced to the enemy capital and back without loss. Eighty-eight of these 4,000-pounders were dumped on Berlin in the past month by the Mosquitos.

The Air Ministry announced one heavy bomber previously reported missing in Thursday night's attack on Dusseldorf landed safely in France, reducing the losses to 20 aircraft on one of the heaviest raids of the war.

One of the secrets of the R.A.F.'s lower bomber losses recently is the mass night fighter escort furnished by Mark VI Mosquitos.

The British heavies used to operate virtually without escort but their losses mounted to a peak of 96 on one Nurnberg raid. Mosquito escort was the answer.

Allied fighter-bombers based in France and Belgium, hampered for several days by the weather, flew more than 1,000 sorties yesterday in support of British and Canadian troops in Holland and American forces charging into Germany southeast of Aachen.

Prime Minister Names Deputies

Ottawa, Nov. 4 (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced early today the appointment of Trade Minister MacKinnon, the minister responsible for the Canadian Shipping Board, as Canadian representative of the United Maritime Council, a United Nations body which deals with merchant shipping needs.

He also announced that A. L. W. MacCallum, chairman of the Canadian Shipping Board, has been appointed Canadian representative on the United Maritime Executive Board, with A. L. Lawes, Washington representative of the Canadian Shipping Board, as Canadian technical adviser.

Mr. King's statement said it was understood that Lord Leathers, Minister of Shipping, will be the British representative on the council. Representatives of other contracting governments have not yet been announced.

German Troops Completely Cleared From Greece, Announced From Rome

Rome, Nov. 4 —(AP)— The Germans have been completely cleared from Greece, Allied headquarters announced today.

R. A. F. pilots on reconnaissance flights reported they were unable to find any traces of the enemy who occupied the country early in 1941.

The Germans, seeking to escape the closing Allied trap, have been fleeing into Serbia and Albania. In the last 24 hours small enemy columns were seen in the vicinity of Lake Prespa, just across the Greek border in Albania.

"We believe German rearguards went over into Serbia Thursday night," an R. A. F. officer said.

In their retreat up the Vardar Valley toward the Serbian city of Skoplje the Germans blew up many road and rail bridges in an effort to delay the pursuing British. A communique from Marshal Tito's Yugoslav partisan headquarters said the patriots were besieging Bitolj, 13 miles north of the Greek border, and Skoplje, 70 miles farther north.

A Berlin broadcast said German forces had evacuated the port of Valona, on the Albanian coast, and had moved to "strong barrier positions in Northern Albania to project the road to Scutaria, which is under constant threat from Bolshevist forces." Scutaria is in extreme Northern Albania.

The Germans said their troops were fighting "communist elements" which had infiltrated into Tirana, capital of Albania.

FIRE DESTROYS HALIFAX HOSTEL, THREE KILLED

Operated by the Canadian Legion and 210 Servicemen Were in Building

Halifax, Nov. 4 — (CP) — Fire this morning destroyed the Canadian Legion Hostel here taking a toll of three lives. According to a clerk on the night desk, 210 service men were in the large wooden building when the blaze started.

The men fatally injured in the fire were: Alex Rutherland, 68, of Antigonish; William Whibley, 55, of Halifax; and William Walker, 60, of Sydney Mines. The men were employees in the building.

One of the men in the hostel, H. C. Menzies, R. C. N., of Battleford, Sask., said he was asleep when the alarm was given.

"I was dreaming," he said, "and the sound of the alarm bell fitted in with my dream. Then I heard someone screaming. I ran out of my room and the corridor was full of fire."

Some airmen from Eastern passage, near here, waiting in the lobby, said that when the fire started the whole building seemed to burst into flame at once.

Al Hickson of Toronto and an unidentified negro shared in a rescue attempt. They were said to have seen a girl in one of the upper windows and they climbed up after her.

But Hickson was injured in the attempt and the girl managed to escape unaided.

Tribute Paid Canadian And British Forces

New York, Nov. 4 — (CP) — The New York Herald Tribune paid editorial tribute Friday to the Canadian and British forces for clearing the approaches to Antwerp and making that great port available to the Allies.

The newspaper's editorial said in part:

"The achievement of the British and Canadians who have forced the enemy relentlessly beyond the Maas, who have opened the Schelde and freed southern Holland is one of the major contributions to ultimate victory. It has taken them some time to do it. But the mind goes back to Passchendaele in 1917, another battle in which a sea of blood was poured, uselessly, into a sea of mud. That, also, took time and ended nowhere. This action has moved. Even the soaking autumn of the Low Countries could not stop modern men and armor nor avert decisive results...

"The Canadian 1st and the British 2nd Armies have got it (Antwerp) for us, at the cost of blood and toil and misery in the rain; theirs has been a major accomplishment. They have won a new supply line. In doing so, they have freed themselves to supply still more overwhelming power for the great push that is certainly coming. They have brought the end much nearer than before."

JAPANESE MAKING DEFINITE STAND ON WEST LEYTE

Marshall Reinforcements for Finish Fight Despite Terrific Pounding

By MURLIN SPENCER
Associated Press War Correspondent

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 4 (AP)—The aroused Japanese, defying superior forces of American men and guns on the move north and south of Ormoc, marshalled reinforcements today under a rail of aerial bombs for a finish fight on western Leyte.

Reports for the past 24 hours told of the enemy on the recoil. Japanese airmen made more than 35 low-level attacks on eastern Leyte airfields and docks, blew up an ammunition dump and set a merchant ship afire.

At Pearl Harbor, Admiral Nimitz announced enemy planes attacked an aircraft carrier group of the 3rd fleet, which has been supporting the Philippines reinvasion, and damaged "several ships."

Enemy tanks, troops and artillery have been landed at Ormoc from a convoy which lost two transports and 25 covering planes in a fierce air battle.

Convoy Spotted.

U. S. planes later spotted a 10-mile-long motor convoy rolling north from Ormoc and swept down to treetop level over the reinforcements, blasting 30 trucks, at least two tanks, equipment and supplies.

The Japanese column was trying to reach Carigara Bay on Leyte's northwest coast by way of a 20-mile road from Ormoc and bulwark retreating enemy troops.

Indicating determination of the enemy to stay on Leyte, 250 first-line planes, piloted by some of the ablest Japanese airmen encountered in the Pacific, flew high cover over the four large transports and escorting destroyers which carried in the reinforcements.

American aircraft tore into the aerial screen and weaved through heavy flak to score a partial success but the convoy got men ashore during the darkness Wednesday night and early Thursday.

On Luzon, main Philippine island, air patrols bombed and derailed a Japanese troop train.

Conscription Issue Problem of Nation

Regina, Nov. 4 (CP)—Senator W. McL. Robertson of Halifax, President of the National Liberal Federation, said in an interview here last night the conscription issue which arose in the Dominion cabinet was not the problem of one political party, but the nation's problem. It would be settled by the people of the nation, he said.

"The war effort of Canada is not the affair of one political party. It has been the concentrated effort of all Canadians," he said.

"The conscription issue is not a political issue," he said. The real political issue is who is best suited to direct the affairs of the country in the post-war years."

REINFORCEMENTS QUESTION STIRS MANY REPORTS

Tendency To Await Gen. McNaughton's Proposals With Sympathetic Minds

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 4—(CP)—Lack of information from the government as to how it proposes to keep up the flow of reinforcements overseas without using compulsion has started many reports in the capital.

Until Gen. McNaughton, new Defence Minister has made public his plans all such speculation is without official foundation. One of the ways, however, to meet the situation if there is likely to be a shortage of reinforcements would be to reduce the number of divisions Canada has in the field.

There are two divisions in Italy and three in France and persons who have studied the matter are expressing the view that the divisions in Italy will be moved to France and consolidated with the Canadians there into four divisions and leave a fifth division available for reinforcements.

Cabinet Discussions.

Doubtless the question of moving Canadians out of Italy has been discussed by the cabinet on several occasions. Prime Minister Mackenzie King frequently stated before Canadian troops were moved to a fighting front that they were available to go anywhere the British high command decided. Any movement out of Italy would be with the concurrence of the high command.

A man high in government councils today said he was confident an adequate flow of reinforcements could be maintained without compulsion and without reducing the divisions He was convinced that more of the call-ups would volunteer for active service if approached in what he termed "the proper manner."

It is probable nothing definite will be known until Mr. King makes a statement and that is unlikely to come until Gen. McNaughton has had a full opportunity to survey the situation and submit his proposals to the cabinet.

Await McNaughton's Proposals

The feeling among cabinet ministers, even those who favor compulsion is to await Gen. McNaughton's proposals with sympathetic minds. More than one minister has pointed out that the transfer of the defence portfolio from Col. Ralston to Gen. McNaughton hasn't solved the reinforcement problem and they are in hopes the new minister can show a way.

The federal cabinet met in regular session yesterday with every indication it was discussing subjects other than the burning issue of reinforcements.

No Further Resignations Seen

Parliament Hill sources said that no further resignations from the cabinet were expected, at least immediately.

Antwerp Battle Over; U.S. Drive Reaches Roer River

American Thrust at Aachen Meets Stiff Resistance

By WILLIAM FRYE
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 4 —(AP)— Allied armies jabbing at German defences all along the 500-mile west front today racked up consistent gains as radio Berlin dinned into German ears its warnings that Gen. Eisenhower's forces were massed for a huge offensive.

British forces captured Domburg and Vlissingen (Flushing) on Walcheren Island in the Schelde estuary, but the fanatically-resisting enemy still fought savgely in the dock area of Vlissingen and retained control over about half the island, including the city of Middleburg.

Hidden German artillery at one point on Walcheren opened up and pinned down forces landing on the island's beaches. The guns had played possum for a month to avoid aerial attack. British forces moving in from the South Beveland causeway clung grimly to their positions.

The American thrust into Germany southeast of Aachen lost speed as it collided with stiffening resistance after capturing the town of Schmidt, but forged ahead for small gains with the aid of fighter-bombers blasting German infantry and tanks in its path.

Driven Back 4,000 Yards.

In the Maas bulge of eastern Holland, American troops swarmed over the Zuid Willems canal north of Nederweert and drove the enemy back 4,000 yards, capturing Ospel and reaching the vicinity of Groewood.

The battle for the approaches to the Moerdike bridge north of Breda appeared to be entering its final stages, as today's Allied communique reported bridgeheads over the river mark were being extended in spite of heavy opposition.

Polish and American bridgeheads northwest of Oosterhout, once knocked out by the enemy, were reestablished and have now been consolidated in a single attack gaining ground toward Moerdijk. The third bridgehead, north of Oudenbosch, "has been widened and deepened," the communique reported.

Capture Schmidt

The British troops operating around Meijel carried out limited attacks, but the principal action in the Maas Bulge west of Venlo was the American attack north of Nederweert, which the communique said had cleared the enemy from an area between the Zuid Willems and Noorder canals.

Although the German radio reported last night that the U.S. 1st Army was probing the German defences with local attacks all along a 30-mile front north and south of Aachen, the Allied communique mentioned only the attack south of Hurtgen, now in its third day. In addition to capturing Schmidt, infantry forces in this operation are clearing out pill-boxes in the forest south of fallen Vossenack.

The offensive on the U. S. 7th Army front continued to pile up gains, the communique reported, and the village of Reherrey was captured in the Baccarat sector. A new attack was launched in the Vosges east of Rentremont, and made progress against stubborn resistance.

From the long-quiet sector of the Maritime Alps near the French-Italian border came word that Sospel and several nearby villages overlooking the Italian frontier north of Mentone had been taken without resistance.

Allied medium bombers and fighters continued their support of the west front ground operations, hitting communications all down the Rhine Valley and between the Rhine and the German lines. A railway tunnel and seven bridges were among the targets.

Bad Weather Plagues Airmen

Even in Holland, where bad weather still plagued the air as well as the ground forces, Allied planes flew 500 sorties yesterday in support of British and Canadian troops, blasting enemy units near the Moerdike bridge and bombing German mortar positions on Walcheren Island.

At the same time the Schelde pocket south of the estuary finally was liquidated by 1st Canadian army troops after weeks of arduous, bloody fighting.

In the Schmidt sector American troops rolled clear of the thickest part of Hurtgen forest and were advancing against hastily-dug enemy field defences and natural obstacles—barriers which officers believe may be tougher to crack than the breached concrete and steel belt of the Siegfried Line.

The rest of the way to the Rhine is over gently-rolling country cut by two main valleys, the Roer and the Erft. The rivers are wide enough to form tank barriers and their valleys of mud and clay are impossible to cross without bridging an American officer said.

Strongly Dug In.

Although the Americans were only three-quarters of a mile from the Roer, German troops on the opposite bank were dug in strongly and were well armed with artillery and mortars. The capture of Schmidt came after a two-mile advance southeast of fallen Ossewack.

A German broadcast predicted that the Allies would launch a three-way assault, hitting out in Holland, in the Aachen area and in Lorraine. Declaring that Allied operations were four weeks behind schedule since the defeat at Arnhem, the enemy broadcast said:

Enslaved Men of "Lost Legion" Forced To Live and Work Like Animals

By MARGARET ECKER
(CP War Correspondent)

Luxemburg, Nov. 4 —(CP)—After four years of beating, starvation and abuse at German hands some of the Lost Legion are men again.

The Lost Legion is made up of men, dragged from their homes in Russia, Poland, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Lithuania, Greece and other conquered countries. For four years they've been taken through Europe and forced to work in labor gangs, mines, factories and in building fortifications.

They were taken from their homes for slave labor, but also to prevent them from producing a new generation that would grow up to oppose Nazism.

A few hundred of these men are stationed in a former convent in Luxemburg. The liberation of France, Belgium and Luxemburg has made them free men again, and now all want to get into uniform and fight in the army of their own country.

A small dark young man was one of Tito's Partisans, who had been captured and flung into a concentration camp. From there he was taken to slave in an iron mine near Lille, France. They lived and worked like animals, he said. When Cherbourg fell, they were evacuated into the interior in trucks, but more than 3,000 escaped into North-Eastern France and Luxemburg.

Pro-Allied Luxemburg citizens gave them some food but for the most part they lived on what they could find, chiefly potatoes stolen from fields. When Luxemburg fell they presented themselves to the Americans.

"And now my only wish is to go home and fight once more for Tito", he concluded.

how he had been taken from his home in Warsaw to work in military installations in Serbia. Later he worked in gold mines in Yugoslavia.

"We worked hard, we ate little," he said. "Our food was sauerkraut and water. We were beaten three times every day with clubs or whips". Like many of the men he believed part of the ill-treatment was to make them sterile.

GNR. JAMES SISLER ABOARD ST. JOHN

At least one Belleville boy was aboard the Canadian frigate St. John, when she recently collaborated with a sister ship the Swansea in sinking a German submarine in an engagement, which has been kept secret for several weeks. The local boy aboard is Gunner James Sisler, son of Lieut. Col. B. C. Sisler, and Mrs. Sisler of this city.

Several weeks ago Mr. Sisler's son wrote to his parents intimating something big was in store for the crew. "Just watch the newspapers and listen to the radio", wrote Gunner Sisler to his father. He stated that high ranking officers had been aboard and that seven day's leave for the crew members was expected. This however, was the only mention of any possible action, which may have taken place.

AIRMAN FINDS SUM OF MONEY ON STREET

Activities in and around local police circles were purely of a routine nature during the past twenty-four hours. At 66 Murney Street, mischievous children threw a large stone through the front window of the home. However, the miscreants had disappeared before police could arrive on the scene.

An airman, stationed at No. 6 Repair Depot, walked into the police station Friday night carrying a goodly sum of money in his hand. The airman informed the desk sergeant he had found the cash lying on the street in the city downtown area. His name was recorded in the event the money is not claimed.

Provincial Police are investigating an alleged break-in at Batawa today. No further details are available.

Community Fund Of $15,000 Now Oversubscribed

Thanks to the wholehearted generosity of the residents of this city and immediate district, the quota of $15,000 set for the Belleville Community Service Fund has been reached and passed, campaign officials announced today. Actual figures available quote the amount contributed as in the vicinity of $15,300.

Although the objective has been reached, officials feel that there are still a number of people who are desirous of contributing to the general fund. Arrangements have been made whereby donations may be left at the Y.M.C.A. offices on Campbell Street.

Apropos of an official announcement of appreciation, Community Fund. Campaign officials today expressed their sincere appreciation of the fine response of the residents of this city to their appeal. "The associations and organizations which will benefit from this generosity, are greatly appreciative of what this city has done for them. The good work will go on and this committee wishes to add its gratitude. Thanks again, Belleville, we knew you would not let us down," one said today.

Mock Marriage Held in Belgium

There is no holding these gunners of Lieutenant Bill McGeachie's battery now attempting to master Flemish in between chores of kicking the Nazis out of Belgium.

A few weeks ago they captured a German recce outfit and flitted in and about estaminets mounted on Hitler's motorbikes and jeeps.

It took Lieut. Bill and his officer pals a few days to round up the lads who were burning Adolf's gasoline, ersatz or otherwise at an alarming rate of speed. However, no harm was done and the war was soon resumed.

And now they pop up with this one.

The lads were sitting back, musing upon the war and who would win the National Hockey League in 1949, when the "Mail" call came. Someone got a parcel containing a piece of wedding cake cut at the marriage of his sister "somewhere in Canada."

It, as usual, was doled around and the boys decided to have a mock wedding to celebrate the occasion. When it was over the following report was sent to the sender of the cake.

"Deep in the heart of Normandy a pretty, but soily wedding was solemnized when Gunner A. M. Finney took as his bride Gunner Junior Kearnse, both of an artillery unit. The bride was becomingly attired in battle-dress two sizes too large, with anklets to match and wore fatigue boots without laces. Without a shirt, and needing a shave, the bride went forth blushingly to meet the groom. He looked very smart in a pair of greasy coveralls with hat to match. Around his waist was a piece of rope and he was in his socked feet due to an ingrown toenail.

"Amid a setting of dirty mess tins, petrol cans, and bed rolls the happy pair were united. L-Bdr. officiated and Gunner Doug Reid whistled, 'May I sleep in your barn tonight, Mister?'

"A reception followed in which the bride cut the cake saving the biggest piece for himself. The groom poured tea from an old hardtack tin, and later passed cigarette butts around."

Northern Norway Civilians Now Being Evacuated

London, Nov. 4 —(CP-Reuter) — Berlin announced today evacuation of civilians from the whole of Northern Norway as far south as Tromsoe, last hiding-place of the Tirpitz.

Evacuation of Norway's Arctic Province, with a coastline of about 500 miles, came little more than a week after the Red Army's invasion of Northern Norway and the capture of the port of Kirkenes on the Varanger Fjord.

Loss of Kirkenes placed the German troops still in the Arctic in a situation in which they had to try to make a 200-mile winter march across the high plateau of the Finnmark or attempt a get-away in small boats from the fishing villages of the Arctic coast.

Removal of the battered battleship Tirpitz from its lair in Altenjord near Hammerfest, appears to have been part of the evacuation move now announced.

The battleship was last reported lying outside Tromsoe, where it was hit by a 12,000-pound bomb during an R. A. F. attack last week.

Evacuation of Tromsoe suggests the Tirpitz may again start her long journey south down the Norwegian coast.

In the past few days German reports have suggested that the German line in North Norway had been withdrawn to more favorable positions. Today's announcement, however, is the first indication that the withdrawal has been so extensive.

Founder of Kinsmen Addresses Five Clubs on Benefits of Milk Fund

Reiterating a belief that there is no room in Canada for competition among service clubs and hoping for a national organization in the post war period, Founder "Hal" Rogers of the Kinsmen Club, spoke to an inter-club meeting of "Kin" members from five clubs at the Quinte Hotel on Friday night.

The occasion was "Welcome Night" with members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club playing hosts to club members from Trenton, Tweed, Campbellford and Picton, the first three clubs being founded by the local club during the year.

Introduced by Kin Jack Houston, vice-chairman and treasurer of the Kinsmen national fund, "Hal" told of the founding of the Kinsmen Club twenty-five years ago in Hamilton by "four young fellows with a vivid imagination and a marvellous ambition." Incidentally, Mr. B. C. Sisler, manager of the local Dominion Bank, was treasurer of the first Kinsmen Club in Hamilton.

Fellowship as Basis

The Kinsmen Club had been founded on fellowship, because without fellowship there could be no purpose and no purpose without fellowship. The founder pictured the peacetime Kinsmen Club as a bunch of fellows having a whale of a time, while in wartime they still had a whale of a time but were united for a national war effort.

The Kinsmen national war effort took form in their "Milk for Britain Fund," a fund which had been organized in August, 1941, as the result of appreciation of a great need in Britain. Kinsmen had promised to send 1,500,000 quarts the first year, but instead had sent four million. "This was possible only because the people of Canada had realized a great need," said Mr. Rogers.

Shell-Out One of Many Efforts

The speaker went on to emulate the many various projects operated by Kinsmen to raise money for their "Milk for Britain Fund," intimating that their annual Shell-Out parties on Hallowe'en were only one of many efforts.

"Why send milk overseas?" asked the speaker. "We sent milk overseas because we love little children and we know that in providing them with needed milk we are helping to build the morale of parents. Just as long as the children of Britain need milk, the Kinsmen club will see that they get it".

Milk For Overseas After War.

In closing "Hal" intimated that the Kinsmen's job of sending milk overseas would not be completed when victory is won. "We have already done a wonderful job, but no Kinsmen will be satisfied as long as any child in Britain needs milk and cannot get it".

In introducing the guest speaker Mr. Houston stated that altogether over 15 million quarts of milk had been sent to Britain by Kinsmen, the operating costs of the fund now being as low as 1.88 cents on the dollar.

District Kinsmen Governor "Orby" Boake complimented the Belleville club on their feat of founding three new clubs in one year and stated that the inter-club meeting with five clubs present was an indication of what the Kinsmen club meant. As the only all-Canadian club it stood for Kinship, Leadership, Fellowship and Friendship. He likened "Kin" clubs to a ship for which he prophesied a safe and sure landing.

President of the Belleville club, "Matt" Currie acted as master of ceremonies for the inter-club meeting which, beside addresses by national executive officers, a varied program of musical entertainment. Welcome to the guests was expressed by Mayor Harry Rollins, with "Kin" appreciation to the guest speaker given by Ted Follwell.

Entertainment.

Included on the musical part of the program was Jimmy Elliott, who delighted with several trumpet solos, Mr. Jack Deacon, as tenor soloist, and Mr. William Grant who was called back for several encores on his xylophone. As a tribute to a nephew, Rflmn. "Bud" Barrett, recently killed in action, he played as a final number, the well-loved hymn "Nearer My God to Thee".

Chairman of program "Kin" Cleo Colling came in for a vote of appreciation from the members of the combined clubs who expressed their thanks for the fine program offered. Furthering the feeling of fellowship tables were arranged for a member of each of the five clubs present to be seated at each table, while the two other service club presidents in the city, Kiwanian Jack McVeigh and Rotarian Orland Pinkston, were present to enjoy the hospitality of their sister club.

NATURALIST DIES OF HEART ATTACK AT KINGSVILLE

Jack Miner, 79, Loved Birds and Made Them Life Study

Kingsville, Ont., Nov. 4 — (CP)— The man who started Canada's first bird sanctuary, silver-haired Jack Miner, outspoken friend of the wild bird, is dead.

The 79-year-old internationally-famous Canadian naturalist suffered two heart attacks shortly after lunch yesterday and died at 3 p. m. Until a few hours before his death, he had been with the wild ducks and geese on his sanctuary.

Known to thousands, Jack Miner spent the last 50 years of his life in bird-life research, lecturing and writing on wild life conservation. His work earned the praise and tribute of outstanding figures in all walks of life and made this southwestern Ontario town famous as "The home of Jack Miner."

Jack Miner whose death occurred on Friday at his home at Kingsville at the age of 79 years.

He was born at Dover Centre, Ohio, a suburb of Cleveland, and came to Canada at the age of 13. At 29, he started his sanctuary around the mud ponds near his home.

For his work he received commendation from the King in June, 1943 with the award of the Order of the British Empire.

Besides being a friend of the wild birds, Miner wrote several books on their life, among them "Jack Miner and the Birds," "Jack Miner on Current Topics," and "Jack Miner, His Life and Religion."

He is survived by his widow and three sons, Jasper, Manley and William.

Candidates Will Fire Last Shots In Eastern States

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 4 (CP) — President Roosevelt and his Republican opponent, Governor Thomas E. Dewey, will fire their last major shots in the election tonight, the former from Boston and Mr. Dewey in New York's Madison Square Garden.

The President held his last pre-election press conference in Washington yesterday, told correspondents he was praying for fine weather for his Saturday swing through the New England States and boarded his special train for Boston.

Governor Dewey spent yesterday in Albany putting the final touches on the speech he will make here tonight, without giving any hints as to whether he will fulfil the President's suspicion that he might be saving some special campaign material for his last appeal to the voters.

After this weekend the President will return to his family home at Hyde Park to await, with his family, the returns of the voting on Tuesday.

Governor Dewey is expected to come to New York City on Tuesday to cast his vote and remain here for the vote counting. Both leaders are scheduled to make election eve appeals by radio, Monday night.

As President Roosevelt headed into Connecticut and Massachusetts today, with brief speeches planned for Bridgeport and Hartford before the evening rally in Boston, he was obviously the favorite of those who like to bet on elections purely as a gambling proposition.

Governor John W. Bricker and Senator Harry S. Truman, the vice-presidential nominees, also wound up their campaigns last night, each in his home state.

Vice-President Henry Wallace, in an address prepared for a Brooklyn rally, expressed the belief the President would have a popular majority of more than 3,000,000 votes and an electoral college majority of more than 100. The winner must gain 266 of the total of 531 votes.

If It Isn't Too Much to Ask
(H. I. Phillips in N.Y. Sun)
Stukas and bombs and shrapnel—
Hell through the night and day—
Muck and the blood of buddies—
Grief in the awesome fray—
Struggle and thirst and torture—
These are not sought of YOU;
All that is asked is painless—
Buying a bond or two!

II
Minefield and trap and pill box—
Into the jaws of death—
Giving your all, and hearing
Many a pal's last breath...
Anguish and heat and hunger—
None of these must YOU face...
You are but asked for money—
Dross from some hiding place!

III
Hand grenade, gun and mortar—
Sweat with a crimson hue—
Death in a field in Autumn—
This is not asked of YOU!
Eyes that are blank and sightless—
Wounds that will ever burn—
Who can call duty buying
Bonds at a neat return.

IV
Kids on a distant beachead,
Dead where the waters lap—
Fliers in burning airplanes—
Boys in a booby-trap—
This is THEIR patriotism...
Why are we free to choose
Merely a safe investment,
Knowing we cannot lose?

V
"Get at that pill box, soldier!"...
"Mop up that nest there, Joe!"...
"Bayonets! On the double!"...
These calls YOU will not know!
Merely some songs, some music—
Merely a slight request,
"If you can spare the money,
Mister, will you invest?"

L'Envoi
Sacrifice? Courage? Duty?
How can we call it so—
Helping a bit with silver—
Lending a little dough!

A Braw Scot.

Lieutenant John Stephenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Stephenson, has exchanged the grenade of the artillery for the tartan of the Scottish kilt.

He is now the only Canadian member of the 7th Battalion of the Black Watch, famous British regiment of the line.

And right now, so he writes his folks, he is "going in with the tide around Holland way" and doing a fine job of it.

The other day John took his platoon and went Jerry-hunting among the water-covered dunes of that country. The Scotties gave a fine account of themselves and although losing five men, came back with a herd of terrified Jerries.

"It was a poor exchange", John wrote.

In the regiment are an Australian, New Zealander and another lad of other birth than that of Auld Scotia.

Lieutenant Stephenson, it will be remembered, enlisted some four years ago, went overseas, came back as a sergeant and got his commission in Canada. He was stymied down Halifax way for 18 months as an instructor, and the big opportunity came when Canadian army officers were asked for to serve with British infantry regiments. He seized the opportunity, and he is now where he has wanted to be for the past two years—at grips with the enemy. Good hunting and good luck, m'lad.

THIS "JERRY" WAS DIFFERENT

When Greek meets Greek they usually open a restaurant, so 'tis said. When Greek meets a Jerry, there is generally hell to pay these days—but when the Greeks of Athens met this particular "Jerry" the affair wound up in a wild demonstration of affection, delight, osculation and rousing welcome.

He is Jerry Doran, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doran, Grove Street. Jerry, an able seaman on theHMCS "Prince David" was with his ship at Athens when the Canadian army of Liberation landed. The inhabitants went wild with joy and nearly smothered the Canuck sailors and soldiers in an orgy of welcome.

Writing of the welcome Lieut. Gilbert Milne, nayal photographer stated "Athens was terrific. About ten miles out the people started meeting us. They were in caiques, tugboats, everything even to bathtubs. There would be ten people in a small rowboat all standing up, cheering. One sunk and people still waved from the water every time they came up for air. Somebody picked them up eventually but they cheered just as much struggling in the water as they did aboard.

"Anyway we got into Athens, but couldn't do any business. I was in an LCA and we had a full load of hysterical people, and towing a half dozen boats that had come out to meet us. But instead of the people getting off when we touched the jetty, more go in.

"They they grabbed our sailors and took them away on their shoulders. We didn't see any of them for hours. We were the first Allied servicemen in, remember. I saw lots of sailors go off that way riding high above the crowd, and among them was Jerry Doran of Belleville. Anyone at home who knows anyone on a landing craft can rest assured that he got thoroughly kissed, hugged, cheered, cried on, fed, treated to drinks, and everything else that day. They brought wine to the jetty for mothers. They threw millions of worthless Greek drachmas (money) to the men and sprinkled perfume over the parade.

"The Prince David" and her merry men had a full two-day advantage over the rest of the liberation forces. Her landing craft policed the harbors and convoyed the convoys to the jetties. By the time the main liberation army arrived the David's men were installed in the palatial Yacht Club or near. There they stayed until the job was finished and they pulled out of Greece to another port to prepare for the next job—whatever that it".

On the Prince David is a brother of Jerry's. He is Leading Stoker Teddy Doran.

Alaskan Highway Film and Lecture Much Enjoyed

Marmora.—A beautiful technicolor film on the Alaskan Highway taken by Rev. H. G. Watts, Dominion Field Secretary of the M.S.C.C., was shown by that clergyman in St. Paul's Parish Hall, before an overflowing audience on Thursday evening. Rev. J. M. Brownlie, L.TH., S.TH., rector of the parish, who acted as chairman, in his introductory remarks referred to the wide experience of the Field Secretary which included two years residency in China and fourteen years missionary effort in Japan. Mr. Watts, before giving his thrilling running commentary on his film, asked his audience not to treat it as a mere entertainment like they would a film of its kind shown at a theatre, but rather as a colored picture to fill in such teaching of his subject that could not be adequately conveyed by words he might use. He also reminded his hearers of the route the first missionaries followed in entering Canada. When the new Alaskan highway was put through it touched points where mission stations of long standing are situated and this shows that the Church of England through help received from the Motherland had seen to it that people in remote parts got the gospel. Last year he travelled 18,000 miles in visiting many of these mission in the northern region.

In the film the commencement of the new highway at Dawson Creek, was shown and later scenes of Fort St. John, Dawson City and White Horse were unfolded in beautiful panorama. Incidentally, Mr. Watts is a nephew of the late G. F. Watts, noted English painter and his initiative in obtaining charming scenes of the flora of the north country, revealed that he is of a family with an artistic taste. At the close of the lecture, the rector made remarks appropriate to the occasion. A collection was taken for the Mission Funds of the church. The film was also shown at St. Mark's, Bonarlaw on Wednesday evening and at Deloro Hall on Thursday afternoon in addition to which, Rev. H. G. Watts addressed children in St. Paul's Parish Hall on Wednesday afternoon. He was the guest on Wednesday and Thursday of Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Brownlie.

Plans were made to hold weekly card parties in the Parish Hall, commencing November 15th., and committees to handle the same were named. Light refreshments are to be served at these parties. It was decided to hold a bake sale and rummage table in the Jones' block on Saturday, December 2nd. Thanks were extended by a member for flowers received in a recent bereavement. The meeting closed with the benediction being pronounced by the president.

Jack Miner

The famous Canadian naturalist and lover of wild life, Jack Miner, is dead at the age of 79 at his home at the bird sanctuary at Kingsville, Ont., where he lived for so many years and which brought him fame throughout North America and beyond the seas for his work on behalf of the wild life of this Continent. His death removes one who added a new and prophetic element of interest to life as he interpreted the living and breathing nature of the woods and fields to mankind. The nations are the poorer for his death because during his lifetime he saw deeply into the mysteries of life and was a champion of the cause of the bird and animal life of not only Canada but of the United States.

His sanctuary has been the quest of tens of thousands of persons year after year as people came from near and far to see the modern miracle of the flight of Canadian geese and how birds lived in the colony at Kingsville. There they saw what had been told in newspapers and by word of mouth of other visitors—this impressive scene where the great naturalist had set up a colony of wild life. The response of the birds to his human touch is one of the finest proofs of the nobility of life.

Jack Miner performed what seemed miracles or wizardry to many. It was the intimate relationship between him and the birds which had no fear of their benefactor—if that is a miracle. Many years ago he was in Belleville and told a large audience in the city hall that what he did could be done by anyone in whom the birds had confidence. That confidence can be inspired, he said, by teaching the birds by one's actions and interest in bird life to trust him and that this would bring the feathered friends of man to delight in his presence. Jack Miner's manner of handling birds so that they implicity trusted him was the miracle which his true love of wild life had brought to pass.

The man who gets close to nature's heart must by that very fact come to know nature and feel with nature. It was one of the finest demonstrations of the noble nature of the naturalist that he saw the value and nobility of interest in wild life and that he was a believer in the goodness of life and in Providence who directed creation and directs the march of the generations of life of all kinds upon the surface of the earth. Through his faith in man and the lessons he saw in life from the birds and the animals he drew very close to the heart of nature's God.

Therefore Jack Miner stood forth on this Continent a man whom the world honored. He was recently honored by His Majesty King George Sixth. Men and women helped in his cause of feeding the birds at Kingsville. But that was not the only result of his work. The lives of tens of thousands of men and women in Canada and the United States are richer because Jack Miner lived and taught lessons that no other person of this day and age taught mankind. His view of nature was a reasonable one. His attitude towards hunting was a generous attitude. He has helped to bring man closer to the nature on which man so much depends and he has found for men and women new spheres of interest in the life about them. The scientist can tell of the benefits of bird life in keeping down insect pests which without control by birds might endanger man's habitation of the globe. But Jack Miner felt instinctively this fact and the affinities and relationships of nature and his work in this cause was a moral and spiritual effort that could not fail to enrich his soul and those of the men and women who listened to his story of man's friends in the fields and in the woodlands. His soul was tuned to the voices of nature in which he could hear the voice of God. The nature before whose open altar he bowed in reverence had its lessons for him and all mankind.

Longfellow spoke of the birds in "The Poet's Tale" in "Tales of a Wayside Inn:"

> "Do you ne'er think what wondrous beings these?
> Do you ne'er think who made them and who taught
> The dialect they speak, whose melodies
> Alone are the interpreters of thought?
> Whose household words are songs in many keys,
> Sweeter than instrument of man e'er caught!"

To Jack Miner birds were more than singers, they served in the fields and woods, they were part of nature that is beautiful and eloquent in its creatures. As they have all through history taught man lessons as the Bible and the literature of nations show, they found Jack Miner one who spoke for them as a true prophet and a true voice of nature and humanity. They are part of the garment of nature in which the Unseen is seen and one can almost imagine at the autumn season the birds carrying fallen richly-colored leaves to the grave of Jack Miner. But his work is not ended, it goes on under the direction of his son and in the lives of those who have caught his message.

British Peacetime Efficiency

Sir Graham Cunningham, Controller-General of Munitions, expects a great increase in the efficiency of British peacetime industry as the result of experience gained in the war.

Speaking to the Engineering Industry's Association at Birmingham, on October 18th, he stressed in particular two factors: (1) The vast number of new machine tools introduced into British factories, the possibilities of which have been fully demonstrated; (2) The close collaboration between management and workers, which has helped British industry to obtain the maximum results from its equipment.

This increased efficiency can be seen in the over-all rise of total output in Britain during the war—estimated at 47 per cent over pre-war production—despite the fact that some five million workers have been absorbed by the armed forces.

The Controller-General added that a considerable volume of knowledge regarding production has been acquired in Britain on the part of workpeople and management, and that this will place the country in a strong industrial position in the post-war world.

Hot Water On Tap For Housewives

Two new electric power stations, three hundred miles of pipes buried beneath the pavements are envisaged in a $443,000,000 scheme to supply hot water on tap, in the way that gas and electricity are now supplied, to London housewives.

The scheme, which is the work of a panel of heating engineers, has been described by one of the principals of the scheme to the London Daily Sketch industrial correspondent. If the scheme is approved and the necessary authority is obtained from the London County Council, 15,000 men, working for five years will be required to complete the scheme and then 4,000 men to maintain it. Electricity from two new mammoth generating stations, one to be erected on the south and the other on the north bank of the Thames will be used for heating the water and supplying the current needed to maintain the temperature in the 500 miles of pipes which will carry the hot water to Londoners' homes.

Donkeys, Pigs, Rabbits

(Australian News Letter)

Some results of the shortage of manpower in Australian county districts:

Donkeys have become such a nuisance in South Australia that there is to be a round-up. For several years they have been roaming, breeding, knocking down fences and trampling down or eating the scarce feed. If they cannot be sold they will be destroyed.

Dingoes in Western Queensland have caused unbelievable damage. One grazier in 12 months had his flock of sheep reduced from 31,000 to 17,800—not an exceptional case.

The government is offering up to 7/6 for each scalp.

Rabbits, imported from England in the early days, cost the country millions in upastures destroyed. Trapping has been reduced and wire-netting is difficult to obtain. Seven rabbits eat or destroy sufficient grass to pasture one sheep.

A QUEER BEAST

It is commonly said that the giraffe is absolutely voiceless and is the only four-footed mammal that does not make some vocal sound characteristic of the species.

It may be true that the giraffe is practically voiceless, but there is evidence that it does occasionally utter a feeble sound characteristic of its kind.

Claude W. Leister, assistant to the director of the Bronx Zoo said a few years ago: "The giraffe does have a voice, at least it is able to utter a lowing sound. We have heard our female giraffe utter such a sound upon certain occasions when she was especially concerned as to the welfare of her young. The 1936 annual report of the Game Warden of Kenya, Africa, stated that a young giraffe when separted from its mother will bawl and low like a hungry calf.

It is doubtful whether any species of large four-footed animal is absolutely voiceless, although the larynx in giraffes is poorly developed and members of this species generally utter no sound, even when greatly excited.

A giraffe does not have true horns. The pair of projections on the head of a giraffe appear to be horns but they are merely soft tufts of skin and fat without a trace of the hard growth generally described as horn.

"Giraffe" is derived from the Arabic name of this native of Africa. Another name for it is "camelopard," referring to the fact that it looks somewhat like a camel and is spotted like a leopard.

The first giraffe seen in Europe was sent to Rome from Egypt by Julius Caesar and referred to by Pliny the Elder.

Despite its great length the neck of a giraffe is not long enough to reach the ground. The neck of the giraffe contains only seven vertebrae, the usual number in mammals, and is not very flexible. It is the elongation, not a greater number of vertebrae, that elevates the animal's head to a great height. The flexible necks of birds contain 4 vetebrae, twice as many as mammals. In order to bend its head to the ground to eat grass or to drink from a stream or pond a giraffe must assume an awkward position by spreading its forelegs apart and lowering the entire body. This species, however, seldom feeds on grass and is capable of going for long periods without water. It obtains its food chiefly by browsing on the lower branches of trees.

The giraffe is a very timid animal and in the wild state is approached with difficulty because of the position of its eyes, which project far from the skull and give the animal the peculiar advantage of being able to see behind without turning its head.

Giraffes are the tallest animals in the world. It is said that bulls sometimes attain a height of 20 or 21 feet. Theodore Roosevelt killed a bull seventeen feet and two inches tall.

Address Dr. William Brady, care of this Newspaper.)

A READER WRITES ON GRAY HAIR.

Dear Dr. Brady:

Here is my experience with anti-gray hair vitamins as suggested by you.

At the age of 36 I had a lot of scattered gray hairs in my brown tresses. I began taking anti-gray hair vitamins as you suggest in the pamphlet. Within a month I experienced a sense of well being and energy. This has continued.

(Even if the experiment stops there it has been well worth while, hasn't it? Remember, the sense of well being and energy is from better nutrition, not from medicine or stimulants of any kind.)

But at the end of a year no change in the gray! However, I got the first really successful permanent I have had in years, although it was only a regular machine wave. Then sometime in the last six months the gray hair has almost disappeared. I have to look to find a gray hair now. I am still taking the capsules. So perhaps six months isn't long enough trial. It has taken me eighteen. But I feel like a million and can do the work of two people without being "nervous" or worn out.

(Signed)—H. T.—

The rejuvenation Mrs. H. T. experienced she describes as "sense of well being and energy", "feel like a million and can do the work of two people without being 'nervous' or worn out". That's the important thing. The improved condition and appearance of the hair—and, I should expect, of the skin or complexion and the nails, which are equally dependent on the state of nutrition—is incidental.

Readers who ask for the pamphlet 'Care of the Hair and Scalp" will receive it if they provide stamped self addressed envelope. Readers who send a clipping will be disappointed. There is no charge for one pamphlet. If you ask for more than one, enclose ten cents for each additional pamphlet you want.

The Hair pamphlet deals with growth of the hair, care, falling hair, baldness, wetting the hair, heat, superfluous hair, dandruff, company, hair dye, anti-gray hair vitamins, excessively oily scalp, dry hair, etc.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Thumb Sucking.

Please tell me how to stop child two years old from thumb sucking. This child sucks his two fingers and now there are callouses on them from it. (Mrs. P. H.)

Answer—Better not interfere. If the child's mother will ask for it (no clipping will suffice) and enclose stamped envelope bearing her address I'll send her a pamphlet on thumb sucking.

Gas

Speaking of gas pains, would it be a pain in the heart? If a person ate— cough drops every day like candy would it cause heart disease? (H. C.)

Answer—No. No.

Salute to Dentists.

Dentist says my young daughter's teeth are very soft—he filled her six-year molars but said they are soft as putty and the fillings may not stay. I asked him if he could recommend anything to harden them and he said she would just have to wait and see how her second teeth turn out. (L. V. W.)

Answer—I hope dentists who read this will send me a stamped self addressed envelope and ask for the No 1 Little Lesson in the Way of Health—booklet "Save Your Teeth". Others who would like the booklet must enclose twenty-five cents with self addressed stamped envelope. Your young daughter, Ma'am, should have a daily ration of vitamin D and calcium-phosphorus or at least a diet that assure adequate intake of calcium and phosphorus. This is explained in the booklet—and the booklet is newly revised, so my quondam friends, the dentists, will find it not too bad, I hope.

USE PIANO WIRE TRICK

On the Western Front, Nov. 4—(AP)—The Germans are using on the western front the piano wire trick they first pulled in Italy.

The wire is stretched tightly across roads at just the right height to decapitate soldiers speeding by in jeeps.

Troops reported one, far behind the front lines, probably was put up by pro-Nazi civilians.

REPORTED MISSING

Toronto, Nov. 4 — (CP) — Wing Cmdr. C. W. Palmer, D.F.O. and Oak Leaf, of Dundalk, Ont., has been reported missing following a bombing mission overseas, it was learned here. His twin brother, St. James Palmer of the R.C.A.F. is overseas.

WRECKAGE FOUND

Halifax, Nov. 4—(CP)—Two hunters cruising the woods across the harbor from here have found the skeletons of four long-dead R.C.A.F. airmen and the wreckage of their plane, it was learned last night.

Wreckage of the plane, a twin-engine machine, was strewn over 50 yards.

The R.C.A.F. here had no statement on the discovery.

BEHIND IN PRODUCTION

Toronto, Nov. 4 — (CP) — An official of the Bank of Canada here said last night the Royal Mint is behind in its production of five-cent pieces causing a shortage of the coins. He said that because the mint has a low priority it is unable to get enough steel and chrome.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

GAS PLANT

Mr. Editor:

Having heard and read a lot for many years about the gas company of this city I have been more interested recently as two recent letters on the subject seem to be very hard on some citizens who use gas. The old saying is, that there are two sides to every story. So here is my side of a story. Five years ago we built a new house. We decided not to put gas in because for twenty-five years we had had poor service at times so we have all electric for cooking and everything. The first winter the escape of gas into our basement was awful. We had to keep the windows in the basement open most of the time. The second winter but for the timely aid of doctor, nurse and the neighbors I should have passed out of this world and several times since have been nearly overcome. At once it will be said that it is up to the commission to remedy that condition.

They have been over the situation several times and did what they could under the circumstances. The trouble is the gas mains. They are old and worn out, I guess. I am told that in this section there has never been anything done to them since they were first put in. Now it would be too costly a job to put in miles of new mains for a few. As this city is losing thousands of dollars every year must we continue in this way and throw thousands more away.

I think the better way is to reimburse the users of gas by installing electric service and fittings free. In the end it will pay as I have found. I now save 20 per cent every two months on my bills besides the discount. Gas is dear and unhealthy. As for returned men finding work in an out-moded old gas works it is fantastic. Electric power is the modern way and will give more work to our boys.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for valuable space in your paper.

A Belleville Housekeeper.

CIVILIANS ACQUITTED

Verviers, Belgium, Nov. 4—(AP)—Two German civilians accused of harboring German soldiers, the first to face trial under Allied occupation law on charges serious enough to provide the death penalty, were acquitted last night — on the plea that they had merely been carrying out directions issued by the Allied propaganda organization.

What is the Secret of Family Health

One family is always healthy. In the next family there seem to always be someone sick.

Why?

It used to be customary to blame this condition on heredity.

But recent investigations show that far more depends on living and eating habits.

The underlying cause of low vitality is often traceable to a lack of vitamin B1 and essential minerals derived from the food consumed.

As a result whole families may be found to be subject to a low condition of health which leaves them prey to serious and annoying ailments.

More and more intelligent thinking people are learning to depend on Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a "pick-me-up" to help them out of a low condition of vitality.

It is usually the mother in the home who is largely responsible for the family health and most mothers know about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and what it can do to help restore richness to the blood and vigor to the nervous system.

In most families, these days, there are excesses of work, worry and anxiety which overtax the nerves and cause headaches, irritability, loss of sleep and indigestion.

But these troubles do not need to get you down if you let Dr. Chase's Nerve Food help you.

Ask for the new economy size bottle of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and set it on the dining table along with the salt and pepper shakers so everyone who needs it may get his after meal supply of vitamin B1 and food minerals.

THE WAITING DAYS.

The days are standing still, as hand in hand,
They glory in the joy of Autumn cheer,
With mellow sun, and trees a beauteous band
They wait the coming of the closing year.

A hush falls o'er the land, no sound is heard,
Save where the squirrel wakes the echoes low,
No sound of breeze, no voice of Summer bird,
As time moves on with languid step and slow.

But in these waiting days we seem to feel
The nearness of the One who made it all;
These glorious days, the loving care, reveal
Of Him who eyes marks e'en a sparrow's fall.

And then, as life draws near to Autumn time,
When work is done and we are waiting still,
May God's Sweet Spirit in our faces shine
As Autumn glories crown the woodland hill.

Fashion Flashes

EFFECTIVE USE of color is made by one designer for a pretty dinner suit Poppy red crepe is used for the skirt, and peony red woolen for the jacket, both shades meeting in a double bow of velvet at the waist of the jacket top in back.

NEVER were suits more colorful. For example, what about a tweed suit with jacket of grey, tan and pink mixture worn with black wool skirt and blouse of pink wool jersey.

A SMART SET for smart use is a bag and shoe duo both of black suede, the bag with a big frame of simulated tortoise-shell, the pump with a pretty butterfly bow of the simulated shell.

A NEW LOOK to many colors offers added variety this season. There is Sorrento blue, a clear, strong blue with a slightly purple cast, that is lovely. It is used for a coat of woolen made with high, rolled collar. It has a lining of black Persian and a side tie sash of fabric also faced with the fur that knots and hangs in two hem-length panels.

AN ALTERNATIVE from the long-skirted dinner dress is a handsome street-length frock of black crepe studded all over in electric blue sequin stars. Cut on simple, slim lines.

THE RETURN of evening elegance is typified by a gown of pearl gray satin with brown Chantilly type lace forming a cascade either side of the skirt from below the waist. A matching scarf is draped from the shoulders to form a bolero or to cover the hair and frame the face.

WINTER WHITE appears in many hats and in white lambskin coats and linings this season. A charming hat is of white felt, the brim rippled, the crown draped and trimmed with a jet buckle.

NO MATTER what the blouse fad may be for the moment the hand-woked fine white blouse is a perennial favorite. White crepe makes a blouse with finely stitched bosom front and appliques of hand-made white satin daisies.

WEDDINGS

DOWN—COMBES

St. George's Anglican Church, Trenton, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday, October 28, when Mamie Coral, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Combes, become the bride of George Arthur Down, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Down, all of Trenton. Rev. K. Blachford officiated, and the wedding music was played by David Smith.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was becoming attired in a gown of white chiffon with shirred sweetheart neckline and full skirt. Her finger-tip veil was arranged from a halo headdress and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and baby's breath.

Miss Norma Combes, sister of the bride, attended her as bridesmaid, choosing a gown of pink net, with jacket of pink and silver threads, and matching headdress. Her corsage was of pink and white 'mums, and she also wore pearls. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold chain with cross.

Elwood Down, brother of the groom, acted as best man and the ushers were Wesley Webber and Howard Johnson.

A reception was held at the bride's home, her mother receiving in a street-length dress of deep purple wool with matching accessories and corsage of mauve and white 'mums.

For travelling the bride chose a black tailored suit with green accessories and corsage of mauve and white 'mums.

LELAND—FRUSCIO

Hilda Alexandria Fruscio, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Fruscio, Trenton, was united in marriage with Clarence Leland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leland, also of Trenton, in a pretty ceremony at St. George's Anglican Church, Trenton, on Saturday afternoon, October 28, Rev. K. Blachford officiating. David Smith, organist, supplied the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charmingly garbed in floor-length white sheer with long sleeves, finger-tip veil and headdress of white gardenias. She carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Miss Jane Ferguson, Trenton, as bridesmaid, was dressed in floor-length pale blue net over silk, with white shoulder veil. She carried white roses and 'mums. Raymond Fruscio, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a buffet supper was served at the home of the bride's parents, 116 1-2 Byron Street, tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers, carnations and 'mums. The bride's mother chose a navy blue one-piece frock with matching accessories and feather trimmed hat. She wore a corsage of lily-of-the-valley.

For travelling to Belleville, the bride donned a sand ensemble with white flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Leland will for the present make their home at 116 1-2 Byron Street, Trenton.

HAROLD—SMALE

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Friday evening, November 3rd, in Christ Church, when Helen Smale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smale, became the bride of LAC. George Harold, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Harold, Sr., Essex, Ontario.

The church altar was decorated with white 'mums, and bittersweet in large baskets was placed at the chancel steps.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Miss Ruth Simmons, of Toronto, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, and LAC. Robert Arbuckle, Ottawa, supported the groom.

Mrs. John Deacon played the wedding music and accompanied Mr. Willis Jackson, who sang.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. P. Heaven.

The new rector of Christ Church, Wing Cmdr the Rev. J. G. Sparling, was a guest at the reception held at the bride's home after the ceremony. Mrs. Smale and Mrs. Harold received.

The young couple left to spend a brief honeymoon in Toronto.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Smale, Windsor, Mr. William Edgington and Mr. Bruce Harold, Essex, Mrs. E. M. Simmons, Toronto.

CANNIFTON W.M.S.

The November meeting of the W.M.S. of Cannifton United Church was held Thursday afternoon in the S.S. rooms. Mrs. Gerald Brenton was at the piano. The Community Friendship Secretary and Committee reported several calls made. Plans were made to have lantern slides on the Study Book "West of the Date Line" some night the last week in November.

Mrs. Trumpour read a letter received from Mrs. Dunning, a Life Member, who is ill at Oshawa, and a letter from Mrs. Scott. Both thanked the Society for letters of sympathy they had received.

The Thank-offering was received amounting to $19.75. Worship Service was in charge of Mrs. Mills, theme consecration to the kingdom "For Their Sakes". November brings Armistic Day when we pause to remember those who gave their lives in the First World War. Today is added the fresh grief for those who have died in this conflict. We honor them in our hearts and, "for their sakes" would reconsecrate our lives to the building of God's Kingdom in our land. There was prayer by Mrs. Putman for all whose loved ones have been taken from them.

Mrs. G. Brenton gave a reading. Prayer was given by Mrs. Trumpour for young men and women, who have been demobilized from the Forces and factories; prayer by Mrs. Robin for all children who are scared or hungry or in any way underprivileged; and prayer by Mrs. Mills for strength and guidance as we seek to find our part in making Canada God's "Dominion".

The Study Book was in charge of Mrs. J. Williams, assisted by Mrs. Willis Brenton, Mrs. Roy Pound and Mrs. Trumpour which is a very interesting study of South Pacific Islands, a part of the world where the Allied soldiers are fighting, and where heroic missionaries have built the church of Jesus Christ in countless islands. The meeting closed by all repeating The Lord's Prayer.

GOOD MANNERS

Writing to a Soldier Friend's Mother

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Just before a very dear friend of mine left for overseas, he told me that he was going to tell his mother that if anything should happen to him, she was to notify me. I do not know his mother, since she lives in a distant city. However, I would very much like to write to her, but I do not know if it would be proper for me to do so. It would be such a happiness to me to become acquainted with her by correspondence, and to share with each other the news Bill writes in his letters. When she has a letter from Bill she can tell me about it; and if she doesn't hear from her son and I do, I can ease her mind by telling her I received a letter.

Should I tell Bill that I would like to write to his mother? And how can I tell him and not give him the impression that I may not see him again? What would you suggest as the right procedure for me?

H. C.

I do suggest that first you write to Bill and tell him that you would like so very much to write to his mother. I am sure that he would not interpret this suggestion of yours in any fearsome way. You can make your friendly suggestion in an entirely natural way, saying that he had told you so many charming things about his mother that you would like to get to know her better, and that you would like to drop her an occasion note or greeting-card, if he thought she might like to hear from "one of his friends". His reaction to this suggestion will be your cue as to his wish.

If you don't mind, I'd like to give you a friendly warning: be mighty careful about what you tell either Bill or his mother about "sharing" his letters. When Bill writes to you, he's writing to you, and he may not welcome your suggestion as to "sharing" what he writes to you. . it may "cramp his style"! Also if or when you do write to his mother, don't say anything about "easing her mind" by writing her that you You don't know her, and you certainly couldn't be sure how she would react to this suggestion. If you write her, be very, very casual about letters you have received from her son, and casual about any news he writes to you. Just take it for granted that her son's letters are frequent enough to "ease her mind". . .this concerns her and him, not you, a stranger to her. If at any time she writes to ask have received a letter from her son, you if you have received any news, then you may answer her question . . . but the request should come from her.

A Slim-Budget Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I expect to be married the next time my fiance has leave. . . so it will be a wedding on short notice and a very slim budget. A simple wedding in a small chapel in our church (Protestant), in the presence of our families and a few close friends.

1. For this kind of wedding, do I need a lot of flowers for decorations? Organ music?

2.—I also want to dispense with a reception. So will it be permissible to greet our guests in the rear of the chapel after the ceremony?

H. S.

1.—Of course it isn't necessary to have flowers (certainly not many), or music; but I suggest you have a few flowers, perhaps grouped against greenery to "fill out" the flowers. And I hope you will plan to have music if you possibly can, preferably organ music.

2.—Yes; this is proper, and a friendly plan to make.

ALL OVER the country, shops report a demand for the real evening dress, but mostly with very modest necklines in contrast to the usual deep decolletage. A small V neckline is used for a gown of black crepe, the long skirt gracefully draped to gold braid and sequin embroidery at the centre waist. Extended shoulders are entirely of gold and sequin embroidery.

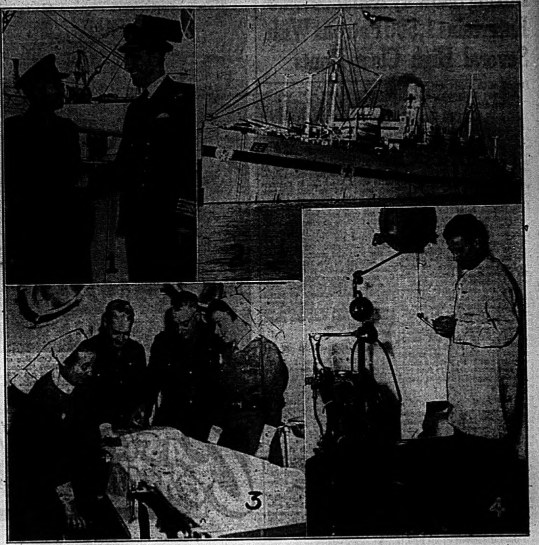
CANADA'S NEWEST HOSPITAL SHIP READY FOR MAIDEN VOYAGE



One of the largest and the most-modernly equipped hospital ship in the world, the "Letitia," sister ship of the ill-fated "Athenia," sunk by the Germans in 1939, is ready for her maiden voyage to bring home Canadian casualties. The former troopship which has carried Allied troops to the North African invasion, Iceland, Salerno, has been reconverted to join the Lady Nelson in hospital ship service. 1. Capt. J. Cook, Glasgow, Scotland, skipper of the Letitia, and formerly captain of the Athenia, welcomes aboard Lt.-Col. A. L. Cornish, of Victoria, B.C., officer commanding the Letitia. 2. Full view from the harbor of the Letitia, which is equivalent to a floating general hospital for a large Canadian city. 3. Similar to an operating room in any of Canada's larger hospitals, is inspected by Lt.-Col. S. A. Wallace, of Vancouver, B.C., chief-surgeon aboard, Major A. E. Mackenzie, Niagara Falls, Ont., anaesthetist, and Nursing Sisters A. F. Barker of Bancroft, Ont., and E. Hastings, of Toronto. The four discuss the latest in operating tables. 4. In the modern dental office, Sgt. G. Claremont, of Montreal, dental assistant, is shown preparing equipment for the first voyage.—(Canadian Army Photos.)

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Another Case of the Far Hills Looking Greener.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 years old and employed in a store at present. I probably will be discharged after the war, because I'm taking the place of a young man who is in the army. I like my work, but am anxious to get into something which will be permanent and want to go to another city. My parents will not consent saying I'm too young to be away from home. I'm very unhappy because I think I have a right to a choice, since I'm of age.

Do you think I should try to get a job out of town? I want to go 'Way out West as I'd love to travel.

D. T. Y.

May I ask, my dear girl what is your equipment for taking this job in a strange city, preferably in the West? After the war, when there will be millions of soldiers taking jobs and preference being given to them, a girl must be particularly good to hold any position which will pay her room and board comfortably.

If you've had no job but in the store of which you speak, why not take a course in salesmanship and add to this some knowledge of typing and stenography? The night high schools in the city from which you write will be able to give you these courses.

After the Armistice, it will be the height of folly for a girl to leave home unless she has some skill to command a job and enough money to meet the ups and downs likely to come before she is permanently settled.

Marine's Family Claims He Has Been Married; This is Denied By the Man.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 19 in love with a sailor who is 20 years of age. He says he's in love with me also. He is from a town near where I live, and asked me to go over and meet his family. This boy is now in the Central Pacific. When I met his family, they informed me that their son is married, but he said that is news to him.

Now I don't know who to believe—the sailor or his family. What do you think is best in my case?

M. T. K.

The sailor's family may have told you he is married because they hope to keep him from taking such a step until things are more settled than at present. On the other hand, he may actually have been married, and is just "kidding" you along.

In either case before making any decisive step, you must find out positively who is telling the truth, the sailor or his family. At 19 you've plenty of time to watch your step and not rush things.

Professional Man Demands Only Honesty on Part of Girl He's Considering Marrying.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a bachelor 38 years old, a surgeon, if you insist on knowing who and what I am. I've become interested in a nurse attached to the hospital where I operate. She's the first woman who has interested me in years. I've been too busy to think about domesticity.

This young lady has not a very good reputation. Frankly she has had at least two lovers on the staff of this hospital, but that's past history. It happened before I knew her. Do you think with your vast experience of human problems, that if I marry this girl, she would be loyal to me? Or, is it true that a woman who begins to pick and choose lovers can never settle down to quiet domesticity? That's the only type of woman I want to marry.

B. S. E.

That's a difficult question you've put up to me, my dear sir. It depends largely upon the nature of the girl in whom you're interested. Is she the maternal type? Does she want a husband, home and children? If she does, you're safe in marrying her. She's had her fling and now probably realizes that "flings" are not all honey.

But if she's the type who'll be bored to death with normal things and is interested only in every man she meets, don't think of marrying her. You're on the spot. It's up to you to discover to which class of women she belongs.

His Family Agree, But Her Mother Objects to Marriage.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 24, and I have been engaged two months. We love each other dearly and want to be married soon because he expects to be sent overseas any time. His family fully agrees we should marry, but my mother thinks we should wait, until we're sure. But we've known each other for years and we are sure. I can't convince her of this.

I will stay with my mother after my soldier has gone overseas, so she really won't be losing me, as she sometimes says. Please tell me what to do.

L. A. F.

After all, it's you who are doing the marrying and not your mother. Apart from your mother's consent, you've all the arguments on your side. You've known this boy for years. There's no question about your being in love with each other. His family sees the advantages of this marriage—some mothers never want their daughters to marry; they like to keep them for pets. In your case I think it would be well to go ahead and marry your soldier before he goes overseas.

Soldier-Husband Says He Won't Come Home, But Doesn't Want Divorce.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We have been married a year and a half, and my husband is now stationed at the coast. We have a lovely baby girl whom we both love. Everything was going along fine, until I received a letter from my husband about a month ago, telling me he didn't intend to come back to me, although he didn't want to get a divorce.

I don't understand his attitude at all because I never had an inkling of this in previous letters. He always wrote he couldn't wait to get home to the baby and me.

I've written him several times since I received that letter, saying we both want him back, but have never had any more letters. Shall I continue writing?

Sailor's Wife

Unless your husband has been seriously injured, or has contracted some disease, or become involved with another woman, to whom he has not confided he has a family, his letter doesn't seem to make sense. He doesn't want a divorce and yet he refuses to come back. Why not write to his commanding officer or his Chaplain, and try to get some real light on the situation?

Boxing Show by Reliance Club Entertains 1,500 Patrons With Several High Class Bouts

Hub Smith Fails to Appear Against Ellis but Substitution Good

Amateur boxing again attracted a gallery of some 1,500 fight patrons at the Hume Arena Friday night when, despite a substitution in the main bout, fans certainly saw a lively evening of the manly art of self-defence.

To steal the show it was somewhat of a toss-up between the two semi-final fistic encounters, that were won by local leather-pushers, when George Palmanter of Belleville, came back strongly to slug out a decision over Al Smith of Oshawa, while the other show-stealing affair gave Rance Bush, Belleville, a split decision over "Crabby" Crandell of Oshawa. Bush getting the nod as the result of an effective left hand that he kept well in Crandell's face in the longest bout of the night.

As for the main affair between Bobby Bogard, of the Mountain View R.C.A.F. and Roy Yearwood of the Kingston Army post, the go misfired as Bogard hung one on Yearwood for the count of seven before the first round bell and when knocked down Yearwood apparently sprained his ankle and was unable to continue with the result Referee Freddy Parry declared the bout off and raised Bogard's hand in token of victory.

Gave Away Weight

In the four-round semi-final affair, between Bush and Crandell, the local scrapper not only gave away some ten pounds in weight, but opened ring hostilities by carrying the fight to Crandell's corner. The ring-wise Crandell used a two-fisted attack to force the fighting that saw the initial round end in something that resembled a wrestling bout. In the second session Bush led out with a rapier-like left that rocked Crandell's noggin, but the Oshawa scrapper moved inside to pound Bush with punishing body blows as the fans roared with glee and stamped approval on the fight. The following two rounds were pretty much of a repetition with Bush using an effective left hand into Crandell's face and occasionally exchanging body blows when the Motor City lad tried to move inside Bush's defence for a possible kill. It was Bush's strong left that won for him.

Kept Inside Defence

Another outstanding two-fisted fight saw George Palmanter, Belleville, pound out a decision over Al Smith of Oshawa. Here Smith elected to use a short left to Palmanter's head, but the local lad took Smith's Sunday punch and stepped inside to slug it out with the Motor City lad with hard lefts and rights to both the body and head. Palmanter's strong overhand right to the head took the attention of the judges. Incidentally the first round of this bout was productive of the best fighting of the night as was demonstrated in the reception from the patrons in their verbal approval of a willing pair of boxers. Palmanter opened strongly to punch Smith into his own corner where strong two-fisted fighting gave the local lad a head start that Smith couldn't haul down.

Split Decision

The only split decision of the night went to "Jumping Jerry" Downs, Belleville, over Joey McPhee of Oshawa. These two shifty boxers were meeting in a third and deciding bout, after each had won a previous decision. They opened cautiously and sparred for position with not a single effective blow being tagged in the first round. As the lads again elected to "let George do it", the fans gave them the Bronx cheer in the middle session with the result McPhee tried to box Downs in the last round with the local lad moving inside to win a split decision with some strong and effective two-fisted body punching.

"Jiber" Ellis, of the Canadian Army, who was billed to meet Hub Smith in the main bout, was used against Bob Allin of Belleville, with the result Allin proved a willing opponent, but lacked ring experience against such a veteran as Ellis. Despite the fact Ellis hit Allin pretty much at will, the local lad battled back and even when bleeding badly from the mouth as the result of Ellis' two-fisted attacks, Allin swung from the heels to clip the Army champ to the mat in the last round. However, the decision easily went to the more experienced Ellis, who added to the show with a little clowning.

When Gene Cole of Picton, cut Glen Robertson's lip badly in the early stages, Referee Parry stopped this bout and declared Cole the winner, as the fans gave both boys a big hand for their willingness to fight. In the wildest sort of swinging exhibition Lorne Forgie of Belleville, won a decision over Jim Rapino also of this city. What the boys lacked in ring science, they made up for this in their willingness to slug it out.

Solved Crouching Style

Another such bout saw Bruce Lidster of Oshawa, finally solve the crouching style of Belleville' Cliff Doyle with Lidster getting in the more effective punching in the last round to get the pleasure of the judges. To open the show Jack Raycroft and Roy Palmanter, both of Belleville, tried to please the fans in efforts to provide a knockout. The "haymakers" just weren't around last night so Raycroft walked out on the long end of a decision to start the show off in a manner that pleased the patrons.

The officials of the night were—Freddy Parry, referee, Joe Samain, Geo. Wallbridge and Harry Robinson, judges, Maurice Callaghan, announcer and Harold Kurtz, timekeeper. Promoters Bill Crawford and Freddie Fisher, of the Reliance Boxing Club, were introduced to the patrons and thanked for their efforts in reviving boxing in Belleville.

Casual Comment

by K.J.C.

(Elimination)

Just before a recent North battle was begun the Commanding Officer shouted:

Commanding Officer — The Germans are coming, men, but we're out-numbered four to one, so do your stuff.

Old Joe, a Kentucky mountaineer, began to blaze away, but in about five minutes he stopped and leaned the rifle up against a rock:

Officer—What's the matter?

Old Joe—Well, I got my four.

This and That.

In 20 years as an American League umpire, Bill McGowan is rightly proud of the fact he has only missed two days work in all that time . . . It may be late for baseball tales but we got a chuckle out of this one ! ! ! One day last summer at Wrigley Field in Chicago, Charley Grimm, manager of the Cubs, trotted out on the field to differ with Umpire Lee Ballanfant on a strike called on Roy Hughes . . . Ballanfant warned Grimm that if he made one squawk he would shoo him to the showers . . . The Cub pilot promptly turned his back on the arbiter and in a loud voice to Hughes: "What's the matter with you, Roy? That was a good ball; why it bounced on the corner of the plate. If you had been alert you could have bounced it as far as second base . . . Grimm then went to the third base coaching box and proceeded to go through the motions of a dub golfer playing a ball out of a sand-trap . . . He didn't get kicked out of the game . . . Scout Wish Egan still has hopes of some day signing Elroy Hirsch, the former Wisconsin-Michigan football flash to a Detroit Tiger football flash to a Detroit Tiger contract . . . Hirsch is one of the greatest all around athletes ever to attend Michigan and Egan is sure he has the makings of a big league ball player.

Fans Liked It.

Again the popularity of amateur boxing was proven at the Hume Arena last night when some good bouts were enjoyed by an equally as good patronage. It was unfortunate that the advertised main bout between Smith and Ellis did not materialise, but that is something that seems to go with the amateur mitt-slingers. However the fans saw good healthy scraps and another show wouldn't at all be out of place, providing a strong main bout can be procured.

District fight fans, after seeing "Jiber" Ellis win over Bob Allin last night, naturally would like to see the former Trenton two-fisted fighter in against a more experienced boxer. Allin was willing, but lacked the years of ring experience. Maybe Ellis could be induced to meet Bobby Bogard, the Air Force lad, who won the main bout. Otherwise the fans saw a fine show and verbally stamped their approval on such bouts as the Bush-Crandell affair, the fine exhibition between Geo. Palmanteer and Al Smith and such-like. Maybe another meeting of Jerry Downs and Joey McPhee would be productive of a better bout, as these boys were much too cautious last night. It was their third meeting and each had previously won a decision so they couldn't be chastised too severely for being cautious.

Remember When.

Only the old-timers will remember when Bob Fitzsimmons won a 20-round decision over George Gardner for the light heavyweight boxing championship of the world, 41 years ago tonight at San Francisco. It was billed as the first battle for the title in that division, but actually Gardner won the crown with a 12-round knockout over Jack Root at Fort Erie, Ont., four months later.

Title Bout.

Promoter Frank Tunney is apparently shooting the works on Wednesday night's Watson-Katan title bout for the Empire grappling crown. This honor has been booted around like an old boot, but still a Katan meeting should top the season's attendance regardless as to whether they are hawling for the Empire crown or the championship of Zwick's Island. The Palermo Panther has but one ambition—that is to beat Watson once and for all, however, the agile Pride of East York has evaded that punishment long enough, but some day there'll be a rude awakening.

DETROIT WINGS HAVE CHANCE TO LEAD LEAGUE

Play Canadiens Twice While Leafs Meet Boston at Home

By The Canadian Press

Only one thing is certain in the National Hockey League today — that New York Rangers will occupy the cellar position, a spot they dwelt in throughout the 1943-44 season, at the close of play this week.

On the other hand, Jack Adams' speedy Detroit Red Wings have a mathematical chance of taking over first place from Toronto Maple Leafs.

To grab the leadership, however, Wings have plenty of work ahead of them as they play Canadiens, last year's Stanley Cup champions, at Montreal tonight and meet the flying Frenchmen again on home ice Sunday night. To take the lead they must win both and Leafs would have to lose to Boston Bruins at Toronto in their only weekend game tonight. Boston also plays Sunday night whn the clash with Chicago Black Hawks in the Windy City. Rangers are idle.

At present Toronto leads the pack with an unbeaten record of three wins for six points. Wings are second with four points —acquired by trouncing Chicago 7-1 and Rangers 10-3—and Hawks and Canadiens are tied for third place with two points each. Boston have lost their only two games and Rangers have dropped three without a win.

ROSS HAS NO TIME—

Toronto, Nov. 4 —(CP)— Art Ross, Vice-President and General Manager of Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, yesterday refused to express his opinion on major professional hockey in general and the 1944-45 champaign for the Stanley Cup.

"After ivsiting Maj. Conn Smythe (former manager of Toronto Maple Leafs who was woundd in France and now is recuperating at his hom hre) and seeing what the terrors of war can inflict in the way of wounds. . . I haven't any heart for an interview on hockey conditions," Ross told a newspaper reporter.

"Why don't you go out and ask some of our young men why they won't fight for our country. Why not go out and ask some of them why they won't buy war bonds?"

"I'm sure," he said, "the boys overseas will be much more interested in the answers to these questions than any observance I can make at this time on hockey."

One of Ross' two sons is missing in action overseas.

No Time Limit For Main Bout At Hume Arena

It will be champion and ex-champion battling it out over the no time limit route when "Whipper Billie" Watson meets John Katan in a British Empire championship bout at the Hume Arena next Wednesday night.

"I have procured the sanction of the Athletic Commission to stage this important Empire championship bout with no time limit. It will be the best-in-three falls with the understanding there must be a winner. Katan moved forward as a contender, when he beat Frank Sexton in Belleville several weeks ago. As a matter of fact up until the time of Katan's victory, Sexton hadn't lost a wrestling decision in over two years. We could not ignore Katan's immediate challenge for a title bout with Watson, as the former champ. from Palermo has been secretly planning for the night he can regain his Empire title, which he lost to McCready," remarked Promoter Frank Tunney as he seemed quite gleeful in the fact he had procured an Empire title match for Belleville.

In order that the fans may get into the swing of things, Tunney signed Big Babe Zaharias to meet Al Dunlop in the night's semi-final and here you have two of the game's roughest exponents of modern muscle-bending to start matters off. This will follow a curtain-raiser.

Clark Griffith Knew of Bribe Offered Leonard

Washington, Nov. 4 (AP)—Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators, said today he knew about a bribe offer to pitcher "Dutch" Leonard before the final game of the season, "but it did not mean a thing."

Leonard, who pitched the Senators to victory and knocked Detroit out of the pennant race in the last game of the American League season, disclosed in New York yesterday he had turned down an offer of "several thousand dollars" to throw the game.

Griffith attributed the bribe phone call which Leonard received at his Detroit hotel room early in the morning of Oct. 1 to "some nut."

Real gamblers "don't fool with ball players," Griffith asserted, and added that "it would be silly of a player getting $10,000 or more a year to take a chance on ruining his life and the game for a few paltry dollars."

Baseball was never more honest "from the core out" than it is today, the 73-year-old owner declared.

London, Nov. 4 (CP)—There might be a hot tip here for owners whose horses won't run fast enough but, a colt fed on chocolate biscuits and weaned on a baby's bottle developed into a better-than average racer.

This youngster lived in the playing fields of Forest School at Snaresbrook and the biscuits came from future turf followers in the form of schoolboys who purchased them at the school tuck shop. The bottle was introduced when the colt's mother died a couple of days after he was born.

Then the colt, Como, became too big for the fields and was sold to Capt. James Fieden by his owner, Garage Proprietor Len Hirst.

Now, as a two-year-old Como has been among the first three in many Northern England races. His latest victory was at Pontefract where he also placed third at 10-1 on another day.

A 15-year-old apprentice jockey who never had ridden a winner, Denis Dillon created a record by finishing second in both the Cambridgeshire and the Cesarewitch—which were run an hour apart at Ascot.

He rode Giraud and Misty Morning, two outsiders owned by Dick Dawson, 80-year-old trainer who watched the performance. Giraud, a 50-1 shot, lost to Fun Fair only by a head in the Cambridgeshire.

Giraud, incidentally, came straight to the race from a pig-sty where he had been forced to spend the night because of shortage of stable accommodation.

There was a little trouble before Giraud got into the sty. The pigs resented the intrusion but finally gave way gruntingly to superior force and were lodged elsewhere.

Warnings that Newmarket might lose its position as a racing centre unless the present shortage of stable accommodation and labor in the district was remedied were sounded by both civic and turf authorities at recent meetings.

The Newmarket Trainers Federation decided to approach the government in an attempt to obtain alleviation of the difficulties and it was suggested there should be a derequisition of some premises. The federation also will request the priority release from the service of some older men formerly employed in the stables.

It was pointed out that many trainers have had to refuse yearlings at a time when they should be broken and put into training, not only because of shortage of accommodation but because hands are being taken from the stables for work in sugar beet factories.

Oliver Spooner, chairman of the urban council, said that if the town lost out as a racing centre it would become an agricultural village.

Toronto, Nov. 4 — (CP) — Rumor has it that officials of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association are putting out the storm signals and preparing to take to the tornado shelters, in view of the fire-laden situation in the Quebec hockey world.

Another of those interesting situations that have occurred off and on the past few years is keeping everyone much agog as they breathlessly await word on the outcome of the battle between the Quebec Senior Hockey League and the Ottawa A.H.A. The Q.S.H.L. officials even have threatened to don the masks, in fact become outlaws, if those Ottawa fellers won't let their teams play in the Quebec bailiwick. There even has been talk of forming a professional loop, but chances are that will blow over. For one thing, it would cost a trifle too much.

George Slater, head of the Quebec League, makes no bones of the fact he is more than a little perturbed about the whole thing. Said he impatiently: "We are so tired — we are simply fet up with the entire quibbling and nonsense hurled at our league by the C.A.H.A. and all its affiliated branches . . . we are prepared to travel alone."

Save Face, Please

Andy Lytle of the Toronto Star tackled Boston's Art Ross on the whys and wherefors of that much-argued "military deferment" rule the league directors wrote into the regulations. Many unkind citizens said it was done to cripple Montreal Canadiens, but Ross, chairman of the rules committee, says not. Its purpose was to permit the league members to face the citizens of Canada and the United States with a smaller sense of shame than was customary hitherto but he declined to say whether that had been accomplished or not. Sometimes we wonder.

Incidentally:

Montreal's Junior Canadiens are planning a barnstorming trip in the Maritimes around Christmas, if it can be arranged. They have made plans to meet a team in Saint John, N.B., and are angling for a game in Moncton, N.B. . . . The war picture is looking brighter to the Western Ontario Secondary Schools Association. The group plans a complete return to athletic activities, suspended for the duration in 1941 because of travelling restrictions, etc. By spring, the executives think, things will be nearer normal . . . . Sculler Bob Pearce suggests holding the Canadian Henley alternate years in Canadian cities which have a suitable course handy, instead of running them off every year on the Port Dalhousie, Ont., course.

New York, Nov. 4. (AP)— After Oklahoma A. and M. licked Tulsa, 46-40, in a wild and wooly game last week, Art Griffith, one of the Aggies' assistant coaches, swore: "They ruined the game of football, I'm never going to another game". . . . Any bets on where he'll be this afternoon when the Aggies face the Norman Navy Zoomers? . . . When the Yankees drafted Herb Crompton from Toronto the other day, it was the first time they had taken a player in the draft since 1931. Then they crabbed Bots Nekola from their own farm system to keep some other club from taking him. . . .

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 323

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Three jeers and a tiger for an opening four-bid in a major suit. It is a pre-emptive bid. It is a shut-out bid. It is a sacrifice bid. And for good measure, it is an uncontrollable-urge bid.

Such a four bid takes the bid in its teeth. Before others have stepped forward, that bid has taken possession of the situation. It certainly does pre-empt that deal, at least temporarily.

Such a bid starts off with a high bang. It usually makes others crawl into their hole and pull the hole in after them. At least, it takes a mighty wallop at shutting out the others.

Such a bid is never tried with a hand that expects to make such a contract. The idea of that bid is to invite defeat. It hopes to lose so that opponents will not make more. It sacrifices.

Such a bid is also resorted to by special type players. I refer to those who hate to see a long suit go to waste. Even if it kills them, they are unable to control the urge to bid it.

By an uncontrollable-urge bidder, ignored is the fact that a bridge pack contains 12 aces, kings, queens. Even with only two of them, he sneers at the ten big cards in other hands.

He is a neck-sticker-outer. If the unseen big cards are with opponents, he and his partner will have their throats cut from ear to ear. It is homicide and suicide.

If partner has a few of the unseen high cards, opponents are unable to get far. If partner has high cards, he will start a bid. The long suit will then be a help instead of a gamble.

Suppose you get your neck bowed with a hand like this:

♠ 5 4 2
♥ K J 9 8 6 4 3
♦ J 6

You have no one or two bid or three bid. It may seem a shame to throw away that lovely suit. But don't open with four hearts.

Tell Satan to get behind you. Or to go jump in the lake.

LLOYD MCGOWAN RESIGNS POST

Montreal, Nov. 4. (CP)—Lloyd McGowan resigned last night as president of the Junior Amateur Hockey Association at a meeting held here and Alphonse Therrien of Montreal was elected to succeed him. Mr. Thierrien has been secretary-treasurer and registrar of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association for the last 15 years.

G. N. Crutchfield of Shawinigan Falls, Que., told the meeting that his district might enter a team in the league. Five Montreal clubs have already signed up with the loop.

BUFFALO BISONS SCORE SHUTOUT

By The Canadian Press

Buffalo Bisons' 2-0 shutout over St. Louis Flyers at St. Louis last night carried them to a first-place tie in the Eastern Division of the American Hockey League with Hershey Bears. It was the first defeat of the season for the Flyers.

George Boothman and Len Halderson scored the goals for Buffalo, Boothman coming in early in the second period and after taking a pass from Kenny Kilrea, feinted Goalie Franks from the net and beat him with a close-in shot.

In the last minute of play, St. Louis removed the goaler and sent on six forwards and Henderson scored on the empty net after taking a pass from Gordon Davidson.

Playoff dates for both the Ontario Services Football League and the Ontario Rugby Football Union were decided at a joint executive meeting last night in Toronto. The Services League title will be decided in a sudden-death game at Varsity Stadium Nov. 11 between Hagersville R. C. A. F. and Toronto Navy. Playoffs in the O. R. F. U. will be a home-and-home total-point series between Toronto Balmy Beach and Hamilton Wildcats. The first tilt will be in Hamilton Nov. 11 with the second in Toronto Nov. 18.

Conn McCreary, the jockey who rode Pensive to victory in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness last Spring, is being treated at a Miami Hospital for a skull fracture resulting from a fall in the starting gate of the Aqueduct track. Mrs. McCreary is in the hospital, too, the mother of a seven-pound 11-ounce girl, the couple's second child.

Coming to Miami for a rest after the fall, McCreary was bothered by headaches. An X-ray examination revealed the fracture.

President Will Harridge of the American League yesterday announced that through joint agreement of National and American League officers, the annual meeting of the two circuits will be held here Dec. 11 and 12. The Inter-League meeting, called by Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, will be held the following day. Schedule approval and regular business will be disposed of at the meetings, Harridge said.

Jockey Ted Atkinson of Toronto took the limelight at New York's Jamaica racetrack yesterday by riding his third triple in four days. Atkinson, the leading jockey of the meet, won the second race with Scotch Irish, $4.50, the third with Madlyn, K., $13.00 and the fourth with Sicily, $3.90.

Sgt. Joe Louis, World's Heavyweight champion just returned from a tour of exhibitions for service men in England, North Africa and Italy, knocked out Johnny Denson of Indianapolis in 1:30 of the second round of a scheduled three-round exhibition at Detroit last night. Weighing 212 pounds, Louis hardly got warmed up before his flurry of blows dropped the 210-pound Denson to a sitting position which he held for the count. It was Louis' first public bout with anyone but a sparring patner since he knocked out Abe Simon in New York in March, 1942.

In the main bout, a scheduled 10-rounder, Jake Lamotta, New York Middleweight, scored a technical knockout over George Kochan of Akron, Ohio, in the ninth round.

Sammy Law, well known in lawn bowling in Ontario, died at his home in Galt yesterday after a seven-month illness. In addition to lawn bowling, he was prominent in soccer as a player and official in the now-defunct Western Football Association.

The War Today—

Coming Allied Offensive Expected To Be Quick Powerful Blow

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The momentum of the preliminaries to the Allied offensive against the German Rhenish defences is increasing suggestively — a reassurance that, winter or no winter, we still may expect an early development of this trial of strength which will go far towards determining how quickly the Allies can achieve final victory over Germany.

Is there yet time to knock out Hitler this year? Well, the chill November winds and rain and mud along the fighting front warn against hasty conclusions.

There's no sign that the Allied high command has abandoned hope of early victory. However, he would be a rash optimist who didn't recognize that Allied armies might be stalled for a considerable time at the wide and swift Rhine, which will be heavily defended on its east bank and presents a formidable barrier.

It strikes me that we may expect the coming offensive to be a quick, powerful blow. As a guess I should say that some entirely new Allied forces would be brought into play, and that airborne armies would figure in a big way.

Once Allies Are Over Rhine

Once the Allies are over the Rhine in force, they will have broken the back of their task. Thus the length of the war depends greatly on how long it takes to negotiate this strongest of Hitler's remaining western defences.

One of the signs of the impending storm is the intensification of Allied bombing over Germany. Highly significant was the phenomenon of the appearance of 500 Nazi aircraft Thursday to battle 2,000 American planes over the Merseburg area southwest of Berlin. The luftwaffe long has been playing 'possum.

Hour of Crisis Near

That Hitler should risk so much of the small air strength remaining to him was recognition that the hour of crisis is at hand.

The reappearance of the luftwaffe was significant for another reason. The Yankee armada heavily attacked the huge Leuna synthetic oil plant at Merseburg, and the German fleet rushed to the rescue. Why this anxiety over Merseburg when other cities frequently are left to endure bombardment with little or no protection from the air force? The answer is that the Leuna plant is one of Hitler's last sources of petroleum products.

As long ago as last July Gen. Arnold, U.S. Air Forces chief, announced Allied bombers had cut German gasoline production to not more than one-third of normal. That's one of the chief reasons the luftwaffe remains grounded so often.

Stilwell's Recall Entirely Question Of Personality

Chungking, Nov. 4 —(AP)— Foreign Minister T. V. Soong denied reports of American pressure for a solution of China's Communist problem and predicted a new deal in relations between China and the United States.

Mr. Soong opened an interview with a written statement in which he stressed the declaration that the recall of Gen. Stilwell was "entirely a question of personality."

In discussion he said Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek and the former commander-in-chief of U. S. forces in the Burma - China - India theatre did not like each other and could not work together. He said this relationship dated from the first year of Stilwell's stay in China.

He emphasized that no "difference of policy" between China and the United States was involved.

Mr. Soong said the Chinese welcomed heartily the appointment of Maj.-Gen. Wedemeyer as commander in the China theatre. He asserted that the resignation of U. S. Ambassador Clarence E. Gauss was in no way connected with the Stilwell episode.

The Foreign Minister acknowledged that the Communist question has been discussed between the Americans and Chinese but only, he said, in the most friendly manner.

Mr. Soong denied any disagreement between Chungking and Stilwell over the campaign in Burma. He said the Chinese welcomed constructive criticism but that unfortunately, a great deal of the criticism abroad was not of that type. He said events would show whether the critics of China were right or wrong.

PICTON

50th Anniversary Of Wedding Is Celebrated

Picton, Nov. 4—Capt. and Mrs. John Buchanan are today marking the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding at their home at Waupoos. Their home is near the waters of Lake Ontario at Waupoos, the sound of which is a familiar one to the captain who sailed for 45 years. Of these years, 17 were spent on salt waters, including trips by sail around the Cape of Good Hope. He can relate many thrilling stories of his experiences, and has in his possession medals for life-saving.

Mrs. Buchanan was the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Richard Foulkes of Hawarden, Chester, England, and at one time her father was keeper on the estate of the British Prime Minister William Gladstone. They were married in the parish church at Liverpool, and came to Prince Edward County in 1907. They have one son, Capt. Jack Buchanan, who is sailing on the Great Lakes. Both father and son served with the 216th Battalion in the last war and were engaged in the transport division, carrying munitions and other supplies to the front lines in France. Both Capt. and Mrs. Buchanan are enjoying good health. They are at home today to their relatives and friends.

Expect to Get Quota.

With returns of $57,200 yesterday, Prince Edward County's total in the Victory Loan reached the total of $628,200. This leaves a balance of $371,800 to be raised to reach the million dollar quota and headquarters here is confident that this will be reached next Thursday, two days before the drive closes. In addition to the civilian canvass totals given above, Mountain View R.C.A.F. has subscribed $226,650 or 142.90 per cent of their quota.

South Marysburgh township leads the civilian district with 82 per cent of quota. In second place is Bloomfield with 77 per cent, followed by Hallowell township with 68 and Picton with 67 per cent.

Prince Edward County leads the Trent-Quinte district in percentage of quota obtained, and is working hard to be the first of these districts to exceed its objective.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma said, I saw the most interesting thing downtown today, William. A man was working a rowing machine in one of Hookbinders show windows, and he really seemed to be enjoying himself immensely.

That may come under the head of news for fat men, but I dont see how it concerns me, pop said, and ma said, Now William nobody ever said you were fat, but just a same I dont see why your waistline should be such a tender subject.

It's not, there's nothing tender about it, pop said. Go ahead and puntch me in the stummick as hard as you like, he said, and ma said, Oh, puntch yourself in the stummick if that's the sort of thing that amuses you. And anyway I didn't say the man in Hookbinders window was fat, because in fact he was the sort of man with mussels here there and everywhere, and as far as the eye could see he was just working that rowing machine for his own exercize and amusement. You couldn't imagine a more self sattisfied looking man, it seemed ridiculous to think he was actually being paid such a good time, she said.

Are you trying to tell me it wasn't a reducing machine at all? pop said, and ma said, Well, of course there was a sign garanteeing to refund your money if you didn't take off a certain number of pounds in a certain number of days, but naturally if that side of it doesn't concern you, you can simply use the rowing machine to keep your idle mussels busy like the man in the window.

Well it might not be a bad way to build myself-up, at that, pop said, I may stop in and inquire the price of them, he said, and ma said, Sixty four dollars and 98 cents.

Being the end of the subject.

White's District

The sale on Wednesday afternoon last at Mr. John Fair's was well attended. Mr. and Mrs. Fair have left to make their home in Belleville.

Friends welcome Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bowers (nee Ila Fair) and family to this district.

Mrs. Brown was hostess to a number of ladies of the White's Women's Association on Wednesday afternoon of last week. The afternoon was spent in making blocks for a quilt which was ordered. Plans were made to meet the following week at the home of Mrs. W. A. Jeffery. The hostess served lunch and a social time was enjoyed.

A number of ladies of the Bay of Quinte Branch attended the Women's Institute Convention in Belleville last week.

Church service at White's Church was resumed on Sunday evening following the Anniversary services at the three Churches in the Bayside circuit.

Mrs. A. Paice spent the past week the guest of her daughter Mrs. Harold Spafford, Mr. Spafford and family of Toronto.

"NERVES" SHE CALLED IT

Losing interest—losing friends—she never went out any more—always too tired. "Nerves," she thought—but it was her kidneys, the filters of her blood, that needed attention. Delay meant danger. She took Dodd's Kidney Pills at once. The improved action of her kidneys helped to clear away blood impurities and excess acids. Fatigue, headache, backache, lack of energy, disappeared. 117

296 BABIES DIE

Glasgow, Nov. 4 (CP) — An epidemic of gastro-enteritis (inflammation of the stomach and bowels) caused the death of 296 babies in 11 weeks up to mid-October, Health Officer Sir Alex McGregor announced last night. He said 420 others are ill.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop and ma went to the movies last night, and this morning at breakfast ma said, Such a picture, really, William, I mean really.

I agree with you about the first half of the picture, pop said, and ma said, But you were asleep during the entire 2nd half.

That's why in all fairness I cant venture an opinion on that part, pop said, and ma said, I declare even Benny could compose a more original plot than that gassly thing.

O, ma, I've got one composed already, I said, It's called The Great Train Robbery. Do you want to hear it, ma, do you want to hear it, pop? I said, and ma said, I think you better finish your breakfast, and pop said, Speaking of originality, it seems to me that train robberies have been thought of before.

Not like mine, I bet, I said. Shall I tell it to you, pop? I said, and pop said, It might take too long, and life is fleeting.

I'll tell it short, I said. These 2 train robbers dont take the passengers' money and watches, they just take their ration books, and that's what makes it original in the first place. And one of the passengers happens to be the son of one of the robbers that he hasn't seen for 20 years, and another passenger happens to be the other robber's daughter that he hasn't seen for 25 years, and the robber's son never saw other robber's daughter before, but they are both so embarrassed about their fathers it makes them fall in love at first sight, and the 2 robbers feel so tender about it that they decide to reform, and the other passengers take up a collection to start them in an honest business. So how's that for a plot? I said.

Yee gods, pop said, and ma said, wel, it's certainly original if it's nothing else, Now drink yoir milk, she said.

Which I did.

"Greenwich Observatory Clocks"

By
SIR HAROLD SPENCER JONES
M.A., D.Sc., F.R.S., THE ASTRONOMER ROYAL

(BBC Press Service)

For any observatory that has to provide a time service and send out time signals, clocks of good quality are a very important part of its equipment. The Earth is really our standard clock; it makes a complete rotation on its axis in the course of a day, which we divide up into 24 hours, each hour again into 60 minutes, and each minute into 60 seconds. The astronomer makes observations of the stars in order to use the Earth as a clock; for the diurnal motions of the stars across the heavens, caused by the rotation of the Earth, serve, as it were as the hands of the Earth clock.

But we can't see the stars in the daytime and often at night they are hidden by cloud. So the astronomer has to determine the time when opportunity offers. In between his observations he has to rely upon his clocks. What he really does is to use his star observations to tell him how much fast or slow his clocks are at what rates they are gaining or losing. Then, if the clock is a perfect one, he is able to predict what its error is at some future time, and thus he knows the precise instant at which to send out a time signal. This may be, for instance, the Greenwich six-pips time signal, transmitted by the BBC., which comes direct from a clock at the Greenwich Observatory.

But of course, if the clock is not reliable and is likely to behave erratically the time signals may go out at the wrong time. So you see, the precision of the time signals depends upon the quality of the clocks at the Observatory. We take very great care of our clocks, in order to get the best possible results from them. They are mounted on massive concrete pillars sunk deep into the ground, to give stability; they are enclosed in airtight cases, so that they remain unaffected by the rise and fall of the barometer; they are placed in chambers kept at a constant temperature, so that the length of the pendulum does not change.

Since the Greenwich Observatory was built in 1675 the standard clocks have always been pendulum clocks. They have, of course, been replaced from time to time, as improvements in horology have been made. The clocks now in use were introduced about twenty years ago. They are the most accurate pendulum clocks ever made, but do not look much like a clock. They can be relied upon to a few hundredths of a second a day. You may think that this is good enough for every purpose, but it is not so. New requirements have arisen, and very largely for war purposes, that demand a precision of at least one-thousandth of a second a day. Pendulum clocks cannot meet the bill; some other sort of clock must be tried.

A pendulum clock consists merely of a mechanical device for keeping the pendulum swinging, and for counting up the swings to record the time on a dial. But any other device that does the same thing over and over again can be used as a clock, provided that it repeats with sufficient uniformity, and that we can keep a count of the repetitions. An electric clock, for instance, is merely a mechanism for counting up the alternations of the mains electric supply, which are usually 50 a second. A tuning fork, maintained in continuous vibration by electrical means, has been used as a clock and, moreover, found to be a pretty good clock. In this case, the vibrations of the prongs may be at the rate of 250 or 500 a second, and special methods must be employed to count them up.

But the most accurate type of clock ever made consists of a small quartz plate, rectangular in shape, cut from a natural crystal of quartz. The plate is maintained in rapid vibration by special electrical methods and the plate is adjusted so that it vibrates 100,000 times a second. It is mounted in a small airtight chamber, from which the air is evacuated, and kept at a very constant temperature by delicate thermostatic control. Elaborate methods; too technical to describe, are used to count up the vibrations, so that the clock looks like some complicated radio apparatus, with numerous valves inside and ammeters on its face. It's clocks of this type that are now replacing the pendulum clocks at Greenwich as the precision standards of time: Their accuracy is quite ten times that of the best pendulum clocks, for they can be relied upon to about one-thousandth of a second a day. When our installation is complete, we shall have 18 of these clocks, and we hope then to be able to provide time with a precision of one thousandth of a second a day —an accuracy of about one part of one hundred million.

The great development, particularly during the war, of all sorts, of special electronic devices, in which quartz crystals are incorporated, has made this very high precision in time-keeping a practical requirement. For these new devices must be calibrated against time signals. The Greenwich Observatory provides the standard of time for Great Britain and, in a sense, for the whole world; it must therefore meet all legitimate demands for higher precision in the accuracy of time signals. The quartz crystal clock is a clock about which, I feel sure, we shall hear much more in the next few years.

"THAT'S RIGHT - I'm Shorty Smith"

JUST ONE of thousands who joined up in '39. In a way I wish I was home. But in another way I don't want to come home until this job is finished. We've got to smash the Jerries once and for all. I'd hate to think that my boy would have to go through it all over again in another twenty years.

And that reminds me. The other day, our fellows were buying more Victory Bonds. And we sure did buy them. Every Bond we buy brings us that much nearer home. We buy them just like you, by deductions from our pay cheques.

You folks at home simply can't send us too much stuff. It's not until you've been through it and seen pals wounded and knocked out that you realise what it means to have enough stuff to smash the Jerries . . . it's either you or him every time — make no mistake about that.

When our planes and guns blast the life out of them, it makes it safer and better for us foot sloggers.

There's also another reason why I'm buying Victory Bonds. I figure on buying a house when I come home, and the wife and boy will need lots of things they've been going without since I've been away. And they're going to have them. But it all takes money. So that's why I'm soaking away every dollar I can spare in Victory Bonds.

Give my regards to pals in the firm. I guess you're doing a bang-up job in buying Bonds . . . and that's all to the good because we need everything you can send us . . . no kidding.

Yours,

Shorty

GERMAN LINE FORCED BACK TO MEUSE RIVER
'GERMANY ON VERGE OF CATASTROPHE'—STALIN

Allied Forces Get Set for Assault On Rotterdam

Advances in Holland Have Cost Foe 65,000 Casualties

By WILLIAM FRYE
(A.P. War Correspondent)

London, Nov. 6 (AP) — Assaults by Field Marshal Montgomery's 21st. Army Group flattened the German line back to the Meuse River for 25 miles to the sea and forged a firm base today from which the next offensive can be launched.

The 1st. Canadian and British 2nd Armies were declared by a British army spokesman to have reduced the strength of the German 15th. Army to less than half in the campaign which overran southwest Holland and freed the approaches to the great Belgian port of Antwerp.

As British, Canadian, Polish and United States troops drew up to the water barrier 16 miles south of Rotterdam, it was estimated that 65,000 Germans had been killed, captured and wounded while being driven northward from 15 to 25 miles.

Declaring Field Marshal Model's 15th. Army had suffered a "serious setback," British army spokesmen said British and Canadian troops had bagged 25,000 prisoners in the drive that opened north of Antwerp October 22. The campaign freed 1,300 square miles of Dutch territory and 570,000 Netherlanders.

Already Allied dredges and minesweepers were clearing the west Schelde approach to Antwerp.

Held South of Meuse

The Allies hold all the south bank of the Meuse from north of 'S Hertogenbosch to the sea except for two small pockets, each four miles long and two miles deep at the Moerdike bridge and Willemstad ferry 16 miles south of Rotterdam.

Von Model attempted to defend southwestern Holland and the sea fate to Antwerp with an army of approximately 110,000, the British said.

Of the 25,000 prisoners, 13,000 were taken in the pocket south of the Schelde, and 8,000 on the Schelde Islands.

The two pockets at Moerdijk and Willenstad were believed to hold no more than 2,000 or 3,000 troops.

"There is no doubt Von Model's army has been greatly depleted," a British army spokesman said, "or that he's been mauled into serious defeat. His divisions have been cut to almost a quarter of their strength."

Canadians Control Tholen Is.

Canadian troops were reported last night by Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, to have gained control of Tholen Island and to have held that patch of land north of South Beveland off The Netherlands west coast for four days.

Field dispatches told today of Allied—presumably Canadian—units overrunning Tholen and St. Philipsland peninsula farther north, while meeting "little more than token resistance" from the fleeing Germans.

The threat of smashing Allied offensives hung ominously over the whole western front as air assaults upon Germany reached unprecedented intensity and battered rearguards of the German 15th. Army were mopped up in culmination of the Southwest Holland drive.

To the east, the U.S. 1st. Army kept up its hard pressure from Hurtgen to Schmidt. Although gains in the past 36 hours were measured in mere yards, the potential menace tied down hastily-mustered German reserves and dipped deeply into the dwindled German supply of tanks.

Stiff German Resistance

In probing attacks, Allied infantry and tanks kept pushing the enemy all along the front, scoring gains against stiff resistance around Meijel in Eastern Holland, southwest of Aachen, north of Metz and in the Vosges Mountains.

There was no Allied confirmation of the German radio announcement, broadcast yesterday and repeated today, that the Allies have landed airborne units again in the Arnheim area. But Montgomery's men now hold the line of the Meuse in western Holland, except for two small pockets at Moerdike and Wilemstad. Both were about four miles wide and two miles deep.

Temporary Break-In Reported by D.N.B.

London, Nov. 6. (CP-Reuters)—A "temporary break-in" of the German defences at Dunkerque was reported by the German D.N.B. Agency today.

The Agency said: "In the Eastern sector of the fortress of Dunkerque the enemy attacked with tanks and infantry, supported by powerful artillery and numerous fighter bombers on a narrow front. After a temporary break-in, the enemy was repulsed".

DEFENCE MINISTER URGES VOLUNTEER SERVICE OVERSEAS

McNaughton Opposed To Conscripting Home Defence Troops Now In Canada

Arnprior, Ont., Nov. 6. (CP)—Defence Minister McNaughton revealed in an address here Sunday that he opposed conscripting home defence troops for service overseas and favors the continuance of the voluntary system of enlistment for Canada.

His address, delivered before a Victory Loan rally, is expected to be followed by an intensified army recruiting drive.

At present, the army's recruiting objective is 5,000 men a month, and partly by recruits from among and party by recruits from among men called for military service.

The Army has been left with a clear field in recruiting since the suspension of air force recruiting. The Navy takes in 300 each month but they are called from prepared lists of volunteers who have been awaiting induction.

In his address, Gen. McNaughton said he was "firmly convinced that the best hope lies in the maintenance of our long traditions of voluntary service", and added:—

Gained No Benefit.

"We have had this from the earliest days of this war. We had it in the last war until we changed and then we gained no benefit in time to be of any use".

(In the First Great War conscription was introduced in Canada in August, 1917, and the first conscripted troops began arriving in France towards the end of that conflict.)

Gen. McNaughton said figures on reinforcements now available "show that we can safely count on some short period yet before there is danger of the situation becoming acute." Then he went on:—

"I think that there is time to tell our public of the great need as I now do. I know their deep interest, and I am confident that, now the need is known, our men and women will come forward to serve, —that they will take up this honorable obligation and rally to the support of our gallant comrades overseas. I hope that the public of Canada, knowing the urgency, will give them every support and encouragement".

Italian Peasant Realizes Lifelong Ambition With Aid of Canadians

By DOUG HOW
(C. P. War Correspondent)

Cesantico, Italy, Nov. 6 (CP) — Silvio Ricci went to work at the municipal building here in Cesantico the other day. He reported in his shabby farmer's clothes, a diminutive five-foot Italian with a wife and daughter.

There is a considerable story behind Silvio Ricci and his new job. It involves 10 Canadian artillerymen, the advance of the British 8th Army, his own courage and a lot of other things. This is it:

From the time he was a boy Silvio wanted to work at the impressive municipal building. The stroke of destiny that started Silvio on his way was launched originally by a Canadian artillery brigadier. The Canadians had rolled their tanks and infantry into the Lombardy plains, had found that their flat, close lowlands made the job of forward observation artillery officers virtually impossible.

The brigadier, a Kingston, Ont., professional soldier who is No. 1 gunner in the corps, decided to send two parties behind the German lines with wireless sets to report on enemy targets.

Under Capt. Sid Turner of Toronto, and R. W. Chard of Edmonton, 10 Canadian and two Italian liaison officers were put ashore on the Adriatic coast one September night. Finding themselves in the midst of a German gun area, they hid for hours the first day near a main highway thronged with traffic. It was there that Silvio Ricci found them.

He said every Italian knew they were there and the Germans were bound to know shortly. He would take them to his own home in the village. Over the most dangerous part of their journey Ricci carried their equipment. When they reached his house he took them to the attic. For the next eight days they lived there.

They could see nothing themselves. But every day Ricci went out around the village and the countryside. He told them locations of enemy guns, traffic, billets.

Finally the Canadians decided to return. Ricci went out to recce the best route to the beach. With his information they set out and half-swam, half-stumbled through the pounding Adriatic into their own lines.

When the Germans pulled back beyond Silvio Ricci's home days later the Canadians looked him up. They asked him what they could do to reward him.

Silvio Ricci told them about the municipal building and his ambition. They looked at his home and promised it would be repaired. The two Italian liaison officers recommended him for an Italian medal.

But the moment of supreme reward befell Silvio Ricci the second he set his farmer's boots on the steps leading up to the Municipal Building of Cesenatico. Against Nine Defence Points Outside Budapest Taken by Reds in 24 Hrs.

London, Nov. 6 — (CP)—Furious fighting raged in the suburbs of shell-torn Budapest today as heavy Russian infantry forces joined armored vanguards which had penetrated the defences of the Hungarian capital from the north and South on the east side of the Danube river.

The Germans said they had recaptured the East Prussion rail town of Goldap, 19 miles inside Germany, after surrounding the place. The Russians at midnight reported violent German counter-attacks staved off there.

The enemy said also a counter-attack had started south of Budapest and that the Hungarian capital was not yet under a major Russian assault. The Red Army was declared regrouping and reinforcing for the final attempt.

Capture 1,000 Defenders Daily

The city's German and Hungarian defenders were being captured at the rate of 1,000 a day in the powerful Russian encirclement, Moscow announced. Hungarian reports quoted by Bucharest indicated the bulk of the Nazi forces already were fleeing to Buda — western part of the Danube-straddling capital.

The Danube bridgehead, presumably shaping up in the vicinity of the captured town of Taksony, seven miles south of the capital, appeared essential for decisive exploitation of the successful Red Army sweep across the marshy plains between the Tisza and the Danube during the past week.

The Moscow communique, although not confirming the thrusts to the Budapest city-limits, announced the occupation of nine suburban points by Soviet troops in the last 24 hours, including Ullo, rail town eight miles from the city on the Budapest-Cegled trunk line.

The war bulletin said enemy resistance had stiffened temporarily. It put the total of Nazi prisoners taken in the week's offensive at 10,518.

Berlin said the Russians taken in the week's offensive at 10,518.

Berlin said the Russians were using at least 600 tanks and 65,000 men in their drive for the Magyar city, capture of which would provide a springboard for a new invasion of Germany from the south over the soil of Austria.

The situation inside Budapest was reported chaotic. The Ankara radio said Hungarians were fleeing the city.

CLIMACTIC BATTLE FOR LEYTE ISLAND TAKING SHAPE

Long - Range Artillery is Turned on Reinforced Japanese

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 6 — (AP) — American long-range artillery was turned on the reinforced Japanese in a narrow valley on northwestern Leyte today as the invaders, driving on the besieged Ormoc garrison from two sides prepared for a clean-up fight.

Pinamopoan, strategic communication centre on Leyte's northwest coast, was captured yesterday by troops who then headed south toward Ormoc, west coast port town 20 miles away through which the Japanese for three days have managed to bring in reinforcements.

South of Ormoc—the enemy's last escape port — another infantry division was about 12 miles away after a 14-mile drive from captured Baybay.

Thus a climactic battle for the central Philippine island appeared taking shape.

Japanese mechanized reinforcements, brought north along the Ormoc-Pinamopoan highway despite ceaseless aerial interference, already have been in contact with American advance units, but no large-scale fighting was in progress yet.

Canadians Fight For A Week In Water Waist Deep

London, Nov 6. (CP Cable)—The Polder country of the Schelde Estuary "is the abomination of desolution", Lt.-Gen. H. G. Martin, Daily Telegraph Military Correspondent, wrote today after a visit to the battlefield of the Antwerp approaches.

"Here at home we may sometimes have thought that the clearing of it (Antwerp) has been a 'longish' business", said Gen. Martin. "Rather we should be amazed that the business has been finished at all —such are the conditions in which the 1st Canadian Army has had to fight".

Gen. Martin said the Canadian troops in the Schelde pocket had to fight for a week on end standing waist deep in water and without a stitch of dry clothing on them.

ALL-PURPOSE SOAP

London (CP)—British manufacturers have produced a general service soap which servicemen can use for washing, shaving and laundering even in sea water. All servicemen will be issued with it in time, but for the present priority is being given to the 14th Army of Burma.

SUPERFORTRESSES RAID SINGAPORE IN LARGE FORCE

India-Based Forts Also Hit Oil Refineries on Coast of Sumatra

Washington, Nov. 6 (AP) — Sledgehammer blows by giant B-29 Superfortresses have struck at another vital war spot of Japan's war-acquired territory—the great naval base of Singapore.

Giant bombers of the 20th air force which since early summer have ranged from Manchuria in the north to Sumatra in the south, and which have hit directly at the Japanese home islands, yesterday directed their might at the strategic tip of the Malay Peninsula which Japan wrested from Britain early in 1942.

It was the longest daylight operation ever flown by military planes, and a communique described results as "good to excellent".

India-based Superfortresses also struck heavily at the Pangkalan-Brandon oil refinery on the north coast of Sumatra as long-distance raids against the enemy were stepped up to what soon may grow to almost clock-like regularity.

No B29s were reported lost from either raid.

Singapore was hit by Superfortresses in "substantial force," the communique announced.

Weather was clear enough that observers witnessed direct hits on a control house in the largest drydock and other vital points; in addition, two direct hits were scored on a Japanese ship in dry dock.

At Pangkalan-Brandon, at least one bomb dropped squarely on the refinery which was described as the second most important source of high octane gasoline in the Far East. No. 1 is the Pladjoe refinery at Palembang, also on Sumatra, which was hit last month.

Yesterday's communique said nothing concerning Japanese radio reports of "enemy planes" in unspecified numbers scouting over the eastern seacoast of the Japanese home island of Honshu.

BUS HALTS 12 INCHES FROM 30-FOOT DROP

Ardmore, Okla., Nov. 6 — (AP) — Trooper Roy C. Morrison of the Oklahoma highway patrol reported that a bus in which 30 persons were riding went out of control, skidded 124 feet, climbed a 4-foot bridge railing and came to a halt — 12 inches from a 30-foot drop.

9,000 PLANES BATTER REICH DURING WEEKEND

Two Raids on Stuttgart Climax Greatest 36-Hour Bombing Siege of the War

London, Nov. 6 (AP)—Powerful fleets of Allied bombers and fighters hammered afresh at vital industrial targets in Germany today, maintaining the pace of the shattering air offensive which sent 9,000 planes over that country during the weekend.

A force of more than 750 R.A.F. Halifaxes and Lancasters with fighter cover, struck the great synthetic oil centre of Gelsenkirchen in the Ruhr late in the day.

Earlier more than 1,800 American bombers and fighters attacked industrial targets in western Germany, following up a twin night attack by the R.A.F. on Stuttgart.

The main force from an armada of more than 1,100 Eighth Air Force heavy bombers went for oil refineries in the Hamburg-Harburg region. Others attacked industrial and rail objectives in the Ruhr Valley.

The bombers were escorted by 700 fighters.

R.A.F. Mosquito bombers sailed deep into southwestern Germany to attack the rail city of Stuttgart twice last night to keep the around-the-clock offensive going.

The Reich was battered over the weekend from the west and south by approximately 9,000 Allied planes —virtually unopposed by the German Air Force — and there was every indication the all-out air offensive was continuing unchecked today.

The double-barrelled attack on Stuttgart brought to 21 the number of German cities that felt the crash of hundreds of tons of Allied bombs between noon Saturday and last midnight.

One other place, Solengen, the "Sheffield of Germany" on the southern fringes of the Ruhr, also was bombed twice by R. A. F. heavies.

Setting the pace for the two-way offensive aimed at knocking out Germany's synthetic oil plants and communications centres, were 4,000 American heavy bombers and 1,500 fighters from British and Italian bases.

13 Vital Spots.

In two co-ordinated blows on successive days the 8th and 15th air forces struck Hitler's war machine in 13 vital spots ranging from Vienna and Regensburg in the south to Hamburg and Hannover in the north.

British heavies, continuing a new series of 1,000-bomber raids, hammered the steel and coal centre of Bochum in the Ruhr with more than 3,360 tons of high explosive and fire bombs Saturday night while hundreds of Allied fighters and medium bombers roamed the western front night and day.

U. S. aircraft smashed a hydro-electric dam near Firtzlar and attacked half a dozen railway yards in Germany Sunday. R. A. F. Mosquitos shot up 15 trains in Holland last night.

Says Enemy Has Only 204 Divisions On Eastern Front

Hails Invasion of France As of Great Help to Russia

London, Nov. 6 —(CP)— Marshal Stalin said tonight that Germany was "on the verge of catastrophe" and hailed the invasion of France as the move which enabled the Red army to drive the Nazis from Soviet soil.

He declared Russia had destroyed 120 German divisions during the year and that "only 204 German and non-German divisions stand against us."

(At present German strength in the East, this indicated the destruction of 1,200,000 men leaving about 2,040,000 opposing the Red army from the Arctic to the Balkans.)

He said Russia, the United States and Great Britain have "made plans for a secure peace."

"It is not enough to win the war but we must make any future war impossible," the premier declared.

"There is no doubt that without the second front which pins down 75 German divisions, we could not drive the Germans out of the Soviet Union," the premier added.

"But without our pinning down 200 divisions our Allies would not be able to drive the enemy from Italy, France and Belgium.

Pin Enemy Between Fronts.

"The task is to continue holding Germany between two fronts. That is the key victory."

The premier received a tremendous ovation as he addressed a Moscow celebration marking the 27th anniversary of the Russian revolution. His address was carried by radio and recorded here by the Soviet radio monitor.

"Fighting now is on German territory," he declared after recounting Allied successes in driving the Nazis from Russia, France, Belgium and Southern Italy.

"After all the German super mobilizations only 204 German and non - German divisions stand against us," Stalin said.

Fighting in Concert

"The main fact of the past year is that the Red army fought not single handed as in previous years, but with Allied troops," Stalin said. "The Teheran conference was not in vain. Blows from east, west and south became a fact."

He said the way to Hungary, Germany's last ally, was opened by the Romanian declaration of war which gave the Soviet forces a route and a way in which to help Yugoslavia.

"In the fourth year in the patriotic war, decisive victories of the Soviet and Allied armies forced the Germans to fight on two fronts and threw them back to the frontiers of Germany," he said.

"The Allied invasion of France was a powerful operation, compelling the Germans to fight on two fronts," he continued. "The Allies made landing operations unprecedented in history. Germany was pressed in pincers between two fronts."

$901,895,000 TOTAL AT END OF SECOND WEEK

Two-Week Total is 42 Millions Ahead of Sixth Loan Drive

Ottawa, Nov. 6 —(CP)— Canada's Seventh Victory Loan today swung into its third and final week with canvassers striving for an all-time record. At the end of the second week the loan total was $901,895,000 with a minimum objective of $1,300,000,000 for the three-week campaign.

The two-week total, which is $42,000,000 ahead of the Sixth Loan at the same period, include subscriptions of $47,319,400 from individuals. To exceed the total of $643,000,000 subscribed by individuals in the last campaign this figure must be increased by $236,000,000 this week.

Loan officials announced today that the number of applications received now total approximately 1,560,000, somewhat ahead of the same period of the Sixth Loan, over the weekend figures on conversion of Dominion of Canada bonds, due and callable on Oct. 15, 1944, were compiled. It is estimated that $82,000,000 of these are held by individuals of which $34,000,000 have been converted in the first two weeks of the campaign. Victory Loan officials said they hoped that all holders of the bonds will convert them into bonds of the Seventh Victory Loan during the final week of the campaign. These conversions are not included in the announced total sales.

Reports Encouraging.

Reports from the provinces were all encouraging with rural areas in particular showing an increase. Payroll canvassing figures were greatly accelerated and, because of this provincial chairmen warned of a possibility of a falling off in payroll savings totals during the final week of the campaign. Average purchases under the payroll savings plan were a little higher than in the Sixth Victory Loan.

Ontario's payroll deduction success was maintained during the weekend with figures showing 813 out of 2,000 listed establishments already over the top. At the same stage of the previous loan only 350 plants had been successful.

Saturday Belleville district residents were given the opportunity to view the vehicle at close quarters and appreciate to a small measure where some of their Victory Loan dollars go.

Mission for Men At St. Michael's Is Concluded

The Mission for the men of the parish of St. Michael the Archangel, preached by the Franciscan Fathers of New York, was concluded on Sunday afternoon at three-thirty o'clock. In his final sermon, Rev. Oliver Murray, O.F.M., congratulated the men on their faithful attendance throughout the week, not only at the evening devotions but also at the early morning masses. There followed the ceremony of the renewal of the baptismal vows and Benediction of the most Blessed Sacrament. The pastor, Monsignor J. F. The twenty-year-old air gunner had just completed a tour of thirty operational flights and had started on the second when he is believed to have been shot down.

Two years ago he joined the Royal Canadian Air Force, and trained extensively in various stations in Canada. He received his "gunner's wing" and went overseas in March of this year.

Three brothers are in the armed services. Cecil and Gordon are fighting in France and Lorne is with the Royal Canadian Navy. Two younger brothers and three sisters are at home.

REV. J. G. SPARLING ASSUMES DUTIES AT CHRIST CHURCH

Preaches Sunday Evening on Readjustments When Troops Return

Preaching on the story of Christ's washing of the feet of His disciples, the Rev. J. Grant Sparling, rector of Christ Church, who was recently appointed to this charge succeeding the late Rev. G. G. Wright, said in his sermon on Sunday evening that "in life we pick up much dust and dirt". Sometime the opportunity comes easily in doing such a service to those with whom one lives. Sometimes circumstances throw the opportunity into one's lap. For man is here to serve. Sometimes the task that the slave performed meant that he had to submit to the cruelty of those whose feet he washed. There were those who came with their minds soiled and sometimes the washer received a cuff on the head. But sometimes the traveller was kind and his treatment of the slave was like a Te Deum. But whatever his task man has to perform it.

Rev. Mr. Sparling sees an approaching opportunity for the people at home to render such a service of the greatest importance for the men who will be returning from overseas at the close of the struggle.

Washing Our Feet

"Our boys overseas have been washing our feet for more than five years. They have been washing off the dust and corruption that have come into life," he said. He described the sensation of going up in a bomber at night, of the task of service in the corvette and the job of landing from a paratroop air ship in an unknown land. "War is a mean business", he said. "It is a mean business to land on a beach and machine guns playing on you. But they are doing our work."

In a short time the people are going to have the opportunity to wash the feet of the boys when they come back. They will come back, sounder, better in soul for what they have gone through. But there will also be some of the dust and dirt of war on their memory. This is natural.

The rector spoke of the excitements and glitter and glamor which "do things" to people.

Problems After Return.

Then he said: "It is going to be hard for them to settle down on the old farm, in the old home, in the old store, perhaps—but they are going to fit in."

The rector said that in the coming days when they are back home again "there will be a language they understand—love."

After the last war there was the same problem but those at home and their returned sons learned a little—there was co-operation and sharing.

Tremendous Readjustment.

"It is going to be a tremendous adjustment and I ask you in the name of Christian service to get behind these boys. How can we be prepared. What is to be done now?"

Peter made the great submission, "not my feet only but also my hands and my head". "Peter's mind became the mind of Christ, his hand and his head the hand and head of Christ. Let us make the great submission to Christ now so that at the day of the war's end we shall be under a divine compulsion to wash the feet of these boys coming home."

At the morning service, when Mr. Sparling delivered his first sermon in the parish, Mr. Sparling commented upon the untiring efforts of the late Rev. G. G. Wright in making Christ Church parish in Belleville one of the finest in the diocese. Rev. Mr. Sparling also made reference to other rectors of the parish and the manner in which they served their stewardship while at Christ Church.

The new rector was much impressed as he viewed for the first time the redecoration work in the church. Following the morning sermon Mr. Sparling, who has recently left the service of the R.C.A.F. where he served as senior chaplain for the past four years, informed the congregation he would be at their service in the church vestry every afternoon for the next few weeks.

E. Earl Bonter Dies Suddenly At Albury Home

One of this district's foremost agriculturists and a life-long resident of Prince Edward County, Ernest Earl Bonter of Albury died suddenly at his farm home early Sunday morning. He was in his 57th year.

The late Mr. Bonter had spent Saturday evening in Belleville and had returned home only a short time before he was stricken with the fatal seizure. Dr. J. J. Farley of Trenton was called but Mr. Bonter had died before assistance reached him.

He lived and died in his native Albury, Prince Edward County. A born agriculturist he loved the soil and all his life devoted his efforts to farming and all it represented. He was born on the farm on which he died, and was the son of the late George and Stella Bonter.

A farmer of vision he spent much of his time studying methods for the betterment of agriculture in general. He was a breeder of purebred Holstein cattle and for years enjoyed an enviable reputation as an owner of outstanding herds. But he did not confine his efforts to this phase of farming alone. He saw the advantages of exhibition and the value of display for the "show window" of Canadian life. He became associated with the Belleville Agricultural Society and was one of its directors for a number of years. He was also a director of the Quinte Cheese Factory.

Member of County Council

The late Mr. Bonter took time from his busy life as a farmer to interest himself in municipal government. He was a member of the Ameliasburg Township Council for a number of years and later was given the position of reeve. In this capacity he was a member of Prince Edward County Council.

A member of Albury United Church, he took more than passing interest in the religious life of his community and was appointed a member of the church board. Fraternally he was associated with Trenton Lodge A. F. and A. M. No. 38, and was an associate member of the Belleville Club.

Possessed of an engaging personality and the faculty of being a good neighbor, the late Mr. Bonter will be missed in not only his native Albury and county but in a wide district as well. He enjoyed the esteem and respect of a host of urban as well as rural friends and his passing will be felt keenly.

Surviving are his widow the former Miss Grace Evelyn Peck; three daughters, Mrs. Allan Weese, Albury, Mrs. Howard Holmes (Evelyn) of Kirkland Lake and Joyce of Belleville; one son, Harold of Albury and two brothers, Bert Bonter of Brockport, N.Y., and Ewart Bonter of Port Credit. Another brother John S. predeceased him seven years ago. Also remaining is a stepmother, Mrs. Ada Lawrence.

The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

IN MEMORIAM

TURNER — In loving memory of Mrs. Laura Turner, who passed away November 5th., 1935.

Oft and oft our thoughts do wander
To the grave not far away,
Where we laid my dear mother,
Just nine years ago today.
—Sadly missed by daughter Marguerite and sister Elsie.

MacDONALD — In loving memory of our dear mother, Margaret E. MacDonald, who passed away November 6th., 1940.

Her smiling way and pleasant face
Are a pleasure to recall;
She had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet her,
Some day, we know not when,
To clasp her hand in a better land,
Never to part again.
—Ever remembered by Norman and Nellie.

CONNORS — In loving memory of my dear husband, William Isaac Connors, who passed away November 6th., 1939.

He is gone but not forgotten,
And as dawns another year,
In my lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of him are always near.
Days of sadness will come o'er us,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within the heart concealed.
—Ever remembered by Wife and Family.

CORDES — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, James Charles Cordes, who passed away November 6th., 1943.

The rolling stream of life goes on,
But still the vacant chair,
Recalls the time, the voice, the smile
Of him who once sat there.
—Sadly missed by Wife and Daughters and grandson, Barry.

POLICE BLOTTER

City police were busy answering routine calls requiring investigations of various descriptions over the weekend.

Officials of the Weston Bread Company here complained several Christmas cakes had been stolen from their premises recently. The cakes were removed from a box used expressly for the purpose of shipment of such articles. Only three, or possibly four cakes were believed to have been taken, however.

Investigating complaints of disturbances at 211 Coleman St. revealed that two boarders in the house had become engaged in noisy altercations which tended to frighten other occupants of the house. Police cautioned the principals.

Three inebriates, one being but 16 years of age, fell into the hands of the law on Saturday night and were placed in the confines of the cell block to 'sober up.' Nominal charges of intoxication were preferred before the trio was released.

Careless Driving Charge Is Laid After Accident

Only a short period after an alleged hit-and-run motor crash occurred at the intersection of Front and Bridge Sts. Saturday evening, Belleville police had taken Edward P. Donahue, 314 Pinnacle St. to the police station for questioning. Today charges of leaving the scene of an accident and also of careless driving were preferred against Donahue.

Constable Wm. Evans was an eye witness to the accident, when he saw a motor car driven by Milton Chainard, of MacArthur's Mills, stop at the Bridge St.-Front St. intersection awaiting the change of the traffic light, while proceeding south. At the same time another automobile emerged out of Bridge St. and making a lefthand turn to proceed north on Front St., sideswiped the left side of Mr. Chainard's car resulting in considerable damage to the left side of the vehicle. The second car then speeded north on Front St. to allegedly escape detection. Later Chief Probert and P. C. Evans found Donahue in bed at 314 Pinnacle St. while fully clothed. The charges against Donahue will be heard this week.

Rocky Road Ahead For Auto Makers In United States

Reconversion and Production Problems Loom But No Big Price Increase Foreseen

By DAVID J. WILKIE
(Associated Press Writer)

Detroit (CP)—Five years of the heaviest production volume in history will lie ahead of the United States automobile industry when it swings back onto unrestricted passenger car output.

That prospect rests on two major assumptions: That high volume production cannot be attained before the end of 1945, even if the war ends this year, and that price increases, although inevitable, will not be extreme.

Car manufacturers generally are agreed that the overall production level necessary to cut into accumulated demand—probably a 6,000,000 car a year rate—cannot be reached before the end of next year. Some, notably Ford, with less complicated reconversion problems, expect to get started ahead of others, but all say many months will be required to reach top volume.

While a number of industry executives have said they cannot produce post-war automobiles at 1942 prices, all know from experience that price increases always have been met with strong buyer resistance. Certainly no producer has said anything recently about a 25 to 40 per cent increase immediately after the war. The figures were widely talked about a few months ago. This writer's own conviction is that the price increase will be 10 per cent or less.

"We have to sell the cars as well as make them," said one producer. "We are going to price them as low as we possibly can, not from any philanthropic impulse but because after the war we are going to be engaged in the stiffest competition the industry has ever known."

Builders are gloomy concerning prospects of a quick return to passenger automobile output. They cite problems of manpower, machine toll equipment, raw material and factory space.

Machine Tools Needed

They will need a tremendous amount of new machine tools before they can start making new cars, they maintain. To date the war production board has turned down suggestions that such equipment be given a priority rating second only to urgent war production.

With such a rating, say the industry executives, they could expect to turn out a few automobiles within three or four months after governmental authorization. Then, they add, another six or seven months would be required to reach a production level approximating 50 per cent of the 1941 output. From that point production would increase rapidly.

Ford's advantage in the reconversion program lies in the fact that the family-owned company is more self-contained than any other car-maker.

Shading the reconversion picture even more for other units of the industry, some of the car makers visualize the nation's machine tool manufacturers as being overwhelmed with orders if the equipment requirements of all the automobile manufacturers are released at the same time.

Before it can get very far into new car production, the industry will have to spend something like $150,000,000 on retooling and engineering. Another $8,000,000 or more has been earmarked for long range plant expansion, rehabilitation and modernization.

The heavy accumulation of new car demand grows out of the fact that no civilian passenger vehicles have been produced since early in 1942 while close to 8,000,000 vehicles have been taken off the highways during the war, new and used car stocks have been virtually exhausted.

Expects Realistic Peace Settlement

Neil MacNeil in "An American Peace" Analyzes Post-War Problems

(By The Canadian Press)

"An American Peace," by Neil MacNeil published by Chas. Scribner's Sons, is a succinct analysis of pre-war and present world conditions for post-war stabilization.

Gaining his early newspaper training on Montreal dailies, Mr. MacNeil has been a member of the staff of the New York Times for 27 years, first as cable news editor and since 1930 as an assistant managing editor in charge of news. In these capacities he has had opportunity to observe world history in the making, not alone on the copy desk but from the vantage point of European visits and study at first hand of the League of Nations and the International Labor Office in Geneva, the World Court at The Hague, and other hopefully-launched undertakings which failed to ward off the world cataclysm precipitated in 1939.

His observations have borne fruit in the clarity and scope of his resume of events leading up to the Second Great War, the impartiality with which he bestows praise and blame on the Great Powers, including his own country, and his well-reasoned conclusions.

He envisions a realistic peace settlement, giving world-wide economic factors predominance over political and nationalistic considerations, but based also upon those ideals of justice and freedom which the author (while admitting they are not always lived up to) holds to be inherent in the American spirit.

'Twas Irish Stew But Gunners Blue

Somewhere in Italy (CP) — This is the tale of a feathered mascot who after campaigning with a field-gun battery through El Alamein, Tunisia, Sicily and Italy, ended up in the cook-house boiling pot of the London Irish Regiment.

Gussie the Goose, deciding upon a visit to the London Irish lines, made a bee-line for the cook-house. Two cooks looked at Gussie and Gussie looked back with friendly interest.

"Shure, and it's a miracle," said one of the cooks. "It wid be timptin Providence to let the poor crature get mixed up in a battle now."

Sometime later a party of worried gunners came through the London Irish lines. "Anybody seen a goose?"

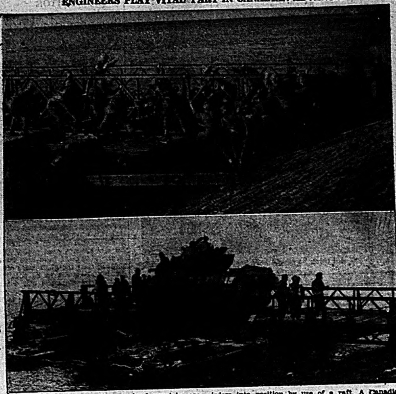
"It's our mascot," said the sergeant.

The Irish cooks looked at each other and the sad story embellished with a great deal of blarney fell on the gunners' horror-stricken ears.

"But," said the cooks, "we'll give you the creature back."

"We .. we couldn't eat Gussie," muttered the gunners as they trudged disconsolately back to their lines.

ENGINEERS PLAY VITAL PART IN CANADIAN ADVANCES



Bodies of water in the Lowland countries are ideal defence positions for the Hun but Royal Canadian Engineers have broken the back of that barrier with hastily constructed pontoon bridges. In top picture the Canucks rush construction of one of these bridges across a stream in Belgium, floating the girders into position by use of a raft. A Canadian self-propelled gun (lower) is being loaded on a raft ready to start on its way to gain a foothold on the opposite side of this stream near the Belgian frontier.—(Canadian Army Overseas Photos.)

DRINKS COME HIGH

Belfast (CP)—Bidding by agents sent the price of whisky soaring to £5 (about $22.50) a proof bottle —a record—at an auction of 2,000 gallons of whisky here. The auctioneer said it would be sold in London's West End at 10 shillings ($2.20) a glass.

BOMB MENACE FADES

London (CP) — Two of London's four deep shelters which were opened during the flying bomb attacks have been closed to release full-time staff for other work and to economize on fuel and electricity. Both will re-open immediately if necessary.

SCOTS ARE HEALTHIER

Edinburg (CP) — Food rationing is largely responsible for Edinburgh's bill of health in 1943, says Dr. W. G. Clark, medical health officer. Other factors are the comparative absence of abnormal weather and fewer epidemic diseases.

Thomasburg

Thomasburg — The Women's Association of Thomasburg United Church sponsored a concert in the Oddfellows' Hall on Monday evening, with a good attendance of both old and young, men as well as women. Rev. B. Heywood, pastor of the Church was the chairman with the program opening with community singing. Several musical numbers were given by Ileen Blakely, Barbara Morton, Jean Vance, Nellie Kellar, Gerald Mumby and Gerald Blakely. Mrs. Heywood favored with two of Christopher Wren's numbers, which she chose especially for the children. Rev. Mr. Heywood also favored with solos while he and Jean Vance were enjoyed in a duet. Mrs. Heywood presided at the piano for all accompaniments. At the conclusion of the program coffee, sandwiches and pie were served by the ladies of the association. Everyone returned to their homes feeling they had an enjoyable evening's entertainment. A nice sum was realized to add to the treasury.

The public school children, who have been busy during the past two weeks selling tickets for the Kinsmen's Shell-Out Night Milk for Britain Fund, have been very successful, and Thomasburg school has not fallen short by any means with thirty-one pupils, who attend, handing in around $48. Prizes for selling the most tickets in the junior room went to Jean Vance and Ronald Adams, while Joyce Morton and Stewart Geen were the highest sellers in the senior room. The pupils and their teachers, Miss Allan and Mrs. Montgomery, receive warm praise for the success. The school children enjoyed the concert given by the Kinsmen Club in Tweed on Tuesday night.

In the morning, the guest soloist was Mrs. Fred Haight of Thurlow, and at the evening service a solo was rendered by Mrs. Harold West of Stirling. The church was decorated with potted plants and cut flowers.

Rev. O. Wagar was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs Warren Harlow.

Third Week of Loan

The Canadian Seventh Victory Loan has entered upon the third week of the campaign and this will see the effort carried through with utmost energy. The aim has been to have the individual buy more bonds than he or she bought in any previous loan. If that is done there will be a very large subscription to the issue.

Civilians have the high example of the men in the services which have done so nobly. The fighting services have set a noble course which the home front may well try to emulate. They have been doing well in every financial campaign and this Seventh Loan is no exception. The effort of the troops has been magnificent.

They have been an inspiration to the civilian population. Their service is a double service; they are fighting or ready to fight for the freedom of the world and the crushing of the Hun and the Japanese and they are putting their money in to support the fight.

Herein civilians have their opportunity. The utmost of their ability to invest in the Victory Loan is the goal, nothing less is the best that they can do. That they will do it, Canada is assured for Canadians always respond to the call.

Investment of dollars in the war loan is the most important investment for it carries such a great opportunity of helping the national cause in the mose efficient way. This is the time to participate.

Budapest

Hungary, the Axis satellite, is far gone as a helper of Germany. Russians have carried on through the Balkans their offensive until now Hungary, the last of the Axis' friends, is soon to be out of the struggle. Reds are driving into Budapest.

The sway that Hitler built up in the Balkan part of Europe has crumbled in the dust before the striking power of the Red armies, aided by the Allied drives in the west and south.

Hitler's "fortress Europe" was a high sounding term for his conquests around the Reich but it does not mean today what he tried to make it. It is soon to be the Reich itself that will be pounded into submission.

The falling away of the overrun parts of Europe from the greedy grasp of the Hitlerites is one of the significant facts of the war. It has been almost startling in its speed, and in the collapse of German occupation which can be explained by the powerful organization of the United Nations, with their united strategy which moves relentlessly toward the destruction of Nazi power and the surrender of Germany.

Czechoslovakia will soon be freed. Yugoslavia is succeeding well in the elimination of the Germans. Greece is free.

There is a widespread belief that a powerful drive upon the inner citadel of Hitler's Germany may soon be launched. Hitler built it as strong as he could with every method the Hun could use even to the enslavement of millions of people of the overrun states but even that cannot give him success. It is everywhere the belief that Hitler now is fighting only for a way to save his own hide and his gang. But there is no hope for that. The Allied Powers are united. Hitler's lies, his effort to try and sow discord have failed and his Waterloo draws near. His rule is going the way of all tyrannies. . .

Deepest Sea

The ships that sank off Leyte and Samar had the longest possible descent to Davy Jones' Locker. They sagged slowly down into the deepest place on the ocean floor—the Philippine Trench, says a Chicago Tribune columnist. Off Mindanao, this titanic gully attains a world record in the Mindanao Deep—35,400 feet. That is deeper than Mount Everest is high.

Surigao Strait, through which the southern wing of the Japanese armada passed to threaten American transports along the beaches of Leyte, probably saw its first European sailors when Magellan discovered the Philippines on his voyage of circumnavigation. His first landfall, on March 16, 1521, was the southern point of Samar Island. He entered the archipelago and landed on Cebu. Therefore it seems likely that he passed through Surigao Strait.

First Touch of Winter

A cold wind and atmosphere and the rain that turned into a faint sign of a snow storm on Saturday and which was continued into Sunday morning with a few flurries still falling gave the people a first touch and a warning that fine weather cannot be expected to last overlong and that winter is somewhere around the corner. October has been a month of rather mild temperatures and the colder weather of Sunday was suggestive of an inevitable change that will come.

"Dry leaves upon the wall,
Which flap their rustling wings and seek escape,
A single frosted cluster on the grape
Still hangs—and that is all."

"In rattling showers dark November's rain,
From every stormy cloud, descends amain."

"The dead leaves their rich mosaics
Of olive and gold and brown
Had laid on the rain-wet pavements,
Through all the embowered town."

These are some of the poets' descriptions of early November before the month is very old.

Time for Rededication

(Daily Herald, London)

To clearcut superiority in the air we can add great weight in modern armor and artillery; we have generals who have proved their skill; we have men who have been tested in battle; who are eager to finish the job for which they have been given the tools. The task which confronts them is to break out of the present narrow front into broad tank country where "open" warfare can be undertaken. After that? It is too early to speculate, but plainly the greatest moments of the war are close to us now. At home, it is a time for rededication.

Life-Saving Records

(Sault Ste. Marie Star)

British soldiers will soon be mailing home small records of their voices. Recording machines about the size of a portable phonograph, and 300,000 five-inch records are ready to go. The records cost only one cent to produce. A film technician invented them. Each machine has a hand telephone attached to avoid "microphone fright." Overseas recreation centres will take on the job of handling the recordings. A record made the difference between life and death to a wounded soldier in a hospital in Italy, who received his mother's voice by mail.

Large numbers of books have followed in the wake of the Allied armies which have landed in Normandy, says a London Story. In one day recently, 1,000 parcels of books were dispatched by the Services Central Book Depot. On another day 40 parcels were sent by air in response to a special request. The books are collected through the Ministry of Supply's national book recovery and salvage campaign. Already 100,000,000 books have been collected, over 80,000,000 by 3,000,000 school children, who have been helping local authorities, Women's Voluntary Services and voluntary workers.

The Ulster linen industry has been facing a wartime flax shortage. It is now manufacturing new fabrics from synthetic long-staple rayon. An exhibition of the new fabrics has been opened in Belfast. The materials were all woven on existing machines in Ulster linen mills. The Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, opening the exhibition, emphasized that the new type of textile is not in competition with the linen industry but rather an adjunct to it.

The report of an Allied air attack upon Singapore recalls a name that was prominent in the early stages of the Jap war upon the British and Americans. The mention of the name with that of the Philippines is indicative or suggestive of the trend of events which with steady tread approach Nippon herself.

Nemesis or fate is crowding the Japanese close.

Receiving a new truth is adding a new sense.—Liebig.

JUST FOLKS

(Copyright, 1944, Edgar A. Guest)

By EDGAR A. GUEST

POWER

When men give up their hearts to power
All pity is forgot.
For one supreme, triumphal hour.
They turn to shell and shot.

To boast they've reigned a year or two
They crumble spire and tower,
And raze what took long years to do,
To frighten folk with power.

No mercy marks the tyrant plan;
No sign of friendship's hand;
All thought of brotherhood of man
From speech and book is banned.

But restless tyrants, night and day,
Keep ship or plane near by,
That they, from death, may slip away
When greater force draws night.

HOW GRAPEFRUIT GOT NAME

Grapefruit got its name from the fact that this fruit often grows in bunches or clusters resembling huge grapes. As many as forty or fifty large grapefruit have been known to grow on a single stem.

Grapefruit was originally, it is believed, a native of southeastern Asia or the Malay and Polynesian Islands, from where it seems to have been introduced into the West Indies and Florida by the early Spanish colonists.

It is a distinct variety of citrus fruit, akin to the orange and the lemon, and is not, as often supposed, a hybrid developed by crossing other fruits.

Grapefruit has been an important food product in the United States since about 1900. When the fruit was first introduced on a small scale about 1885 it was bitter and unpalatable and few people would eat it without the use of generous portions of sugar. Since then the grapefruit has been greatly improved by grafting and cultivation.

Tens of thousands of Americans saw grapefruit for the first time at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893.

It is said that merchant ships during the 18th century used grapefruit for ballast and for cleaning the decks.

Grapefruit was called "shaddock" in England for a time from the fact that the seeds of a pear-shaped citrus fruit, resembling grapefruit but differing from it in having coarse dry flesh, was taken from the East Indies to Barbados in 1698 by a Captain Shaddock.

In some tropical and subtropical countries various varieties of this citrus fruit are grown under such names as "pomelo," "pummelo" "pompelmous."

Eighty per cent of all the grapefruit in the world is produced in the United States. Palestine is second to the United States in grapefruit production.

A new type of citrus fruit, known as the "pearl tangelo," has been produced in California by crossing the ordinary grapefruit with the mandarin.

In Florida there is a plant that uses grapefruit seed to make a substitute for castor and olive oils as a wetting agent in textile processing. Oil from grapefruit seeds is said to be a satisfactory salad dressing.

Arizona agricultural experts report that grapefruit hulls are good feed for cattle if left to ferment several months in a pit silo.

The Rio Grande Valley in Texas is noted for its pink grapefruit.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

'RE THE GAS PLANT'

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

May I once again beg space in your valuable paper to air my views! As I stated in my previous letter regarding the need to freeze all assessments at their present levels for a period of ten years, I am actuated with the desire to provide as much work as possible for "Our Boys" when they are discharged from the various services to which they are attached and for all those who will be affected by the changeover from war to peace. May I also make it quite clear that I have no axe to grind. I believe the City Council was quite justified in doing wat they did regarding the Gas Plant, considering all the "Expert" advice they have received. I have tried to get the truth regarding the Gas Plant, I have tried to find out why gas cannot be produced and sold in Belleville when so many other cities of comparable size can produce and sell and make a good profit. After all the arguments have been boiled down to facts the main cause of all the trouble seems to be that the underground pipes are old, that they leak, that only about one-half of the gas manufactured gets to its ultimate destination, (the gas stove) also that the cost of tearing up the streets to get at the mains to repair or replace same will be too great.

I am quite prepared to acknowledge that all this is quite true — But Sir! would it not be possible to lay new and much smaller mains on each side of the street, but on the property side of the sidewalk. Considering that all digging would be done on the lawns and that the streets would not be touched except at the intersections and even at this point a hole could be bored or the pipe could be punched through to save the digging where the soil is suitable, also when the new mains are being laid all the old service pipes leading to the houses would be exposed, these could be cleaned and connected to new mains or replaced by new pipes where needed. In the downtown area the new piping could be laid at the rear of all stores and offices, so that the ordinary traffic on the streets would not be affected except when a crossing was made from one block to another. All the digging could be done by hand also all the pipe laying and refilling, all materials could be moved by local equipment and all work done by local labor. The city could be divided into zones or districts, each district could be completed and the gas turned into the new mains before the other district was touched, the work could be spread over a period of years if necessary. Again, Sir, it may be possible for the Council to purchase much of the pipe needed from the government when the various airports, barracks and war factories are dismantled.

In view of the possibilities I have outlined and the need of providing honest work for honest pay to all who need it, I am of the opinion it would pay every citizen to vote in favor of continuing our gas plant and let us try to make it a worth-while asset — something that will be of benefit both to domestic and commercial users alike.

Thanking you in advance
I am Sir
Yours Truly,
E. P. Strickland,
231 William St.,
Belleville, Ontario.

Silence of Clock Disturbs Sleep, Donations Collected

New York, Nov. 6 — (AP) — A group of Manhattan residents claim the unaccustomed silence of the 106-year-old clock in St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church has disturbed their sleep, disrupted their daily schedules and made their children late for school. They are collecting donations to pay for repairs to the clock's venerable machinery, broken for the second time since 1938.

MANAGEMENT OF ENLARGED TONSILS.

If tonsils and/or adenoids are large enough to prevent the child from breathing through the nose when asleep (and not at the moment suffering with acute cold); or to make the child choke and struggle for breath on occasions; or to make the child assume odd postures in sleep in order to get more air—then I say give the child the benefit of simple tonsillotomy (not tonsillectomy.)

Tonsillotomy means merely slicing off, clipping, removing part of the tonsil, by means of the instrument called tonsillotome—which does the trick with a quick snick and even without a whiff of ether or laughing gas hurts rather less than extracting a loose baby tooth.

Tonsillotomy is the only surgery I would advise or sanction in any case of tonsil and/or adenoid hypertrophy—except rare instances of malignancy. And I believe I've heard all the quain arguments and ingenious theories advanced by the advocate of "complete removal" of tonsils in such cases.

For children over six years of age electro-coagulation (diathermy) in the hands of a physician skilled in the technique, is the alternative of tonsillotomy. Three or four sittings at weekly intervals will bring about sufficient shrinkage of the enlarged tonsils, as a rule. Of course this is slower, more tedious and more expensive than tonsillotomy. But it is bloodless and safe.

Equally bloodless and safe is X-ray treatment. This is particularly good in cases where enlargement of tonsils or adenoids are causing ear trouble, either inflammation or infection of the middle ear or impairment of hearing. A few light X-ray treatments at proper intervals, given by a physician skilled in the technique, will bring about sufficient shrinkage of the lymphoid masses to relieve the obstruction of ventilation and drainage of ear cavity through Eustachian tube to the back of nose-throat cavity.

For the majority of cases of enlargement of tonsils and/or adenoids no treatment is required, other than good hygiene. And there's the rub. You the people and, I'm afraid, a good many if not the majority of the best doctors just cannot see eye-to-eye with me what good hygiene means. Well, let's not lose our tempers. Maybe in our next conference we can compromise—although I have never found the old timers willing to concede anything or to admit that some of our hallowed medical theories and traditions were wrong. But hang onto your hats and we'll see.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Hairy Legs

Troubled by growth of hair over my legs. Have used wax but it is too irritating. Would electric needle? (D.L.)

Answer—Moderate rubbing with piece of fine pumice stone is the most satisfactory way to keep down unwanted hair growth on the skin—girls who know all the tricks assure me. This applies to hair on the face or anywhere else.

Cramps in Legs at Night

The very first night after I had taken three doses of calcium as directed in your pamphlet, to my entire surprise I had no leg cramp at all, and now I hardly remember that I ever had that plague, I sleep so soundly. (A.G.A.)

Answer—Thank you, sir. The use of calcium for such cramps is described in pamphlet Adult Tetany and Growing Pains, mailed on signed written request if you enclose stamped self-addressed envelope.

Acid in System

Dentist tells me an erosion at the base of my gum where the teeth meet is due to too much acid in my system. How can a person reduce this acid? (K.R.J.)

Answer—That's just one of the tricks of the trade—whether dentist or doctor plays it. There is no foundation for the notion of "too much acid" in the system or in the blood.

Technicalities Beset Delegates To Air Parley

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Chicago, Nov. 4 —(CP)— A complex set of technical rules of the air for post-war flying lies before delegates to the International Conference on Civil Aviation today as they consider their bargaining positions on the larger political and economic issues involved.

As the main issue of the conference—degree of control over flying between nations to be conceded to an international authority—touches on issues in the United States presidential election, little change in the bargaining positions of the leading powers is expected before Tuesday.

Delegates from other countries speculated on the effect of the election on the conference. A Roosevelt victory might mean a more assured and confident United States delegation; a Dewey victory with a change in administration might leave the United States position on international collaboration uncertain.

The Chicago Tribune in a two-column Washington dispatch today threw the conference deliberations into the election campaign under the headline "Charge United States Air Betrayal."

After calling attention to fear that the proposals advanced for the United States by Adolf A. Berle, Jr., "would result in a complete sell-out on American overseas aviation and peril to the military security of the United States, "it alleged that Canada refused to let Americans establish air lines over its territory and then got United States planes to do its own flying.

The Tribune said Mr. Berle's proposals would make bases in Alaska available for trans-Pacific flying and permit Canada and Britain to grab off the traffic.

This political by-play came after Mr. Berle disclosed the United States position as favoring an international air authority with limited regulatory powers and a limited degree of freedom of the air.

In addition to a draft convention the United States today presented the delegates with a three-inch-deep sheaf of documents containing suggested rules and regulations for universal adoption technical phases of aviation.

'Poppy More Than Ever Symbol That Appeals To All Canadians'

Ottawa, Nov. 4 (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King said Friday in his annual Poppy Day message that "this year, with Canadian forces adding new victories in Flanders fields to their brilliant successes in France and Italy, the poppy is more than ever a symbol that appeals to all Canada."

The poppy recalled the deeds of Canada's fighting men in the First Great War and it brought "to our memories our obligation to all who have fought and suffered."

The poppy fund, made up of receipts from the sale of poppies in the weeks prior to Armistice Day, November 11, had "helped up remember that obligation," said Mr. King. "Year after year the fund continues to bring needed aid to those who have fought for us, whether in this war or in past wars, and to their dependents."

Canadian Packers Settle Dispute

Toronto, Nov. 6 —(CP) Settlement of a dispute between the United Packinghouse Workers of America (C.I.O.) and the three major packinghouse chains in Canada was announced Friday eliminating the possibility of a strike in the packinghouse industry which would have affected some 12,000 workers and halted shipments of meat overseas.

Negotiations for settlement of the dispute had been in progress here since Oct. 26. Mr. Justice S. E. Richards of Winnipeg was chairman of a commission set up by the Federal Department of Labor to investigate the matter.

The Union had demanded a master agreement covering the entire industry in Canada.

A joint statement last night said an agreement "satisfactory" to all had been reached. Details of the settlement were not announced.

The companies concerned were Swift Canadian Company, Canada Packers Limited and P. Burns & Company.

66 Left Waiting Get Venison Dinner

Salt Lake City, Nov. 4 — (AP) — Judge Joseph C. Jeppson, fulfilling terms of a colleague's sentence, invited 66 persons, who had been left waiting in the courtroom while he was hunting, to a venison pie dinner. He laughingly remarked that he also had bagged a coyote and the guests would eat at their own risk. To add a touch of realism, Jeppson ordered four coyote pies. By mistake they were placed in the box, with the venison pie—and served.

Greater love-

"Greater love hath no man than this . . ."
These words should be inscribed on every stark white cross that marks a warrior's grave.

Yes, they died for you . . .
You were their friend
even though they never knew your name.
For you were Canada to them . . .

You were the hurrying faces they saw . . .
The girl who waved from a passing car . . .
The small boy who watched their train go by.
You were their Canada.

They did not begrudge the price they paid.
They died trusting that you would carry on . . .
Knowing that you would carry on.
You, their countryman.

Can you measure their sacrifice?
Mark it down in dollars and cents?
Judge the value of a man's life blood?

You cannot measure it.
You cannot equal it.
The utmost that you can do is pitifully small . . .

For theirs was the greatest love known to man or God . . .
"That a man lay down his life for his friends."

WEDDINGS

GOYER—FULLER

St. Michael's Rectory was the scene of a quiet wedding on Friday afternoon, November 3rd, at three o'clock, when Monsignor J. F. Nicholson united in marriage Emily Ethel Fuller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fuller, to Vernon Goyer, R.C.N.V.R., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goyer.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in her wedding gown of white sheer, fashioned with fitted bodice, a smocked yoke accentuated with allover embroidery, a full skirt, bishop sleeves and high round neckline. Her fingertip veil of tulle was caught to her hair with a spray of orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses. She wore a single strand of pearls belonging to her mother and gold watch, gift of the groom.

Pte. Gwen Goyer, sister of the groom, stationed at Kingston, with the C.W.A.C., was the bride's only attendant.

Mr. Henry James Pointer was groomsman.

A reception for the immediate families was held at the home of the bride's parents, following the ceremony. The guests were received by the bride's mother attired in a black crepe two-piece ensemble, complemented with accessories in matching shade and corsage of red roses. The groom's mother chose blue crepe, black accessories and corsage of pink roses. A buffet luncheon was served, the highlight of which was the three tiered wedding cake. Serviteurs were Mrs. Fred Fisher, Mrs. Fred Clark and Mrs. Jinie Fuller.

On the wedding trip to Toronto and points west, the bride donned a navy blue suit ,accessories in similar hue and corsage of red roses.

Out-of-town guest at the wedding was Chief Petty Officer Fred Clark, of the R.C.N.V.R., brother of the bride.

Mrs. Goyer will take up residence in Belleville, while the groom will return to his ship.

LANG—SCOTT

A very quiet, but lovely late Autumn wedding was solemnized on Saturday, November 4, at five o'clock, in the Church of St. Thomas, when Georgia Milburn Scott, daughter of Mrs. Kathleen Scott and the late Mr. K. W. Scott, was united in marriage to Joshua Ernest Eugene Lang, son of Mr. Ernest Lang and the late Mrs. Lang. Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne united the young couple in the holy bonds of matrimony against an impressive floral background of Winter White 'mums and ferns. Mr. Ernest Wheatley, Mus. Bac., A.R.C.O., presided at the console of the organ.

Given in marriage by her mother, the bride was particularly striking in a gold crepe afternoon dress, complemented with a matching Juliet cap, and chocolate brown accessories. She carried a nosegay of Briarcliff roses and baby 'mums.

Mrs. Leslie Lennox, as the bride's only attendant, was attired in an ensemble of aqua crepe and black hat accentuated with an ostrich tip to match her gown. Her accessories were in black and her flowers were a nosegay of Johanna Hill roses and baby 'mums.

Mr Ron Herman was groomsman, and the ushers were Messrs. Les Lennox and A. F. Y. Leslie.

A small reception was held at the bride's home on Charles Street, following the ceremony. The mother of the bride was wearing pearl grey crepe, purple feather hat, black accessories and corsage of Better Time roses.

For travelling on the wedding trip west, the bride selected a black wool suit, grey kidskin coat, grey accessories and an orchid corsage.

On their return, they will take up residence in Belleville.

NICE WAY to dress up a simple suit or coat is by the use of coordinated fashions. One good trio consists of a high, intricately draped turban and bolster bag of pink and black striped satin, and gloves of black suede with turn-back cuffs of the satin.

ALL LIT UP for home year is a snug lounging bootee of black hand crocheted wool-and-aralac mixture, with an all-over pattern of bronze, pink and midnight blue sequins. Velvet draw strings snugs the top and ties in a bow. What about clever but budget-conscious gals making their own home sparkle?

Marriage—Before and After.

A kiss can be heard around the world—when it makes the front page in a divorce scandal, or in one of these popular law-suits against a celebrity.

One consoling thought, these days, is that there are no books by those "progressive" radical philosophers recommending trial marriage, free love or anything that will take the lock out of wedlock and the bands off husbands.

Before marriage, if a woman fails to finish a sentence, a man is curious—after marriage, he is merely relieved.

At a fashionable wedding, it is always the bridegroom, who has to be braced up. To a girl, walking up the middle-aisle is a premeditated bliss—but a man must be in a dazed and reckless mood to enjoy his own wedding.

You realize how much the world has changed when you reflect that there is a whole generation to whom a kiss without lip-rouge would be a strange, new sensation, and a girl with natural-colored finger-nails is an anomaly.

All those exciting and diverting little love-spats that add a tang to courtship- are merely the preliminary basic training for the Big Offensive when the real hostilities begin, says Cynical Sybil.

Divorce is no answer to the problem of marriage. It is merely the eraser which wipes the slate clean —and exposes it to a couple of brand new problems.

If it took as much time and money to get married as it does to get out of it, matrimony would probably be safe, lasting and fashionable as a divorce.

It is not that we women are naggers, says a young bride, but it takes so much argument for a girl to convince a man that he isn't going to have his way. Besides, if a wife answers back, she is "nagging" —and if she doesn't she is "grouching". So what's the difference?

W.M.S. Meetings

ELDORADO AND UNION

Eldorado — The Eldorado and Union W.M.S. held their November meeting at the home of Mrs. E. A. Strebe with a good attendance. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Albert Empey. FOXBORO U.C.

Foxboro — The November meeting of the W.M.S. was held in the S.S. rooms on Thursday afternoon with a good attendance. Quiet music was played by Mrs. E. M. Cook. Mrs. W. Scott and Mrs. Tummon were in charge of the worship service, the theme of which was "Consecration to the Kingdom For Their Sakes."

A beautiful poem, "Not Afraid" was read by Mrs. Tummon. Mrs. E. M. Cook sang a solo and Mrs. W. Scott led in a beautiful prayer. Mrs. S. C. Scott then took charge and reports of different secretaries were given. Treasurer reported $64 on fourth allotment and Christian Stewardship secretary gave some lovely thoughts. Stewardship means time and talents, not only money. It is said "they that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength." A thankoffering should be of our best. Mrs. Daniels reported calls made and letters and cards sent, were reported by Mrs. Harold Stewart.

Mrs. M. Reynolds gave some interesting items on temperance and asked "what are we, as missionary women doing in the cause of temperance?" Thirty-five are now subscribers to Missionary Monthly.

Mrs. E. Tummon sang a beautiful solo "Give Peace Again."

The guest speaker, Mrs. Seldon Homans of Carmel, was then introduced by Mrs. S. C. Gay, who gave a most interesting talk on "Thanksgiving." She told of some of the common things we should be thankful for, homes, free worship. She expressed the thought the boys who have gone overseas will carry with them the ideals which the ones at home have given them. She closed her remarks by asking every one to be thankful for the heritage left us by our forefathers.

Mrs. Priest and Mrs. Hodgen collected the thankoffering and the meeting closed with prayer by the president. A social half hour was then spent while a light lunch was served. The December meeting is in charge of the Mission Band.

ASSEMBLY NOVEMBER 1.

Glimpse Of An Ally.

Movies are becoming a weekly feature of our assemblies and the presentation for today was entitled "Our Northern Neighbor." This film dealt with the rise of Russia through the tempestuous years of war and revolution, and with her preparation for an attack which could not be avoided.

Ditty Bag Day.

A good assortment of Christmas cheer is by this time on the way to the "Boys in Blue" as a result of the successful efforts of the student body to fill the ditty bags which were distributed among them. The form representatives brought these parcels forward in assembly this week and deposited them in an imposing mound of happiness on either side of the stage.

Zeke Speaks!

Our mutual friend Bruce Philp was on the stage to make one of his inimitable announcements on behalf of Form XIC. Without wasting any time Bruce began to produce from his person reams of long plain paper and finally found a sheet with a series of words on it. These words informed his audience that XIC was sponsoring a Sadie Hawkins tea dance on Wednesday, November 8th. Zeke left no doubt in the minds of his listeners that a large turnout was expected.

COMING EVENTS

(Week of Monday, November 6 to Friday, November 10)

Monday, Nov. 6.

The Staff - Students volleyball game originally scheduled for Friday the third, will be played tonight with very little change in either line-up. The change was made because it was necessary for some of the Masters to preside elsewhere that night.

Tuesday, November 7.

The Junior House League Basketball winds up its regular schedule today, Bankier meeting Spafford. In addition to this there well be a replay of a Wood-Rollins game. Spafford pulled another surprise win over Bankier last Wednesday and now the teams are bunched so closely anything could happen.

Wednesday, November 8.

Look out, fellows! Sadie Hawkins' Spirit is on the loose even in Belleville. You're right; it's a Sadie Hawkins Tea Dance sponsored by 11C that famous Wildcat form. Four o'clock in the gym, and listen, it is rumored there will be a good music box present. Girls, grab your man; men, grab your hats.

By the way, boys, senior basketball practice is called for Wednesday, so steer clear of those wild women.

Thursday, November 9.

B.C.I.V.S. seniors and St. Mikes hook up in their second rugby duel of the season. The Irish are atop the pile at present, but what's that saying about pride going before a fall. We are sorry not to be able to announce any junior or 125 lb. rugby games for next week. Up to the deadline we have no information on these two classes. Till next week.

GIRLS' SPORT NEWS.

Girls' Volleyball Tournament:

The Girls' Volleyball Tournament for Middle and Upper School is ended with XIIIB, XIIC, XIB emerging as winners. The playoffs take place next week and these should prove every interesting as the three teams are very good. The captains are XIIIB Nancy Hunter, XIIC Marion Brown, XIB Barbara Theobald.

Noon Hour Tournament.

There is a noon hour volleyball tournament going on in the girls' gym, also. On Thursday there was a game between XIIB and XIID. The winning team XIID, captained by Hazel Alexander, defeated XIIB, captained by Gwen Armstrong, with a score of 22-4.

The Lower School tournament is still being played.

BOYS' SPORTS JUNIOR HOUSE LEAGUE BASKETBALL

Spafford vs. Bankier—13-11.

On Tuesday, October 31, Spafford's team met Bankier's team in a regular league fixture that saw Spafford's team win out in overtime, 13-11. Half time saw Spuafford leading 7-5, but Bankier rallied strongly to tie the score at 9-9, when the final whistle blew. The five minute overtime period proved costly to Bankier's team as Spafford's team ran in two baskets before Graham scored a basket for Bankier to end the scoring. Lockyer, Buchanan and Summers turned in a good game for Bankier's team as did Clare, Thompson, and Pappas for Spafford's team.

Lineups:

Spafford—Clare, 2, Thompson 8, McIntosh, Watson 2, Pappas, Stewart 1, Smale, Hitchon. Final score 13.

Bankier—Buchanan 6, Lockyer, Summers, Graham 3, Ethier 2, Drumm, Maxwell, Allison, Burke, Baldwin. Final Score 11.

Rollins vs. Wood—16-14.

On Thursday, November 2, Rollins' team defeated Wood in a regular league game. At half time Wood's team were in the lead, 6-2, but were not able to hold it as Bridger sank three baskets in the third quarter and Rollins went on to win by the narrow margin of 2 points. For Rollins, Bridger and Massey did most of the scoring, while Gibson and Barlow turned in a good game for the losers.

Lineups:

Rollins—Massey 4, Bongard 4, White, Barlow, Bridger 8, Best Thompson. Final score 16.

Wood—Gibson 4, Barlow 5, Ward, Cameron 2, Diamond 1, Pigden, Galbraith, 2. Final score,14.

Spafford vs Rollins—11-10.

In the last game of the House League last week, played on Friday, November 3, Spafford's team came from behind to defeat Rollins in a very exciting game. At half time Rollins was leading 6-1, and by three quarter time had made it 8-1, and looked to have the game well in hand. Then, at about the five minute mark in the last quarter, Spafford's team came to life, and in one of their typical finishes scored ten points in the last quarter to Bridger's single basket for Rollins' team, making the final score 11-10.

Lineups:

Spafford—Clare, 3, Pappas, 4, B. Thompson, 2, Watson, 2, McIntosh, Hitchon.

Rollins—Bridger, 6, Bongard, 2, Marsh, Best, Barlow, 2, White, A. Thompson.

Analysis:

The results of last week's games now place Bankier's team in first place, with three wins and two losses and one game left to play with Wood's team. Next is Spafford's team with three wins and losses. Then in third place is Wood's team, with two wins, two losses, one game to be played over with Rollins' team, and a scheduled game with Bankier's team. In last place is Rollins' team, with two wins, three losses, and a replay of the game with Wood's team.

If Bankier's team wins Tuesday night against Wood, they can't be ousted from first place, and if Wood loses to Bankier, and then drops the replay to Rollins, Wood will then be out of the playoffs. Anything can, and generally does, happen in this league, and the students are missing a great opportunity to see some real basketball.

Interform Rugby:

On Wednesday, during the noon hour, XIIG defeated XIC, 1-0, the result of a kick by Dodson to eliminate XIC from interform competition.

Then on Thursday, at noon, XIIB defeated XIG, 18-1, to put XIG out of the running. John Rollins, "Buck Lyle" and Stan Carefoot were outstanding for XIIB. XIIG will now meet XIIB for the upper school championship, if there is no challenger from Grade XIII.

Field Marshal Dill Dies of Anaemia

Washington, Nov. 6 (CP)—Field Marshal Sir John Dill, head of the British Joint Staff Mission in the United States, died Saturday night in Walter Reed Army Hospital. He had been ill for several months with anemia.

Sir John who was 63 years old, has been called by British admirers "our best general since Marlborough," and during the early days of the war a German commentator once referred to him as the only British general "worthy of our steel."

The British Information Service issued this announcement:

"The British Joint Staff Mission deeply regret to announce that Field Marshal Sir John Dill, head of the British Joint Staff Mission in Washington, and representative in the United States of the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, in his capacity as Minister of Defence, died Saturday night in Walter Reed Hospital.

"For some months the Field Marshal had been fighting a refractory type of anemia, for which no specific treatment is yet known to medical science.

Transfusions Fail

"In spite of repeated transfusions of blood, in the long run the strain of this disorder proved too great for his constitution."

He retired as Chief of the British Imperial General Staff three years ago and served as Governor of Bombay until his assignment to Washington.

He is survived by his widow, one son by a previous marriage, Major John de Guerin Dill, of the Royal Artillery, now serving in the Central Mediterranean, and by a stepdaughter, Miss Sonia Furlong, of Washington.

An Irishman from Belfast, he was educated at Cheltenham and Sandhurst. He served in the Boer War as a junior officer and in the 1st Great War as a brigade major.

Peacetime tours of duty at posts in India and Palestine were followed by his recall to England in 1937 to take charge of the Aldershot command. The same year he was promoted to full general and knighted.

At the outbreak of the second Great War he went to France as a corps commander, but before the German smash into France was recalled to England and made vice-chief of the Imperial Staff. In May, 1940, he was appointed chief of staff.

Rebuilt Army.

Sir John was one of the small group of British leaders who helped save their country after Dunkerque. He had been recalled to the chief of staff post from the command of the first corps of the B.E.F., with which he had gone to France.

The new chief of staff devoted his attention immediately to rebuilding the battered army, and succeeded so well that he was able to announce seven months later that it was again a formidable military instrument. He continued in office until Christmas, 1940, when he retired as chief of staff at the age of 60, being succeeded by Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, the present incumbent.

Regarded as an outstanding strategist, he attended all the international conferences at which war policy was formulated and was regarded as responsible for many of the decisions taken.

Before the present war he was perhaps best known for his work in breaking up the fighting in Palestine in 1936, when as commander of the British forces in the area he conducted his campaign so skilfully that Fawzi Kawakajii, the Arab rebel leader, offered a reward of $2,000 for his capture, dead or alive.

Sir John, then a general, lured the Arabs into an engagement with a seemingly "unprotected" British force. Scarcely had the fighting started when hidden British strength appeared, including tanks and airplanes. Kawakajii fled.

Tribute From Marshall.

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, United States Army, said:

"The fact that the Allied forces stand poised at the gates of Germany is due in no small measure to the breadth of vision and the selfless devotion of Field Marshal Sir John Dill to our common cause.

"I know of no man who has made a greater contribution to that most vital requirement to an Allied victory, the complete military co-operation between British and American forces. . . ."

Officials of the civil aeronautics authority, the army, and the navy, as well as the air company, were investigating.

Clearing of Schelde Estuary by Canadians A Great Achievement

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army on the Schelde, Nov. 6 —(CP Cable)— Next to the battle for Caen, clearing the Schelde estuary ranks as the 1st Canadian Army's greatest achievement in the Allied campaign in Western Europe.

The successful month-long operation has driven the Germans from the approaches to Antwerp and given the Allies a vast supply port that is the key to the final offensive into Germany.

The battle for the Schelde was unique in the actions of this war. It was fought in the worst weather of the west front campaign over some of the worst country in Europe.

For four rugged weeks Canadian army forces engaged in savage fighting along Sodden Dikes, through flooded Polder Fields—land reclaimed from the sea— and over canals. No troops in Western Europe faced such terrible battleground conditions for so long.

Canadian infantry carried the major share of the battle burden but in the later phases of the operation British troops swung into action alongside them.

The job was finished successfully by keeping by continual pressure, by leap-frogging fresh troops through tired ones and by throwing in four assaults from the sea at crucial moments.

Gallant Execution.

The order was to clear the Schelde, and the Canadian army cleared it by audacious planning and gallant execution of this plan by veteran infantrymen who followed one fundamental principle—keep hitting the enemy and keep moving for that next dike.

Every Canadian combat unit on the western front saw action in this operation. But it was principally an infantry show. The foot-sloggers had to storm dike after dike in relentless attacks which never let up. For days and even weeks battalions fought in the mud and water of the Polders.

The Polders fighting was something entirely new to this war. At times the fighting was as fierce as in the tremendous and fateful struggle around Caen. The German 64th division was destroyed by the Canadians south of the Schelde estuary and on south Beveland other Canadians ripped apart the 70th division which fell back to Walcheren island where British troops of the Canadian army now are finishing it off.

Mustered in October

Early in October the Canadian Army mustered its forces for the Schelde operation. Lt.-Gen. Crerar, the Army Commander, had been forced to go to England for his health and the responsibility for directing this ticklish job fell to Lt.-Gen. Simonds, commander of the 2nd Canadian Corps, who also planned and executed the break-through south of Caen last Aug. 8.

Gen. Simonds hustled veteran Canadian infantry from the Boulogne and Calais sectors, where they captured those two forts late in September, and he marshalled them south of the Leopold canal. They were to drive the Germans from the Schelde pocket on the south side of the estuary.

Meanwhile another Canadian infantry formation cleared the northern outskirts of Antwerp and also the harbor area of the great Belgian port. The Germans were badly trimmed in this suburban Battle of Antwerp and the Canadians drove them north towards Bergen Op Zoom.

Oct. 6, one month ago, three western battalions —, the Regina Rifles which included at the time a company of the Royal Montreal Regiment, the Canadian Scottish of Victoria and the Royal Winnipeg Rifles —stormed across the Leopold canal just before dawn behind sheets of fire hurled over the canal by flamethrowers.

The westerners intended to penetrate inland immediately but they met heavy opposition right on the northern bank of the canal. Few Canadian units had ever been in such a tight spot as were those D-Day veterans. For five days a bloody struggle raged along the narrow canal bridgehead.

Held Bridgehead.

With the heroism they showed at Bretteville and Putot en Bessin on the Caen perimeter during the first 10 days of the Normandy campaign, when they hurled back counter-attacks from massed German panzer divisions, the Western battalions held the bridgehead when the situation looked hopeless.

The 64th Division troops which they had drawn into a knock-down, drag-out fight on the Leopold Canal suffered heavy casualties. A Canadian cemetery marked with rows of white crosses south of the Leopold Canal is a solemn reminder of the sacrifice of the Westerners and of the company of the R.M.R.S.

Other Canadian infantry were ready to pass into this strip of muddy hell over the Leopold Canal but the resistance was too strong to commit more troops. The Westerners were ordered to hang on while another attack was launched.

German General Surprised.

Gen. Simonds surprised Maj.-Gen. Eberding, commander of the 64th Division, with his next move—a seaborne assault on the backdoor of the German pocket south of the Schelde. The Highland Light Infantry from Galt, Ont., the North Nova Scotia Highlanders from Amherst, N.S., and the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders from Cornwall, Ont., made an assault landing on the south shore of the Schelde west of Terneusen Oct. 9. A beachhead was won but the Germans soon counter-attacked. Every counter-attack was driven off. The struggle for the Schedle Polders began.

The seaborne attack relieved the pressure on the Leopold bridgehead as Gen. Eberding was forced to look over his shoulder to deal with the new threat. The beachhead won by the Highlanders was rapidly reinforced and Central Ontario, Martime and French-speaking Quebec battalions went in there.

Over the flattest, bleakest area in Western Europe the Canadians hit out. Slogging through knee-deep mud and wading through flooded fields, they plodded forward through this incredibly desolate country.

The Germans were dug in on practically all the dikes which formed the interminable ramparts of the Schelde defences.

The Highland battalions worked to the northwest and the Glengarrys captured Breskens October 22 after artillery and planes had beaten the town to the ground. Other battalions swept west through the pocket.

British Relieve Canadians.

British troops relieved the weary westerners in the Leopold canal bridgehead but without rest the western battalions immediately joined other Canadians in the westward drive from Breskens.

Meanwhile Gen. Simonds prepared the attack against South Vveland Island to th north of the estuary. It was hopd to have the Schelde clear by early November and speed was imperative.

A new attack was put in north of Antwerp and two columns of Canadian tanks and infantry drove clear through the German defences to capture Eschen, 18 miles north of the port, Oct. 22. This town is east of the causeway leading to South Beveland.

This move was to protect the entrance to the causeway while Canadian infantry struck west along it.

Canakians led by the Royal Regiment of Toronto, gained a foothold on the eastern end of South Beveland Oct. 24. The Royal Hamilton Light Infantry share din the causeway success, as well as a Western Ontario Infantry unit along with the 8th Reconnaissance Regiment, of Swift Current, Sask., and some tanks of a western regiment.

Criss-Crossed With Dikes.

even more intolerable. South Beve-

As progress was made in stiff fighting through the Schelde pocket, good gains were made too along South Beveland, in foggy, cold weather that made the battleground even more intolerable. South Beveland is flat as a billiard tabiel and criss-crossed with dikes through flooded Polder Fields.

But the Schelde operation was still in a delicate stage and anything might have bogged it down when Gen. Simonds threw another Sunday punch Oct. 26. British troops made the second assault landing of the operation going ashore on a coastal dike on the southeast corner of South Beveland after crossing over the Schelde in darkness. This put real pressure on the 70th division on Beveland.

A Western unit fought its way across a 300-foot-wide canal which ran north and south across South Beveland and within a few days the island was overrun with Canadians striking right across it to the causeway leading west to Walcheren Island.

The Schelde pocket south of the estuary meanwhile was being squeezed. The forts at Cadsand were captured. A link-up was made with British troops on the Leopold Canal and the Germans were pressed back into Knocke and Heyst, in Belgium 12 miles west and slightly south of the mouth of the Schelde.

While Canadian army successes mounted on this Schelde sector, its other forces attacked north towards Bergen op Zoom, Roosendaal and Breda, while the British 2nd Army struck westward from its deep salient into Holland to capture 'S Hertogenbosch and Tilburg.

The two-way drive pinched the German 15th Army forces out of southwest Holland and put Canadian army forces on the Hollandsche Diep following capture of Bergen op Zoom, Roosendaal and Breda. Canadian, British, American and Polish troops shared in this triumph, which was complementary to the Schelde operation but a vital protection for it.

The Canadian army never lost the initiative from Oct. 6 when it loosed its lightning thrusts.

As soon as the Walcheren Causeway was reached, Montreal Infantry attacked across it October 31. The next day Walcheren was attacked from two directions from the sea. British Commandos and Infantry crossed from Breskens to land practically in the streets of Vlissingen (Flushing).

Three hours later, the fourth landing of the Schelde operations took place at Westkapelle on the western end of the island where more commandos went ashore with support of Royal Navy ships, including the Battleship Warspite, and R.A.F. planes. Both landings succeeded. Vlissingen was captured. The coastal dike from Westkapelle to Vlissingen was taken. All the coastal guns which could fire on the Schelde Estuary were destroyed. Clean-up of Walcheren is all that remains to be done.

At Knocke and Heyst amid coastal defences reminiscent of the ones on the Normandy Beaches the Canadians finished off the 64th Division Commander, Gen. Eberding.

Canadian and British troops of the 1st Canadian Army had cleared the Schelde as ordered.

3 U-Boats Sunk During Attack On Large Convoy

London, Nov. 6 —(CP)— Three German U-boats which tried to break up a large convoy from England to Russia were sunk and several others damaged, the Admiralty announced, disclosing the convoy fought through with the loss of only one escort vessel.

One German aircraft, which attempted to shadow the convoy, also was shot down.

All the sea and air engagements were fought within the Arctic Circle and an Admiralty statement declared the operation "ranks among the greatest triumphs yet achieved by naval aircraft during an operation of this kind."

No Concerted Attack.

One of the three submarines was destroyed by naval aircraft alone and they played a major part in the sinking of the other two.

The aircraft operated from two escort carriers, H.M.S. Vindex and H.M.S. Striker.

"They kept the U-boats so far from convoys that the enemy was prevented from launching any concerted attack," the Admiralty statement said.

There were "determined attempts," however, by strong forces of subs to break up the convoy, the communique said.

During the round trip of shepherding the huge freighter convoy, planes hopping back and forth from the two carriers put in more than 1,000 flying hours, which the Admiralty said it believed was the largest total "ever put in by aircraft in previous similar operations."

H.M.S. Kite Lost.

During the operations the sloop H.M.S. Kite was lost.

Depth charges dropped by a Swordfish aircraft from the Vindex sank one U-boat. Hurricanes equipped with rocket-firing apparatus attacked two more surfaced submarines, one of which was hit by cannon fire before it could submerge. It was believed damaged.

A second U-boat was sunk following attacks with depth charges by the destroyer Keppel, the frigate Loch Dunvegan and the sloops Peacock and Mermaid.

The third enemy submersible claimed as a victim was sunk by joint action of naval aircraft and ships. The destroyers Keppel and Whitehall and the sloops Mermaid and Peacock dropped "tin fish" in this attack.

Roosevelt Leading In Fortune Survey 53.6 P.C. to 46.4

New York, Nov. 6 (AP)—The Fortune Survey of Public Opinion said yesterday its final poll of the United States' civilian population showed President Roosevelt leading Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential candidate, by 53.6 per cent to 46.4 per cent.

Fortune said the figures were compiled from answers to "attitude questions" as used in previous presidential campaign polls.

The survey said it also took a secret balot poll which gave the President 52.5 per cent and Gov. Dewey 47.5 per cent.

There were no further reports of changes in other national polls.

The Crossley poll had given the President 52 per cent of the major party vote on the basis of late October polling in 23 pivotal states, adjusted by estimates of the armed services vote.

CANADA'S VETERANS
Their Post-War Opportunities

Home Ownership—In Town or Suburb
HOW CANADA'S VETERANS BENEFIT

A home of their own is the dream of most Canadians—and the dream, particularly of those, far from home, fighting on the sea, on land, or in the air. To some, a home means a place, away from the city, where there is good earth for raising vegetables, where there is room for a few chickens, some flowers, perhaps some fruit trees and where the children can grow up in a country atmosphere. To others a home means, first of all, city advantages, schools nearby for the children, and a short run in the morning to office or work. No matter which is the ambition of the ex-service man or ex-service woman, Canada's rehabilitation program can assist them in it.

UNDER THE VETERANS' LAND ACT

This Act, planned to give a new meaning to land settlement, suits the veterans who want land with their home. It provides generous assistance in financing homes for city and other workers on small acreages, outside the high taxation area.

The maximum financing which can be arranged is $4,800 for land and buildings, and, at the time he makes application the veteran must be prepared to pay down ten per cent of the cost of land and buildings in cash. The property is then sold to him for this down payment, plus two-thirds of the cost of land and buildings, which can be financed over a long term, with interest at 3½ per cent. In addition there is a grant for necessary equipment to a maximum of $1,200, although it is believed that this ordinarily will not exceed $500 or $600 in the case of small holdings.

What it means is that the service man or woman is given a grant of 23⅓ per cent of the cost of their land and buildings, plus the grant for equipment, after they have fulfilled their agreement for a ten year period.

Properties valued at more than $4,800 may be financed, but the veteran must be prepared to pay any excess in cash, at the time of making application. In the case of maximum financing, the total grant will be $2,320.

THOSE WHO ARE ELIGIBLE

Any ex-service man or woman, with overseas service, or all who have served for twelve months in Canada, are eligible to make application, providing they have been honorably discharged and have a reasonable expectation of living up to their agreement. Grants and benefits received under other provisions of the program, with the exception of the re-establishment credit, explained in advertisement No. 2, do not affect assistance under the Veterans' Land Act.

THROUGH THE RE-ESTABLISHMENT CREDIT

One of the purposes for which the re-establishment credit—made up of $7.50 for each 30 days service in the Western Hemisphere and $15.00 for each 30 days overseas—may be used is for the purchase of a home in town or city. When it is used in this way, the ex-service man or woman must be prepared to put up a dollar for every two used from the re-establishment credit.

There is wide opportunity for home owning. and home building under the new National Housing Act, which provides long term loans, at low interest rates for this purpose. Complete details of this Act may be obtained by writing to the Director of Housing, care of the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

AT ANY TIME IN TEN YEARS

So that the veteran may have every opportunity to become securely established in civilian life, before making plans to build a home, provision is made that the re-establishment credit may be applied for at any time within ten years of discharge.

Veterans' Welfare Officers are stationed in key centres throughout Canada. They advise and assist Ex-Service personnel and should be consulted on all re-establishment problems. Veterans considering taking advantage of the Veterans' Land Act should see the Regional Supervisor in the district where they intend to settle before making any commitments.

Maple Leafs Win Four in Row While Montreal Canadiens Take Two From Detroit Wings

Boston Bruins Win Their First Start in Four by Beating Chicago

By ERIC ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Coach Hap Day's league-leading Toronto Maple Leafs left no doubts in the minds of hockey fans they intend to make a strong bid for the National Hockey League championship by handing Boston Bruins a 7-2 defeat Saturday night on home ice. The victory was their fourth without a loss this season.

Montreal Canadiens, Stanley Cup champions, snagged a double victory from Jack Adams' Detroit Red Wings, winning 3-2 at home on Saturday and by an identical score on Detroit ice Sunday to move ahead of Wings into second place, two points back of Toronto.

To top the weekend hostilities, the Bruins played hosts to Chicago Black Hawks Sunday and in doing so scored a 6-3 triumph, the first in four starts this season.

For the second weekend, more than 55,000 persons watched the games.

Held Upper Hand

Playing before a crowd of 13,580 Toronto held the upper hand most of the way in their contest with Bruins. Mel (Sudden Death) Hill, making his debut on home ice, scored two goals for the Leafs and Dave (Sweeney) Schriner continued his hot pace by counting once and assisting in another. Ted Kennedy, Lorne Carr, Bob Davidson and Pete Backor got the others. Ken Smith and Bill Jennings scored Boston's only goals, both in the last period.

Montreal had to fight hard for both their victories. In the first match they breezed into a 2-0 lead early in the opening period on goals by Maurice Richard and Dutch Hiller, before veteran Syd Howe counted for the Red Wings. Then Steve Wochy netted the only goal of the second period to deadlock the count. With eight minutes to go in the final stanza Toe Blake found the mark after a passing attack with Leo Lamoureux and Butch Bouchard.

Came From Behind

Canadiens had to come from behind to win Sunday. Modere (Mud) Bruneteau and veteran Syd Howe got goals for Detroit in the first period. Then Buddy O'Connor scored Montreals first counter after stealing the puck from Bill Quackenbush midway through the second.

In the third session, Blake bounced a 30-foot shot from a difficult angle off Howe's pads into the Detroit net to tie the game and less than two minutes from time, with a tie almost assured, Murph Chamberlain hooked a short pass from the side around goalie Connie Dion.

At Chicago a capacity crowd of 16,707 watched the first line of Cowley-Jennings-Cain click for five of the six goals. Cain netted three Cowley, two, with Jennings getting an assist on one. Norm Calladine got the other marker.

Lude Check, Fido Purpur and Harvey Fraser counted for Chicago.

The Bruins led almost from the outset and skated at a lightning pace all the way. They led 3-1 at the end of the first period and held a 4-2 margin going into the last.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, Nov. 6 (AP) — Grant Pollock of Clinton, Ill., offers a prospectus of an amphibious postwar winter sports program which embraces ski running, toboggan and bobsled racing and snow polo — which he describes as a game played on bobsleds going down a race track at full speed...Obviously Mr. Pollock has only the foggiest idea of modern bobsled racing and his program, as outlined, would leave few survivors. But in it he has one idea worth following up... That is that snow sports, just becoming popular in the United States when the war came along, offer a big field in which employment can be created for returning soldiers...A lot of those boys will need healthful outdoor work—the United States Golf Association has recognized that in its plan to employ wounded veterans on golf courses—and that's just what they can get clearing rocky hillsides in summer and digging city folks out of snowdrifts in winter.

BRAVES WIN 9-2

Valleyfield, Que., Nov. 6 — (CP)— Valleyfield Braves Sunday won their first home game in the newly-formed Inter-provincial Hockey League defeating Cornwall Fliers 9-4.

Connolly led the Valleyfield scorers with two goals. Joannette also was helpful in scoring two points and chalked up one by himself.

Burr and Perron were the outstanding Cornwall players and their combination helped score two of the Fliers' four points.

JUST A SAMPLE FOR KATAN.

It's "Whipper Billie" Watson, the British Empire wrestling champion, you see practising his famed step-over reverse leglock he hopes to employ against John "Fingers" Katan in the defence of his Empire crown at the Hume Arena, Wednesday night. However, Katan enjoys much different ideas and at long last gained his point in getting Watson in the same ring for an evening. Promoter Frank Tunney announced this bout has been sanctioned by the Athletic Commission as a no-time limit affair and a winner must be declared before the curtain is wrung down. Katan established himself as the No. 1 contender for any wrestling bout when he beat Frank Sexton, the Pacific Coast champion, here recently. It was the first time in two years Sexton had been beaten... Two all-star preliminaries precede the championship scrap. KROL ACCOUNTS FOR ALL POINTS IN HAMILTON WIN

Wildcats Trailing by Eight Points When Halfback Goes in and Wins 9-8

By The Canadian Press

Joe Krol, the outstanding halfback in Canadian football this season, was cast in a familiar role Saturday as he accounted for all nine points scored by Hamilton Wildcats in a 9-8 victory over Toronto Balmy Beach in the final scheduled game in the Ontario Rugby Football Union this season.

The victory gave the Wildcats first place in the final Union standing with five wins and one defeat for a two-point margin over Beaches, who won four games and lost two. The two teams meet again in Hamilton next Saturday in the opening game of a home-and-home points-to-count series for the Union championship.

The Ontario Armed Services Football League schedule wound up with a single game in Toronto where Camp Borden R.C.A.F. Hurricanes defeated Toronto Navy Bulldogs, 17-13, in a contest featured by an 80-yard touchdown run by Sgt. Doug Pyser of Hurricanes and a touchdown by OS. Tom Ford of Navy on the last play of the game.

The defeat left Navy in second place in the final league standings, only one point behind Hagersville R.C.A.F. Bombers who were not scheduled but went to London, Ont., for an exhibition game and snapped the undefeated record of the University of Western Ontario Mustangs with a 29-18 triumph. Hagersville and Navy meet in Toronto next Saturday in a sudden-death game for the league title.

Rested in Third

The 26-year-old Krol rested in the game at Hamilton in the third quarter and when he returned to the field his team trailed by six points. He promptly kicked a single and then set up a touchdown play with three forward passes, which put the ball on the Beach 15-yard line. From there he went over for the major score. It was not converted but he got the winning point on another single.

Beaches scored seven points during Krol's absence. Ross (Red) McKelvey provided six with a brilliant 75-yead touchdown run from his own 35-yard line where he caught a punt. He converted the score himself.

Wildcats, 1943 Dominion champions, held a 2-1 lead at half time on two first quarter singles by Krol. Earl Selkirk kicked two singles for Beaches, one in the second quarter and another in the third.

Took Early Lead

Camp Borden took over an early lead in the Toronto game with five points in the first quarter, three on a field goal by LAC. Bobby Porter and two singles by Sgt. Fred Kijek. Navy overcame that lead in the second quarter when LS. Annis Stukus scored a touchdown and converted it himself. AB. Royal Copeland set up the scoring play with a 50-yard forward pass to LS. Al Upper on the Camp Borden six-yard line.

Kijek threw a touchdown pass to LAC. Joe Phelan early in the third quarter and converted it himself to put Camp Borden back into the lead. Stukus kicked a single on an outside kick play.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

H. A. Campbell of Windsor was re-elected president of the Ontario Basketball association at its annual meeting in Toronto Saturday. Other officers re-elected were Ed Dixon of St. Catharines, 1st vice-president and Wilson Marks of Toronto, 2nd vice-president. Myles Leeson of Merritton was elected secretary, succeeding Laurie Irwin of Toronto.

Jack Allen, manager of Dave Castilloux of Montreal, Canadian lightweight and welterweight champion, said last night that Eddie Quinn, Montreal fight manager, had made an offer to have Bobby Gunther of Detroit fight Castilloux in Montreal Nov. 14. Allen is withholding any decision until after tonight's fight here between Castilloux and Joey Peralta, Mexican lightweight king.

New York closed its scheduled 181-day racing program Saturday at Jamaica with a $3,541,167 betting day, a world's record for a seven-event program. It wiped out the previous record of $3,461,406 set at the same park only a week before. The crowd of 36,512 established another record by pouring $189,116 into the daily double pool.

Three and possibly four senior "A" clubs will start their season Nov. 27, with the schedule to be announced later, it was decided at an executive meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association at Toronto Saturday. Definite starters are Toronto Staffords, Hamilton and St Catharines, Ont.

The O.H.A. accepted Toronto Staffords as the new club in the senior "A" group for the 1944-45 season. New clubs accepted in the junior "B" division are Hastings, Campbellford, Woodstock, St. Andrew's College, Stratford, Alvinston, Watford, Forest, Glencoe and Petrolia. The 56th annual meeting of the O.H.A. will be held in Toronto Nov. 25.

Henry Armstrong, years past his great prime, still can hit. He proved it Saturday at Portland, Ore., by knocking out Mike Belloise of New York in the fourth heat of their scheduled 10-round bout. After taking the first three rounds with ease, little perpetual motion ended the battle with a smashing left hook to Belloise's chin.

St Louis Browns reported yesterday that three of their players, including one member of the 1944 American League champions, have been inducted into the armed forces since the end of the season.

They are Al Zarilla, hard-hitting but erratic left fielder; Paul Dean, younger member of the famous "Me 'n Paul" duo who won fame with the Cardinals and who this season pitched for Little Rock; and Bill Seinsoth, a pitcher recalled from Toledo just before the season ended.

TRIP COST $10

Halifax, Nov. 6 — (CP) — A trip across the Atlantic cost just $10 for Frank O'Neill, 17, of Hamilton, Ont. That's the fine he paid Saturday for stowing away in Britain on a Canada-bound vessel.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

There was an American soldier named Ginsburg. Ginsburg was bad. He was positively allergic to drill, and all thumbs with a gun. They sent him from one camp to another, but everywhere the same reports came back about what a rotten soldier Ginsburg was.

Then they sent him to Bataan, and the reports coming in were astounding. He captured six Japs single-handed, destroyed a machine gun nest containing ten more Japs, was cited for this and cited for that.

The change was so amazing that one of his former O.C.'s wired for an explanation. The answer came back: "We gave him a machine gun and said: "Now, Ginsburg, you're in business for yourself"."

Day of Upsets

Top ranking grid teams in the United States were toppled from their lofty perches in the season's greatest day of upsets on Saturday. The battle-scarred Blue Devils of Duke University had their moment Saturday to hand the Georgia Tech Engineers their first defeat of the season . . . Duke thrilled a home crowd of 50,000 at Durham, N.C., to win 19 to 13 and push the "Rollicking Wrecks" out of the unbeaten bracket . . . Missouri rallied in the second half to score two touchdowns and beat Michigan State 13 to 7 and tumble the "Big M" squad from the unbeaten realm also . . . The Navy "middies" toppled the hereto unbeaten Notre Dame "Irish", but good, the count being 32 to 13 . . . Displaying pose and power the Navy eleven became the 1944 giant-killers of American football . . . The week before Pennsylvania's unbeaten string was snapped by the Navy and on Saturday it was Notre Dame who had their wings clipped by the powerful Navy eleven . . . Incidentally the Navy is in the vanquished class having tumbled before Georgia Tech . . . As for those in the unbeaten bracket Ohio State Buckeyes moved closer to a national championship by beating Indiana 21 to 7 . . . Ohio State has six victories and only one team, Minnesota, has crossed their goal line for more than one touchdown in a game . . . Then the Buckeyes went on to win 34 to 14 . . . The mighty Army team from West Point established itself as another top-ranking eleven, on equal footing with Ohio State . . . On Saturday Army tried to be merciful to Villanova, but without avail as the West Point eleven ran up a score of 83 to 0 . . . In their six games this season the Army has only been scored on three times while their composite score of the year is 360 for and 21 against . . . Next week it's Army vs Notre Dame. Yale is also unbeaten this season.

This and That

Clark Shaughnessy, outstanding American football authority, says the greatest grid squads he has seen in 35 years of coaching are the current Army team and the 1943 Notre Dame eleven . . . Maybe Clarke has forgotten all about Illinois' Red Grange squad, to say nothing of Knute Rockne's "Four Horsemen and Seven Mules" . . . Of course present scoring statistics show there is very little wrong with the current West Point eleven with Glenn Davis having already lugged the pigskin over for 13 touchdowns in six games. . . . Georgia State, another underdog team, upset Alabama's Crimson Tide 14 to 7 Saturday to add another victim from the undefeated list . . . Did you know Glenn Cunningham, the former mile champion, was badly burned when only seven years of age? . . . Pete Gray, the one-armed outfielder Toronto Maple Leafs refused and who is now the property of the St. Louis Browns, is being sent to American Army hospitals to prove to wounded veterans the value of exercise in overcoming injuries.

Promoter's Friend

It must be admitted John Katan is one of the best wearing grapplers Promoter Frank Tunney has on his list. "Honest John", as he likes to call himself, likes to assume the villain's role and become the patrons' No. 1 hate. The Palermo Panther is actually at a loss in the ring if and when the paying public decide to get on his side and make him the night's hero. However, such won't be the case when "Fingers John" climbs in against Billie Watson at the local palace de sport this week. Katan should be right at home as the East York mat hero will be favored to retain his British Empire title over the no time limit route. As a promoter Tunney is among the more successful in the business and he won't hurt his gates or reputation with bouts that include men like Watson and Katan featuring.

Headin' South

Should Commissioner Landis lift restrictions on southern training trips, the A's will prepare for the 1945 campaign at Savannah, Ga., according to reports. The Phils would probably return to Miami Beach, Fla., if the training ban is lifted, although there has been some talk the club might go to South America.

Longest Air Route In World Set Up

Montreal, Nov. 4 —(CP)— An R. A. F. Transport Command plane arrived in the Antipoles today, to mark the official opening of a regular British ferrying service between Montreal and Sydney, Australia—the longest single air route in the world.

Arrival of the plane — the famous Liberator AL504, the commando— opened the service which gives Britain a round-the-world military air route. The commando left Montreal Tuesday on her journey of 11,520 statute miles, flying by way of California, Honolulu, Canton Island, Fiji, and Auckland, N. Z., to Sydney.

SOON RECOVERED

Brockville, Nov. 6 — (CP)—From 10 to 15 guests attending the wedding Saturday of Miss Eileen Ball, daughter of alderman E. C. Ball, to Lieut. A. J. Ponelli of Port Arthur were taken ill with food poisoning but recovered sufficiently to return home after treatment at St. Vincent's hospital.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 534

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The gap between a minnie and a gob may be small. A mere change of one card may transfer a minimum opening in a four opening. Or the other way around.

Fuss around with this hand:

♥ K Q J 8 7 6 3 2
♦ None
♣ Q 7 4

In some spots, this hand would be a four heart opening. Change the heart jack to the ace of diamonds and it is an opening of one heart in any position.

Rule says an opening four bid shows a long-strong suit, no sure trick outside, eight tricks. If the suit is long but not strong, it may have some outside strength.

An expert once said about a four bid opening: "A pre-emptive bid is never both necessary and effective. When it seems necessary, it is not effective. When it is effective, it was not necessary."

It seems to work that way with experts. But you can get good results if you abuse it properly: freely in wrong places with wrong partners; sparingly in right places with right partners.

Wrong partners think a four opening shows a strong hand. Unless they have all the tea in China, they drop your opening of one or two or three. To reach game with a strong hand, open with a wrong four bid.

With sound partners, use the four bid correctly but sparingly. Because good partners know what it means and what to do with it.

When used correctly, the best place for a four bid is after two hands have not opened the bidding. The worst time to use it is when you are dealer and the first one to bid or pass.

Suppose your partner was dealer and passed. The opponent next to him passed. You are the third player to say. With a sound partner, it may be a good idea to open the above hand with four hearts.

But you take that advice at your own risk.

5,000 Cigarettes Given Corvette "Belleville"

Before the HMCS. Corvette "Belleville" moved out of harbor and sailed down the St. Lawrence River to take her place with Canada's ever growing fleet of fighting ships, 5,000 cigarettes were placed aboard the corvette through the courtesy of the Army and Navy veterans "Fag Fund" in this city, President-elect James Lazenby recently announced.

"It was only fitting we should assist in the provision of smokes for the crew of the corvette "Belleville" and it was with the unanimous vote of the Veterans' "fag fund" committee that 5,000 smokes were placed aboard in order that the officers and crew might be well supplied with fags enroute to the sea," explained Mr. Lazenby.

As is the general course of procedure scores of replies are received weekly from Belleville and district boys serving overseas extending thanks for smokes already received and urging the continuance of sending Canadian cigarettes and tobacco to the men of our fighting forces.

Aside from the cigarettes placed aboard the corvette "Belleville", the following district lads were sent individual shipments of 300 cigarettes each by the Army and Navy Veterans "fag fund" last week. They were:

Submarines Prey Of Little Ships

London (CP) — The "little ships" of the Second Escort Group, made famous under the command of the late Capt. F. J. Walker, D.S.O., and three bars, have sunk another three U-boats and been given a half-share in a fourth.

Their actions took place in the English Channel approaches and in one of them they were aided in "making sure" a kill by the Canadian destroyer Iroquois. Another Canadian destroyer, the Kootenay, took aboard submarine survivors.

H.M.S. Wren, the sloop Starling and the frigate Loch Killin shared in the kills. Credit for the fourth U-boat was divided between the escort ships and a coastal command Liberator.

The War Today—

Impending Loss of Hungary Means Loss of Key to Balkans

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The Red army's furious assault on the Hungarian capital of Budapest represents the crisis in one of the war's major operations. The city's inevitable fall will speed Hitler's end.

This vastly important communications and industrial centre, which straddles the broad Danube like a colossus, is the guardian of the Danubian Basin route into southeast Germany via Austria. Its capture will at once open the gate for an advance up the valley and provide the Soviet forces with a magnificent base for operations against Germany itself.

But Budapest to my mind means far more than that. It's only about 100 air miles from the Austrian border and 140 from Vienna—and many Austrians are only waiting for a chance to rise and throw off the Nazi yoke.

Possibility of Revolt in Austria.

Thus it strikes me as quite possible that the arrival of the Red army at the Austrian frontier might precipitate a revolt against Hitler within that enslaved country. Once a rebellion started in Austria there would be no telling how far it might spread through unhappy Germany.

The proud and handsome city of Budapest, with its population of more than 1,000,000 has been one of Hitler's greatest assets. It is the hopper through which Hungary and much of the rest of the agriculturally rich Balkans have poured their grain and other supplies into a Reich which could not feed itself. It's the greatest railway centre in that part of Europe, and also is one of the chief ports on the Danube which carries cargoes from the Black Sea clear into Germany.

Budapest Great Milling Centre.

Moreover, Budapest is one of the world's great milling centres, and Hitler has depended heavily on its flour to feed his people—a mighty item in maintaining the morale of a nation. The city also has many war industries that have been a godsend to the Nazi dictator as his home factories have disappeared under the avalanche of Allied bombing.

The impending loss of Hungary will deprive Hitler of a satellite which, next to Italy, is the most important European ally he has had for it has been the key to his control of the Balkans. But while this will represent a great military victory for the United Nations, it undoubtedly will be a mixed blessing since it will saddle them with another serious political problem.

There are a great many Hungarian Nazis. Thus, just as the Allies will have the great educational task of eradicating Nazism from Germany and Fascism from Italy, so will they have to eliminate the Hitlerian creed from Hungary.

Canadian Troops Anxious To Know Minister's Stand

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the 1st Canadian Army in Holland, Nov. 6 — (CP Cable) — Canadian troops here are anxious to learn what stand Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, newly-appointed Canadian Defence Minister, is going to take on the reinforcement question and the moot issue of sending home defence men overseas.

At present the troops are confused by the controversy in Ottawa and are uneasy about the implication that Gen. McNaughton will refuse to send home defence men overseas. On this issue they would support former Defence Minister Ralston's reported recommendation to the government that home defence troops should be despatched to active theatres as reinforcements.

There has always been deep resentment among overseas troops that the so-called "Zombies" have stayed at home throughout the war. The majority of Canadians here voice strong opinions on this question and Mr. Ralston's reported view certainly reflects what the majority of the troops here feel.

Now that the "Zombie" question has come to a head, they want to know what is going to be done about it. So they wait to hear what Gen. McNaughton's policy will be.

The Canadian troops in Holland received practically all the news on the situation from reports in the army newspaper Maple Leaf, although they first heard of Mr. Ralston's resignation and Gen. McNaughton's appointment from a BBC broadcast which only mentioned the cabinet change and did not go into any detail or explanation for the switch.

HORNETS TIGHTEN HOLD ON FIRST PLACE IN LOOP

Defeat Hershey Bears 4-1 on Saturday and Providence Reds 3-2 Sunday

(By The Canadian Press)

Pittsburg Hornets tightened their hold on first place in the American Hockey League over the weekend by defeating Hershey Bears 4-1 Saturday night and Providence Reds 3-2 last night

Cleveland Barons suffered their second straight defeat on home ice Saturday when they bowed to Indianapolis Capitals 2-1. In the circuit's only other encounters Buffalo Bisons last night defeated Hershey Bears 2-1, Caps whipped St. Louis 6-3.

Both Hornet victories were made on foreign ice. At Hershey, Tony Hemmerling rapped home their first goal early in the second period. Bill Gooden evened the count for Bears on a fast breakaway five minutes later. However only 30 seconds later, Doc Prentice put Pittsburgh in the lead on a fast-clicking play set up by Bob Gracie and Bob Walton. Wendell Jamieson and Gracie accounted for the two other tallies.

Walton started the scoring at Providence in the first period last night but Reds' Bill Whittet tied the score in the middle frame. Bill Hudson gave Reds a lead in the final frame, but the Count was evened three minutes later by Hemmerling. Dede Klein made Hornets' winning tally just 35 seconds before the final whistle on a spectacular pass from Player-Coach Max Kaminsky.

In the Cleveland-Indianapolis contest, Tony Buckovich gave Caps a one-goal lead on the first period. Jack Hewson made it 2-0 in the third after a scoreless, but hard-fought second period. Leo Gaspirini drove home Barons' only tally with just nine seconds to go.

Rough and Tumble

St. Louis Flyers game at Cleveland was of the rough-and-tumble variety, in which three match misconduct penalties were handed out. After a tough first period which brought five penalties, Johnny Baby of the Flyers and Gordon (Moose) Sherritt of Caps squared off in a fight which finished in the penalty box. Flyers' Vic Lynn, Baby and Sherritt drew match penalties, while Pete Leswick turned the hat trick.

Pete scored once in the second and added two more counters in the final frame. Byron McDonald, Morden (Duckey) Skinner and Buckovich were the other scorers.

Nakina Smith, Fred Hergert and Nick Evabshan registered the St. Louis tallies.

At Buffalo last night, Bisons packed all their goals in the first period. George Boothman started the scoring 90 seconds after the whistle blew for the opening face-off and Art Parteger made it 2-0 less than three minutes later. Art Strobel got Bears' only goal at the third-quarter mark, but Boothman gave his team the two-goal before the end of the period.

GYPSY BLOOD

By MARGARET NORRIS

CHAPTER 1

Anna stood with her father on the ship's deck. It was a mighty ship larger than a palace and it was to carry her to America, the land of her hopes and dreams.

She stood bewildered by the crowds and noise, holding tight to her father's hand. Slung over her shoulder was a bundle containing all she owned in the world—another dress, a pair of shoes and a little food for the journey. Underneath her homespun peasant frock her heart was thumping like the engines of the ship.

Anna was a young Polish girl. She was 16 and pretty as a picture; her hair was yellow, her cheeks were tanned and her eyes were blacker than aloes. She was straight and tall and strong as a boy, for all her life she had worked in the fields, driving the plow and making hay, as is the custom of peasant women in Poland.

But while she worked Anna longed for other things. Her foot in the furrow itched for the road—for the romance that beckoned from other fields. Anna had gypsy blood. Some remote, forgotten ancestor whose history none could recall had bequeathed to her a heritage of eternal restlessness.

One day her mother said to her: "You are going to America with your father."

"Where is America?" Anna asked.

"It is a country across the seas where everyone has plenty of money and the women do not work as we do. Be good, mind your father and send your money back to me that I, too, may join you there.".

Anna kissed her mother goodbye and both of them wept a little, but in spite of her tears her heart leapt for joy and she was too excited to sleep.

Now at last she was on her way, lined up with the rest of the emigrants tired men and women with hearts full of hope setting sail for the land of the free.

Anna had never seen such confusion as there was on the docks that day. Hundreds of people were under foot, some laughing, others weeping; sailors running around everywhere, wheeling baggage on little carts, heaving boxes, shouting orders, laughing jostling, singing. They wore funny blue trousers, very tight at the top and very loose at the bottom. They made free with the immigrants in the long weary line. Some of them winked at Anna.

Her father grew tired of standing in line and said he must go and do an errand. Anna suspected it was to get a drink; that was always his errand.

"Don't budge from this line until I return," he warned her, "or I will not take you with me. I will send you back to the grain fields and go on to America alone."

When Anna was a child she had been afraid of her father. He had beaten her, and her mother, until she had grown to hate him. But now she was strong as he was, so she no longer feared him, but he delighted to bully her and she had no love for him. Yet she dreaded to have him leave her now; it made her feel even stranger and more lonely in that gruelling, slow moving line.

As Anna stood bewildered, faint with fatigue, a sailor with a cart load of baggage bumped into her. He almost knocked her down. She drew up her full dignity and gave him a scathing glance. If looks could kill he would have dropped dead.

But no sailor ever died that way. He looked at her, saw how pretty she was, tip-tilted her chin and kissed her.

With her hand made strong by plowing, Anna slapped him smartly on the cheek. Even so he did not get angry. Instead he laughed, spoke to another sailor, looked at Anna and laughed some more.

Anna did not understand what they said but she did not like the look they gave her. For the first time in her life she was frightened. She wished her father would return. If she could not rest for a moment she knew she would faint. In a far corner of the dock she spied a great heap of sacks. She ran over crawled beneath them and thus hidden went sound asleep.

She had no idea how long she slept when she was awakened by a mighty whistle. It was the whistle of the ship. Anna leaped to her feet in terror. It must mean the ship was sailing. Perhaps it had already gone! But no! it still lay there, a great black hulk—but how could she get on it? Where was her father? Which way should she turn? She began to cry like a child.

"Hello, sweetheart! What's the matter? Lost?"

It was the sailor whose face Anna had slapped. He stood there, insolent still laughing, but there was a note of friendliness in his voice.

Anna nodded still weeping.

"Give me a kiss and I'll help you on board. The ship is about to sail."

But Anna only sobbed the louder. The sailor took her arm and piloted her gently through the crowd. They were already lifting the gang plank. Would her father really go without her?

A uniformed officer pulled Anna aboard. The sailor leaped on after her. The ship whistled again and moved slowly from shore.

Anna blew a last kiss to Poland. In the midst of her sobs she smiled. Was she not off for America, the land of her hopes and dreams!

When Anna wakened on the big ship in the morning she was feeling very queer. There was an unaccustomed sensation in the pit of her stomach; her head too, felt strange. The ship was swinging like a hammock. It was swaying like the fields of grain that she used to cut in Poland. She wished she were back there cutting them now.

Anna tried to sit up but fell back again. She opened her eyes weakly and looked around. She could not see the water from her room; she could not see anything at all; it was just a dark little cubby hole with very little air.

There were others in the cabin with her. In the berth across was a woman with a baby. Above were more babies, all crying, but the woman paid no attention to them. She lay quite still, moaning.

"Do you feel queer, too?" asked Anna.

"Oh, Gawd! I feel awful!" groaned the woman.

"What's the queer motion we feel? You know,—rise way up, then fall back again?"

"Oh, Gawd! it's the sea!" said the woman. "Don't you know what it is to be seasick?"

"I guess I do now," Anna replied weakly.

For three days and nights the fearful storm raged. Anna never left her bed. The ship stood on end and came level again. The waves pounded against her like cannon. The wind whistled and sighed like dying men. The fog horn blew mournfully.

Anna wondered why she ever had left her home. Why should she go to America? Why had she ever eaten anything? Certainly she would never eat again. If the ship would only sink and lie still on the bottom!

But the fourth day all was changed. The sea was calm and Anna's head was clear. Her stomach felt like it was back in its right place again. She dressed and went up on deck. The sun on the sea was so beautiful she wondered if it could be real. Had she died and wakened in Heaven? Then suddenly she knew she hadn't.

There in a corner of the deck leaning limp against the barrel was Anna's father, very green and pale. He looked so miserable his daughter felt sorry for him.

"You been sick too, Pa?"

The big Pole nodded weakly. "Still am."

"It's awful, isn't it! But I'm all right now. Say, where do they eat on this ship? I'm empty down to my toes."

Anna's father turned his head away in disgust. "Don't talk of eating!" he groaned.

"But I've got to," said his daughter. She could smell food in the offing and the odor was savory. By following her nose Anna found her way to the immigrants' dining room. The food was coarse and ill cooked but she did not care. She ate as though she had been working in the fields.

Across the table sat a young Italian girl with two long, silky ropes of black hair. Her eyes were like black velvet and her cheeks made one think of poppies. She was small and slender and so pretty Anna could not keep her eyes from her. The two girls smiled and tried to talk but could not understand each other's language. They exchanged names but nothing more. The Italian girl's name was Rose.

Later the two girls sat together on deck and watched the sea and the people. On their part of the ship were only immigrants like themselves bound for America to make their fortunes, young boys and girls older men and women, crying, troublesome children. On a deck above, far removed, Anna glimpsed a very different sort of people—well groomed men and beautiful women who looked as though they had never worked.

They must live in America, thought Anna where everyone is rich. Then through her surged a longing that some day she might know people like that, wear beautiful clothes, live a life of ease and travel in the top of the ship. That she was as pretty as any of them Anna knew without being told. Her black eyes grew softer with dreaming of what life in the new land might bring.

Among the upper deck personages was a young man who looked especially handsome and fine. Anna looked up and watched him as he walked above. He wore gray knickerbockers and a gay sweater, had soft brown hair that curled and the nicest eyes and the kindest smile Anna had ever seen. Often as she watched him from her steerage deck she fancied he watched her, too, and once she was absolutely sure his nice smile flashed her way.

Anna had known few men in her life. Her experience with her father had led her to believe all men were brutal and cruel. But this young man, somehow, looked different.

As night came on she still sat on the deck. Rose's mother came and sent her to bed, but Anna's father was too ill to care. The moon rose over the water and changed the world to fairyland. Anna felt an unnamed longing and wished she had someone to talk with, someone who understood her language, who would tell her things of which she had dreamed. Just then someone dropped down beside her delightedly she heard her own tongue.

"Hello, sweetheart!" the voice said. "I've been looking for you."

It was the sailor whose face Anna had slapped.

At sight of the sailor Anna leaped to her feet with the involuntary gesture of a wild thing that shrinks from the thing it fears, and started back to her cabin. But the sailor caught her hand and held it.

"Don't run away. I won't hurt you." His voice was agreeably soft. In it Anna scarcely recognized the impudent lad on the docks who had kissed her and whose face she had slapped.

"Let's talk for a while, it's a wonderful night." The sailor was leaning against the ship's rail, and still holding Anna's hand he stood there in the full blaze of the moon.

Perhaps it was that eerie transfiguring light. Perhaps it was that Anna was lonely. Perhaps it was thoughts of the small, stuffy cabin that awaited her below. But some bewitching influence born of the sea and the moon seemed to transform the sailor, to make him handsome and debonair as the pictured heroes who had danced in her dreams as she plowed the grain fields of Poland.

"Where have you been—seasick?" Again that caressing voice, with disarming softness — soft as the moonlight itself.

Anna nodded. "It was awful. Why does anyone want to go to sea?"

"Because it's the Life! Don't you like this ship?"

"I hate it!" Anna said sullenly. The sailor's laugh rang out clear as ship's bells in the night.

"You funny little kid! You haven't seen it! I'll show it to you."

Still holding Anna by the hand the sailor led her through long and devious passages, through bulkheads, up and down stairways, past throbbing engines and dark, narrow halls until suddenly they emerged on a clear little deck space in the very aft of the ship, where the trough of water that churned up in their wake leaped like gleaming phosphorous.

The two sat down on a coil of rope and watched the silvery path of the moon. Anna felt she had been transported to some far mysterious land that might fade at the sound of her voice. She said nothing. She dared not.

"All right now?" asked the sailor. He put his arms around her waist.

Anna nodded, still afraid to speak. Her companion drew her close and kissed her—but not at all as that day on the docks.

"Why don't you slap my face?" he asked.

Anna laughed and he kissed her again. She was feeling strangely happy.

"Love me a little?" asked the sailor.

In repy Anna kissed him back. It was the first time she had kissed any man, for she had never kissed her father or her brothers. Indeed, why should she want to kiss any of the men she had known at home with their rough, ugly bearded faces? The sailor's face was not entirely smooth, but the sensation was quite new and delightful. She put her head on his shoulder. Was this love of which the story books told? Then suddenly Anna sat up very straight.

"What's the matter?" the boy asked.

"My mother told me never to love a sailor."

"Why not?"

"She says they have a girl in every port."

"Nonsense! I have no girl but you. What does she know about it?"

"My mother is wise. She knows everything."

"But she never married a sailor."

"She says that nobody ever did."

Both laughed again and the sailor pulled her back close. Anna snuggled up happily. They sat like this until far into the night. The rosy fingers of dawn were streaking the sky soon after Anna had crept, stealthily, back to her quarters.

The next night, and the next, and the one after that, Anna and the sailor met in the self same spot. Anna began to like the ship. She wished the voyage would never end.

"You mustn't tell anyone of our meetings," the boy told her. "If it were found out I'd be canned."

"And my father would kill me if he knew. It will be just our little secret."

The day was a tiresome interlude, during most of which Anna slept or sat with Rose and her father on their steerage deck, dreaming into the water, thinking of the evening that was to come. When she watched the fine people on the deck above she no longer envied them. Romance had come to beautify her life. She would not change her lot with theirs.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

Lack of Knowledge Regarding Russia Is Discussed

Mrs. J. F. Davidson Speaks to Lecture and Study Club on Need of Unity and Faith

"We, the United Nations, aim at peace—to have it, we must have unity, and to have a unity we must have courage and faith", stressed Mrs. John F. Davidson in her impressive address to the Belleville Lecture and Study Club on Friday evening in the Collegiate Library. Mrs. Davidson spoke on "Must We Fear Russia?" as an introduction to the series of lectures scheduled for the coming year.

Mrs. Davidson, who was born in Latvia in Northern Europe, is keenly interested in the European question following this war, and she is constantly studying every phase in relation to it. Already, she is a lecturer of wide fame, Belleville audiences having had the opportunities of listening to her before.

"I have come in contact with people who have said that after we have crushed Germany, we must do likewise with Russia, if we are to have the peace we desire", said Mrs. Davidson. She went on to say that that particular attitude worries her. That attitude is the result of fear which in turn is the result of apprehension which is brought about by knowing only in part. If we view Russia with foreboding, it is because we known her only in part. We have been partners with her for only three years, and that is too short a period to become fully acquainted with her. Our knowledge of her is partial, so we are therefore apprehensive".

In speaking about Russia in regards to other nations, Mrs. Davidson stated, "unless we can come to a satisfactory arrangement following this war, we will become a thoughtless island". As peace is your aim, the essential step on which everything depends is that we are able to cope with the situation following the military victory. We must have solid unity. We are not going to have unity if we fear somebody in the group of nations.

"What do we fear about Russia?" asked Mrs. Davidson. Some said they feared her military might now, which will be greater still after the war. The Russian army is now at the gates of Budapest, routes from now on will be easy for them. They are people who are walking into the capitals of Europe—a change that might make one's mind tremble. Some fear Russia's military achievement and fear that they will not be sure we can live by their faith. The Russians have a tremendous goal. There reigns in the majority of Russian hearts a big plan—a big future—something for which to drive. "What will this land be like in 200 years?" is the question uppermost in Russian minds.

Planning is Necessary.

Materially, compared to us, continued Mrs. Davidson, they have never lived well. We are afraid of particulars which do not worry the Russians. We worry about specific things of life, for example, "Shall we have enough jobs after the war"—"What will happen to the war jobs?" —"What will happen to our boys when they come back?" All these questions are on our minds. Such questions do not arise in Russian minds. Stalin once said, "We are behind other nations—we must catch up". Everyone in Russia will have a job after the war because of planning. Russia's constructive task and further constructive task is tremendous. We fear that we have not a plan large enough to take care of rehabilitation problems. We must, therefore, get together and plan.

Russia Too Has Fears.

"Russians have fears also", continued Mrs. Davidson. There have been few Russians come out of Russia during the last few years. Ideas from abroad have not entered into their country. As a result they have difficulty in knowing us also. She fears combination of powers which will render her state insecure. Russia is now coming in contact with other European nation. Is she going to be changed? She fears that. We need unity, sound, sure and solid with Russia if we are to have lasting peace.

According to illustrations from foreign fields, Mrs. Davidson stated that Russia has given no cause for fear on the part of her neighbors. The speaker told of the treatment by the Russian of the various countries over which she had taken control on her way to Germany. The Russian foreign policy is versatile, and it treats each situation on its own merits.

For a few moments, Mrs. Davidson, dealt with the different situations arising in Finland, the Baltic States of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, Poland, the Balkan States of Rumania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Greece, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Austria. She stressed that the Poland question was a complicated and serious one and that there would have to be a compromise.

In conclusion Mrs. Davidson said that the state of fear is the most undesirable state among nations. Courage is virtue without which other virtues are useless. One can not have faith without courage.

Chairman for the evening was Mr. Robert McCulloch, who introduced Mrs. Davidson to the assemblage and also expressed club appreciation to her at the conclusion of her address.

MAKE FURTHER PROGRESS

Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 6 — (CP-Reuter)—British forces driving into Burma from the west have made further progress along the Tiddim-Fort White road, Admiral Mountbatten announced today.

Allied fighters destroyed three of a small force of enemy aircraft attempting to sweep over Central Burma.

Handsome Plaques Now in Place On The "Belleville"

Etched against the gleaming whiteness of Lieut. J. E. Korning's cabin on the trim corvette "Belleville" is a handsome plaque of bronze on oak, a gift from the people of this city to the ship of their adoption.

Aft, on the grey of one of her bulwarks, is yet another plaque reminding the ship's personnel that the hearts of the residents of Belleville are always with them.

The plaques which arrived too late for official presentation to Lieut. Korning at the adoption ceremonies at Kingston a short time ago, were forwarded "somewhere down east" where the warship is at present undergoing her trials.

Ships' officers and ratings will enjoy Belleville candy, Christmas cake and apples at Christmas time. Within the next day or so, boxes of candy and cake will be expressed to the corvette. Two barrels of apples went forward a few days ago.

Mercury Takes Sudden Dive

A few snowflakes, the first of the season, fluttered through the air on Sunday, but potential winter sports enthusiasts, with visions perhaps of skiing on the Oak Hills, were doomed to disappointment.

The almost Spring-like weather of last week, departed with an atmospheric bang. Temperatures dived suddenly as winds swung to the northward sending the mercury down to freezing point.

But the snow was a disappointment. There was a little flurry hardly enough to wet the pavements and the weatherman withdrew the advance guards of his white legions.

Today the weather will be fair and cold, according to the fellow, who is supposed to know whereof he speaks regarding the weather. A cold snap is said to be moving in from Western Ontario where temperatures as low as 15 degrees below freezing have been recorded. The cool "spell" may last a few days, but it is not likely to be of an extreme nature, at least so says the prognosticator.

SMOKE FROM BOX OF BURNING RUBBISH FILLS FRONT ST. STORE

Smoke rolling from a box of burning rubbish in the basement forced clerks and customers to the street from the Christian hardware store on Front Street shortly after nine o'clock this morning. Investigation by firemen revealed that the box of rubbish had caught fire presumably as result of being placed too near the furnace.

Two other runs were had by the fire department over the weekend, all of them being for minor causes with no damage being reported. Saturday night firemen were called to 219 Coleman Street where smoke was seen rolling from an upstairs window. Investigation revealed occupants of the home were fumigating the premises. The other run was to 73 Lingham Street early this morning where the chimney and stove pipes were reported ablaze.

Two Methods of Solution

He said there were two methods of solution open, either of which could be taken. One was to continue the voluntary system for service overseas. The other was to resort to compulsion.

"I know full well that there is an honest difference of opinion as to the respective merits of these systems, and I am going to tell you very frankly what I think about the matter," he said.

"First, let me say that all through the war and even when I have not been directly concerned with this problem I have continued to give it the closest attention, and during the last few days since again I have responsibility I have explored every possibility with the utmost care.

"I have read and studied the reports from our officers in the field, I have read and studied the suggestions and proposals made by our officers here, and I am firmly convinced that the best hope lies in the maintenance of our long traditions of voluntary service . . .

"We have built the system of discipline in our army on the principle of an honorable obligation voluntarily assumed. That army went through the very difficult and anxious time of waiting for the proper time to strike. It was the high purpose of the men — their devotion to the great cause that they themselves had taken up which gave us the strength to carry through.

"That army now has gone through with the greatest credit the stern test of battle, and its morale stands high in the estimation of all the world.

Siege Warfare Begins.

"You will, I know, forgive me if I stress to you the importance of these great advantages which we now have and understand I am sure the anxious thoughts I have that they should not be lost in any way."

Gen. McNaughton said that until recently the Allied forces were advancing rapidly in Italy and North West Europe. Now they were coming up against the heavy zone of fortifications which the Nazis had prepared close to Germany itself.

This was the beginning of siege warfare in which there was need for "lavish" supplies of guns and shells which must be provided as a first priority. He was sure they would be forthcoming from the factories and war plants.

With the general indicating the voluntary system would solve the reinforcement problem, the question as to what is to become of the Home Defence draftees remains unanswered. It is understood he may deal with this question in a speech before veterans at Ottawa Monday night.

The best conjecture is that the largest number of them will be held in service for use if the voluntary system fails. Others may be seconded to essential civilian work.

Close Attention.

His speech was received with close attention by a Victory Bond rally audience of about 1,000 which included veterans of both the First Great War and the present conflict.

The audience gave him a hearty cheer when he entered, when he was introduced, when he finished and the veterans gave him three cheers and a tiger after a brief after-meeting personal address urging their support for his voluntary program.

His formal speech was interrupted by applause and cheering once. That was when he made his first reference to the urgent need for reinforcements.

When he finished he thanked the audience "from the bottom of my heart" for their warm welcome and he told them their "kind reception" of his remarks would be an encouragement "that you and I can see this thing through to a successful conclusion in a matter of days."

Later he explained to newsmen he meant there was an urgency for his voluntary recruiting campaign to get started and it was this early start he was referring to when he said "in a matter of days."

CLIMACTIC BATTLE

Artillery Wheeled Up

American artillery was brought into play in forward positions from the Pinamopoan spearhead and shells from 155-mm. "long Toms" sent steel screaming into the Ormoc Japanese for the first time.

Pinamopoan, bitterly defended, fell to infantrymen driving by land from Carigara, seven miles to the east along Caragara Bay, after an earlier amphibious assault on the town had been beaten back by determined enemy rearguards.

Only light and ineffectual enemy air raids were reported against Leyte. Much of the Japanese aerial sting was eliminated during repeated American bombing of enemy airfields in the central Philippines. In the past five days, 167 Japanese aircraft have been destroyed or damaged on the ground or in the air. This compared with 11 American planes lost.

Gen. MacArthur announced yesterday between 67 and 77 Japanese planes were destroyed by American fighters in low-level attacks on enemy airdromes on Negros and Cebus islands west of Leyte. Ten were shot down, 57 demolished and 10 probably demolished on the ground.

Plane Disappeared Last February 14

Halifax, Nov. 6 —(CP)— Wreckage of an aircraft discovered with the skeletons of its four crewmen near here Thursday has been identified as that of a plane that disappeared last Feb. 14, the R.C.A.F.'s Eastern Air Command announced last night.

The twin-engined Hudson bomber was missing on a flight from Newfoundland to nearby Dartmouth. The crashed machine was found by hunters in the woods at Echo Lake, near Dartmouth.

Names of the crew were not announced.

"Busher" Jackson Out of Hockey

Toronto, Nov 6. (CP)—Harvey (Busher) Jackson as definitely retired from the National Hockey League after 13 seasons campaigning, Manager Art Ross of Boston Bruins announced at the weekend. Now 33, Jackson turned pro in the 1929-30 season, joining Toronto Maple Leafs with whom he gained fame as a member of the Charlie Conacher - Joe Primeau - Jackson "Kid Line". Later he played with Brooklyn Americans and then went to Bruins three years ago.

He stands fifth among the 11 players who have scored 200 or more goals in the National Hockey League. His total is 241, exceeded only by Nels Stewart, the late Howie Morenz, Auriel Joliat and Cy Dennenay.

Finds Copy of Old Quebec Newspaper

Vancouver (CP) — What may be the first newspaper printed in Canada was uncovered here when Larry Wilson, proprietor of a Vancouver book shop, obtained a copy of the Quebec Gazette, published on Thursday, June 21, 1764.

Mr. Wilson found the ancient Gazette in a Vancouver auction room, noted the yellow appearance and the peculiar type faces and thought he had a treasure.

Because of the many forgeries which surround first editions, however, he immediately started an investigation to ascertain if his copy was an original or a forgery.

He has had correspondence with the library of Congress at Washington, the Boston Public Library, the Public Archives of Canada, McGill University, the Public Library of Toronto, and the late Douglas C. McMurtie, noted historian of printing.

None of his sources could verify if the copy was authentic but some pointed out that facsimiles were published in 1864.

The paper is printed in English and French and agitated about a scheme which was afoot to tax "our American colonies."

FIERCE BATTLE CONTINUES IN BUDAPEST

Canadian Army Troops Move Into Middelburg

Russian Columns Seek To Surround East Part of City

Soviet Bombers Hammer Defence Belt in Suburbs

London, Nov. 7 — (AP) — Red Army troops battled strongly-reinforced Nazi forces in the outskirts of Budapest today, spurred by Marshal Stalin's pronouncement that Hungary would soon be out of the war.

In an order of the day issued on this 27th anniversary of the Soviet Revolution, Stalin declared the Red Army and its western Allies "have taken up the jumping-off positions for the decisive offensive against the vital centres of Germany" and that "we now stand on the eve of complete victory."

Russian columns were fighting within two miles south of the big enemy-operated Ferihegy airdrome in Budapest's outskirts, apparently seeking to coil around the eastern part of the city.

In a proclamation preceding the order of the day, Stalin asserted the defeat of Hungary would signify the "complete isolation of Hitlerite Germany, and early catastrophe will follow inevitably."

The regular midnight Soviet communique broadcast from Moscow contained only two sentences: — "There were no essential changes on the fronts. During Nov. 5 our troops on all fronts disabled or destroyed 16 tanks."

In a dawn-to-dusk attack yesterday Soviet bombers hammered the enemy's defence belt and communications at the rear of the Hungarian capital. Budapest reports coming via Turkey said there was no intention of declaring the city on the Danube an open one.

Berlin broadcasts declared conditions inside Budapest were turbulent, with refugees fleeing from the city in increasing numbers "seriously hampering" military traffic in the streets and on roads to the northwest.

The Paris radio reported this morning that Hungarian workers had gone on strike in Budapest and occupied the Manfred Weiss armament works.

The Rome radio said it had heard a free Hungarian broadcast calling for a general strike.

Unconfirmed French and Turkish radio reports asserted that the Russians had smashed into the southern side of Budapest, and that members of Nazi-supported Prime Minister Pereno Szalasi's government had fled.

The final odds showed strength for the New York Governor who early today was still quoted at 3 to 1. Odds on the President previously were 5 to 17.

UNITED STATES VOTERS TROOPING TO POLLS TODAY

President Roosevelt and Governor Dewey Make Last-Minute Appeal

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 7 — (CP)—United States voters trooped to the polls today in the first wartime election since 1864 to choose between prolonging the 12-year-old Democrat-Roosevelt regime or the establishment of a Republican administration headed by Thomas E. Dewey, 42-year-old governor of New York.

That was the major choice facing the electors since the two leaders are virtually in accord on the major issues of war and organization for peace.

But the voters had the memory of eight weeks of vigorous campaigning in which proponents of both major parties resorted to all the stratagems of partisan debate to win their favor.

Few United States election campaigns have been filled with so much ridicule and vituperation as the one now concluded and if the burden of it was on the Republican side it was natural since it is the third straight election in which they have attempted to defeat the precedent-smashing Roosevelt regime.

GEN. MCNAUGHTON EXPRESSES VIEW AT LEGION RALLY

Reiterates in Montreal Address His Belief In Voluntary Service For Armed Forces

Ottawa, Nov. 7 —(CP)— Defence Minister McNaughton last night appeared before his "old comrades" of the Ottawa Command of the Canadian Legion, reiterated his belief in voluntary service in the overseas army, heard their noisy protests and smiled his appreciation as they closed the evening by giving him three cheers and a tiger.

The veterans, hundreds strong, made the exhibit cases in the Victoria Museum halls rock with their applause—and their shouts of "no!" when they did not agree with parts of his speech.

Wearing a legion badge which had just been presented to him following his election 18 months ago as a life member, the former commander of the Canadian Army Overseas announced:-

That only the voluntary service method would provide the necessary reinforcements in time;

That the fit home defence army men must be taken from civilian jobs and "trained as soldiers," freed of abuse to which they have been subject and encouraged "to accept the honorable obligation of service overseas;"

That he was confident "new conditions and new background" would mean the problem would disappear, for the home defence men would be given "a new deal;"

Polish Troops Take Important Hill Features

Rome, Nov. 7 — (CP) — Polish troops of the British 8th Army operating south of Forli near the Adriatic Coast, have captured several important hill features and taken the villages of San Martino and Marsignano after stiff fighting, an Allied communique said today.

Along other sectors of the Allied front in Italy only patrol activity was reported.

Among hills captured by the Poles were Monte Maggiore and Monte Tosta.

On the Adriatic sector in the San Stefano region six miles south of Ravenna the Germans attempted to infiltrate Allied positions after dark but were driven back. Canadian forces have been operating in this sector.

Eighth army troops south of the Forli air field were under machine-gun and tank attack and an Allied-held lateral road east of the field was under machine-gun fire.

On the 5th Army front south of Bologna the Germans maintained heavy, harassing fire on Highway 68.

Two Villages in N.E.I. Fired by Japs, Populations Virtually Wiped Out

San Francisco, Nov. 7 —(AP)— Emulating the Germans at Lidice, Japanese have wiped out at least two villages of the Netherlands East Indies with virtually their entire populations, headquarters of Netherlands forces in the Far East announced today.

A village near Medan, on Sumatra, was soaked with kerosene and petrol and burned to the ground. Any inhabitants who tried to escape were shot with machine guns. A village on Java was set afire by incendiary bombs, and machine guns also were turned on those trying to flee.

Other atrocities were described in a document, "Japanese Atrocities in Occupied Netherlands Indies."

Some people were forced to drink soapy water until they were bloated, and then soldiers jumped on their stomachs until the water spouted from their mouths. Prisoners of war were suspended by their feet and their heads were bumped on the ground. Others were forced to stand with their heads thrown back and their eyes opened to the blazing sun.

Javanese women who resisted the advances of Japanese soldiers, the document related, were bayonetted through the breasts.

"The brutality practised by the enemy . . . has been so appalling this headquarters is making public a few of the instances but by no means the most severe," the document said.

The names of the destroyed villages were not published but the document said the one on Sumatra was wiped out because it was the home of a newspaper writer who criticized the Japanese in an article.

"The Java village refused to give up its rice crop after two harvests had been seized. The citizens were so enraged they killed a policeman sent to arrest a man accused of being the ringleader of the "opposition"

Five Prisoners Make Daring Escape From County Jail Following Attack on Officials

Jailer Samain and Deputy Urch Severely Beaten in Brutal Assault—Knives and Cudgels Used in Attack—Youngest Of Group Gives Self Up

Armed with knives, wooden cudgels and a heavy iron bar, five inmates of the Hastings County Jail here made a daring and effective escape during the evening lock-up period early Monday evening. In effecting their escape the armed prisoners attacked Jail Governor J. E. Samain and Deputy Turnkey Herb Urch, both of whom were beaten into a semi-conscious condition as the result of attacks by the quintette of jail-breakers.

Both jail officials had to be removed to the Belleville General Hospital for observation and treatment, but despite their severe wounds and lacerations both were present in their official capacity at the Court House today although noticeably suffering from painful bruises and lacerations.

The escapees were all Toronto youths, four of whom had been convicted of serious crimes, while the fifth was awaiting trial today. They are Bert Hawkins, 18, Martin Green, 20, David Quigley, 17, Norman Bell, 17, and Floyd Andrews 16. Hawkins and Quigley were serving a one year term for car theft, while Andrews and Bell were completing a two months sentence after being convicted of robbing a farm house near Oak Hills. Green, who was charged with Hawkins and Quigley, had pleaded not guilty to the theft of a motor car belonging to Harry Moorman, of this city, and was to have appeared in police court today.

Officials of the Provincial Secretary's office ordered to the scene said they were investigating a warning given local jail authorities by a Toronto detective that a break was contemplated as early as last Friday.

A sister of one of the fugitives was arrested on a charge of car theft at Trenton with two other youths. The girl is 16 years old. In the back seat of the car were found hack-saw blades, files and a roll of clothes-line wire, police said.

The girl is said to have admitted she was en route "to get her brother and a boy friend out of the coop."

One is Captured

Early today the youngest of the quintette, Floyd Andrews, walked into the Round Spot restaurant on East Dundas St. where he asked to be directed to the police station. Andrews was immediately recognized by Roy LaRue, cafe cook, who met the youth at the county jail last week and knew he must have escaped. LaRue escorted Andrews to the police station where he was given over to Sergts. Arnott and Ellis.

According to Andrews' story he was bodily thrown from the east bound C. N. R. midnight passenger train out of Belleville by his associates after he had become remorseful regarding his actions. After being pushed off the train Andrews slept in an empty railway coach in the Belleville C. N. R. yards leaving there early today to walk south to highway No. 2 and Dundas St. where he was recognized by LaRue.

Andrews also stated the quintette had originally intended to return to their Toronto homes for revengeful purposes against an unnamed man who they claimed had approached indecently Hawkins' sister. However, when they did manage to catch an express train it was heading eastward so they decided to go to Kingston before attacking Andrews. He was both cold and hungry when turned over to police.

Occurred in Lock-up Period

It was during the usual procedure of confining the prisoners to their cells at the customary locking up time shortly after seven o'clock Monday evening, that Jailer Samain and Deputy Turnkey Urch entered the main downstairs corridor where Hawkins approached Samain seeking his ration of tobacco. "I turned and procured the tobacco, when Hawkins muttered something about it not being sufficient. Then Bell asked me for his quota of tobacco and I proceeded to procure it when suddenly Hawkins attacked me from the rear," Mr. Samain told the Ontario Intelligencer. In the meantime Mr. Urch was in the act of unlocking the main cell block. Just as Hawkins attempted to strike Mr. Samain down, Quigley raced out the open corridor door wielding an 18-inch butcher knife, with which he threatened Urch. Both jail officials were in death grips with their assailants when Green and Bell charged out of the cell block armed with a smaller knife and a seven-inch metal bar weighing some three pounds. The original weapon used by Hawkins to attack Mr. Samain is believed to have been a handmade wooden cudgel or billy with a hooked nail on the side. Bell carried a small knife and Quigley the iron bar.

Fight Against Odds

Fighting frantically against large odds both Urch and Samain had beaten off their assailants, when Andrews it is said moved from the jail kitchen. In some manner Jailer Samain, now bleeding badly from a deep gash in the right temple and a badly lacerated ear, managed to escape and ran to the east side entrance where he let himself out to raise the alarm by shouting to Mrs. Samain, jail governess, who notified police by telephone. Mr. Samain immediately returned to the jail to assist Mr. Urch, but the five youths had successfully escaped by procuring the key of the main prison door and leaving Urch in a semi-conscious condition raced out of the Court House from the rear Church St. door from where they were seen running east on Queen St. after crossing the Belleville Collegiate campus.

Later Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn and Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan arrived on the scene along with Turnkey Archie Winters, who was absent at the time as it was his day off from official duties. Dr. G. S. Cronk and Dr. R. F. Ross attended the injured officials at the Court House and later ordered them removed to hospital for closer observation.

Took Advantage of Knowledge

"The knives used came from the kitchen where young Andrews had been placed as cook, having but 29 more days to serve on a two months sentence. Apparently the men knew it was Turnkey Winters' day off and took advantage of the situation," stated Jailer Samain to the Ontario Intelligencer.

'Someone must have smuggled the large jail butcher and paring knives from the kitchen to the No. 1 cell block prior to the period of locking up time. Where the wooden cudgel and iron bar came from we do not know," stated Sheriff O'Flynn today.

"There is little I can say except, when I was hit from behind a general fight ensued during which all Herb (Mr. Urch) and I had to defend ourselves with were our fists, while we were being attacked from all sides by weapons. How we escaped with our lives will always remain a mystery," added Jailer Samain.

"There's little I can add to the story, except to say it all happened so fast all I could do was strike back in defence. Blows seemed to be coming from all directions, but we know one thing, they didn't get out without a fight," remarked Mr. Urch, who sustained two black and swollen eyes, as well as several deep head lacerations.

Immediately the alarm was raised Provincial Police joined in the province-wide search for the jail-breakers. All City police ogranized into posses and searched the city districts, while O. P. P. officers were summoned from the district to help in the search under Sergeant Hartlieb.

Fiendish Attack.

"It was the most fiendish and brutal attack I ever heard of. It was a wonder both Samain and Urch weren't killed by those escapees," remarked Sheriff O'Flynn today after seeing the injured men.

HARD FIGHTING AHEAD, WARNING GIVEN BY RALSTON

No Reference Is Made To Cabinet Crisis—Home Front Must Not Relax

Montreal, Nov. 7.—(CP)—Col. J. L. Ralston, in his first public speech since he resigned as Defence Minister, today described his recent battlefront tour and said "the problems of supply and reinforcements . . . . have been extremely difficult", but ignored the cabinet crisis, which saw him succeeded by Gen. McNaughton.

He did not elaborate on his reference to reinforcements, the subject which precipitated the Cabinet crisis.

In a speech prepared for delivery at a luncheon of the Rotary Club of which he is a member, Col. Ralston paid tribute to Canadian fighting men, spoke of their hopes and aspirations, pictured his visit to the graves of fallen warriors and described the fighting.

Price of Victory.

It was a Remembrance Day meeting and taking this as his theme, Col. Ralston spoke of ground hard won and victory paid for in casualties

Speaking of the difficulties facing the troops overseas, Col. Ralston said miracles had been worked. "In England I saw men in hospital who had been wounded only two days before on the Leopold Canal".

He had talked to the wounded.

"Don't try to tell those men who were in hospital that the Boche is licked. They have had experience. They know that he fights harder and more stubbornly than ever. That is why they are in hospital, in a plaster, cast or with a face burned to a crisp or with a leg or an arm—or both missing.

"Don't talk to these men about the war being over. They know that there is bitter fighting ahead".

At another point he referred to the fighting in Italy and said: "It has taken five weeks since I was there to advance the line 18 miles."

Terrific Challenge to Home Front

He had visited the graves of men who had fallen in this war, "The men who lived and fought — the men who fought and died—in order that the world might know the job of peace, and our own land grow in strength of heart and mind and hand and purpose, for the sake of all the children of men. That's what these men believed in. To us comes the terrific challenge to make that belief come true."

The small sacrifices being endured on the home front were nothing.

The battlefront and home front were interdependent and would continue so when the war was over "They must keep each other constantly in their minds and hearts"

Home to the soldier meant "something tangible, invisible, and as far as they can make it so, indestructible. It means a spirit — it means a way of life, the way of life their pioneer ancestors toiled for and established . . . To preserve it, our boys have gone to war. They realize they have a job to do and they want to do it quickly and get back.

Those on the home front must answer by not relaxing until the job was done.

German Casualties Are 2,044,090 In Last 6 Months, Reports State

New York, Nov. 7. (AP)—Germany has suffered at least 2,044,090 including 34,000 dead, 56,000 prisonficial statements from the eastern, western and southern fronts disclosed today. Actual enemy losses may be a great deal higher.

Official Allied sources listed these German casualties between May and November:

Russia	790,000
Western Front	1,060,090
Italy	194,000
Total	2,044,090

Premier Stalin announced last night that 790,000 Germans were killed or captured in the summer offensive in White Russia and in "the Battle of the South". He made no estimate of German wounded and it was not clear whether the 790,000 included , all sectors of the 1,800 mile Russian front

In September, the Soviet Information Bureau announced that 1,185,476 enemy troops had been killed or captured between June 22 and Aug. 31, and 10 weeks of severe fighting have elapsed since then.

Marshal Stalin said in an address last night that 120 German divisions had been smashed during the summer, an indicated enemy loss of 1,200,000 men.

Official but incomplete figures of various armies in France, the Low Countries and Western Germany listed 660,090 prisoners last night. Prime Minister Churchill said on Sept. 28 that 400,000 more Germans had been killed or wounded, and six weeks of fighting have taken place since that last authoritative estimate.

Gen. Alexander, ground commander in Italy, said last week that the Germans suffered 194,000 casualties in Italy since May 11, including 34,000 dead, 56,000 prisoners and 104,000 wounded.

With the 1st Canadian Army, Nov. 7 —(CP Cable)— Using boats and amphibious vehicles to cross stretches of water surrounding the town, British troops of the Canadian army today moved into Middelburg in the central part of inundated Walcheren Island in the Schelde estuary.

The attack practically involved an assault landing over the flooded fields.

British infantry who made the initial crossing to Walcheren from Breskens to Vlissingen (Flushing) were the first into Middelburg. They found the city in utter turmoil.

The town was packed with civilians who had fled Vlissingen and had come in from the western sections of Walcheren when R. A. F. heavy bombers burst the coastal dike at Westkapelle to flood miles of farmland.

The Germans also were milling around Middelburg in confusion, and the streets were jammed by civilians, German and British troops who were trying to bring some order out of the madness.

There were skirmishes in the flooded streets, but Germans everywhere in the town were giving up. Between 1,000 and 1,500 prisoners were taken.

Conditions Obscure

However the picture of exactly what is going on in Middelburg still is not altogether clear.

Major fighting for the town, however, seems over.

British troops also captured Veere on Walcheren's northeast coast. The only Germans still making a determined stand on the island are in a small area on the northern fringe.

On the Waal Rhine front American and Polish troops of the Canadian Army were fighting for the town of Moerdike, and had entered its outskirts but the town had not fallen yet.

Grounded German parachutists were making a stand in the Willemstad area.

Except for this last resistance, the battle for southwest Holland is ended.

At Dunkirk Canadian Army forces started another large-scale raid against the German garrison still holding out in that channel port far to the rear of forward battle-lines, and took 196 prisoners.

The air force had a good day yesterday, flying 501 sorties, most of them against enemy rail facilities. Rails were cut in 21 places and five probable other points.

Superfortresses Over Tokyo And Kanto Sector

San Francisco, Nov. 7 — (AP) — American Superfortress planes were over Tokyo and the heavily industrialized Kanto area today for the third time within a week, the Tokyo radio reported. No bombs were dropped.

The same broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said 40 more of the big bombers on Sunday raided Iwo in the Volcano islands, 750 miles south of Tokyo.

The radio said two of them flew over the main Japanese Honshu island's Kanto region for an hour "for reconnaissance purposes."

Japanese propagandists warned the Superfortresses would return in force to bomb Tokyo and other sections of the Kanto area which roughly covers the eastern half of Honshu.

American sources have not confirmed any of the three reported reconnaissance flights.

4TH BELLEVILLE PACK WINS BOTTLE CONTEST

The Fourth Belleville Pack has completed a week-long competition to raise much-needed medicine bottles for the Mountain View air station. As dozens of shining bottles poured in and were counted, the boys' excitement became more and more acute. Finally, at the week's end, the Black Six (under Sixer Bobby Gibson) were declared the winners by the Cubmaster who admitted that these boys had won by a hair.

The final count was 1,800 bottles collected, washed and ready for delivery—bottles urgently needed by our airmen. The Cubs thank the citizens of Belleville for their help in this, their latest piece of war work.

In company with six or seven other members of his party Mr. Smith had spent the day in the woods in the vicinity of Hardwood Lake, 40 miles northeast of Bancroft, when at the close of the day a gun in the hands of one of the party discharged as it was being unloaded. The bullet passed completely through Mr. Smith's finger but fortunately failed to touch any other part of his body. Given first aid at the office of Dr. O. W. Anderson at Bancroft, the injured man was brought to Belleville where Dr. Cronk amputated the finger. Mr. Smith is expected to leave the hospital today.

'V' Flag Presented To Employees Of Bata Shoe Co.

Celebrating 150 per cent oversubscription of their objective toward the Seventh Victory Loan, employees of the Bata Shoe Company had their "V" flag officially presented to them on Monday noon in a ceremony marked with a touch of solemnity.

Congratulated upon subscribing approximately $120,000 toward the Victory Loan, employees had their "V" flag presented by Colonel R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, M. C., E. D., recently returned from overseas, while as part of the program an honor roll bearing the names of approximately 200 former factory workers was unveiled. Mrs. Ferne Spencer of Foxboro unveiled the honor roll which was dedicated by Flight Lieut. Alex Nimmo, chaplain at Trenton Air Station.

As guest speaker for the occasion Col. Hicks-Lyne of Peterborough, told of the damage done in the London area by the German robot bombs and of the defences which had been raised to meet the threat. He stated that of the 8,000 robot bombs launched by the Germans, only approximately 2,300 had gotten through to the London area. Concluding his address he officially presented the "V" flag to two company employees, Miss Ruth Latchford, and Bruce Wilson.

Before dedicating the company honor roll Flt.-Lieut. Nimmo congratulated employees on attaining 150 per cent of their objective to the Victory Loan and pointed out the necessity of Canadians on the home front supplying the materials of war that the war may soon be brought to a victorious conclusion. In a jocular vein he intimated the wish of the Canadian girls that the boys overseas may be brought home "soon, safe and single."

Station band at No. 6 R. D. under the baton of Sgt. J. Gault provided entertainment prior to the ceremony with one of its buglers Cpl. Jim Pilgrim sounding the Last Post and Revellie as part of the dedication ceremony.

Jail Inmate Commended For Raising Alarm

"This boy is to be commended. I do not mean for getting intoxicated, but rather for his alert action in raising the alarm after last night's serious attack on two jail officials when five men broke jail here," said Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson, when Fred Nevery, 16, of this city, appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in city police court here today.

According to Mr. Robertson young Nevery ran out of the jail and assisted in raising the alarm by notifying Mrs. A. Winters, wife of Turnkey Winters.

"It was a very honorable act and I would suggest the court impose a term of the time Nevery has been on remand," added Mr. Robertson after learning Nevery had been on remand for five days.

"Very good," replied Magistrate Lloyd. "Ten dollars fine and in default five days in jail" Nevery walked out a free young man, but not before Deputy Chief Harman warned the lad regarding the company he was keeping.

AB. Walt. Turner Returns Home On Brief Furlough

Youthful veteran of the icy sea-lanes of the Murmansk route and other submarine-infested waters of the North Atlantic, twenty-one-year-old Able Seaman Walter Turner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Turner, 85 Grier Street, arrived home yesterday on a brief furlough.

For the past year, the young sailor has served on some of the most exciting "runs" engaged in by the Navy. He has seen plenty of service since he joined up some time ago.

He is a member of another of Belleville's fighting families, having three brothers serving in the armed forces, and a sister who is doing nursing work with a government department.

A brother, Douglas, is a gunner in the Navy and has also seen plenty of excitement.

Another brother Eddy, is with a field battery, somewhere in Belgium; Max is an artificer with the Ordnance Corps in England, and Leonard is a sergeant at home with the Argyll Light Infantry. His sister is Mrs. Marion Stacey, Reg. N.

Father of this family of service people Mr. Sam Turner is a veteran of the last great war. Mrs. Turner is the newly-elected president of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch.

FIVE PRISONERS

Early this morning Inspector Wm. Lougheed, of the Criminal Investigation Department of the Provincial Police, Toronto, arrived to take up the investigation looking into the escape. He conferred at length with Crown Attorney B C. Donnan K.C., and assisted Chief Probert in further details.

"The break was perfectly scheduled by the men, who watched the prison procedure and learned it was Turnkey Winter's day off. Then also three of them were to have been removed to the Ontario Reformatory to commence prison terms there today. They were desperate last night when they made their break", added Mr. Donnan.

Police Cordon Set.

Police throughout Eastern Ontario continued the search for the four remaining escapees today, the search reaching over the Quebec boundary after it was learned from Andrews that the men were headed east by train. Early today Provincial Police here were informed four youths were seen near Port Hope where a diligent search was also set up.

Reviewing the attack of last night, Jail Governor Samain today informed the Ontario Intelligencer that Bell and Hawkins had demanded the jail key during their early threats upon the lives of the officials.

"I told them I had no key and at that Bell pushed the small paring knife at my throat. It was then I had to fight for my life and managed to escape to raise the alarm," explained Mr. Samain.

It is now believed that the break had been planned for more than a week. Last week Hawkins' sister, Margery, also of Toronto, and a companion by the name of Harry Tilley, Toronto, were apprehended in Trenton in possession of a stolen car from Toronto. In the car at the time was found 100 feet of steel cable, three new hacksaws and other articles suitable to a jail breaking procedure. A third man in this car at the time escaped Trenton police. The Hawkins girl and Tilley were confined in the jail here on remand at the time of last night's break.

POLICE COURT

Michael P. Donaghue, 314 Pinnacle Street pleaded guilty to two traffic charges before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today and paid $77.00 including fines and costs.

Donaghue admitted to a charge of dangerous driving and also to that of leaving the scene of an accident. The charges arose out of a motor accident, that occurred at the intersection of Front and Bridge Streets early Saturday evening when Donaghue's car swerved into the side of a second parked vehicle, P.C. Boherty told the court today Donaghue was later arrested at his home, where he was found in bed while fully clothed.

Remanded a Week.

Samuel Guthrie and Garnett Guthrie, both of Toronto, appeared in the same court charged with the theft of bicycles. No evidence was presented today as the pair were remanded in custody for one week at the request of Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson.

Several violators of the city parking by-law in the downtown area paid fines prior to the opening of court for their infractions.

PLACES FLOWERS ON HERO'S GRAVE

As Canadian soldiers and civilians look on, a little Belgian girl stoops to place a bouquet of flowers on the flag-decked grave of a Canadian soldier who fell in the heavy fighting on the Dutch, Belgian border.

Capt. Fred Lazier, Hasty Pips, Called 'Bravest Man I Have Ever Met' by Sergeant of Company

In the flaming vortex of a swirling street battle fought out with machine guns, bazookas, rifles and grenades against the thunderous background of artillery, Canadian stretcher bearers shook hands with a German medical officer of a Nazi paratroop outfit and wished him well.

In the hail of bullets and shell and mortar fragments that roared across the narrow steets of the village of St. Maria, Italy, Captain Fred Lazier, Charlotte Street, Belleville, afterwards called "the bravest man I have ever met" by his sergeant Gordon Clark, Fort William, and his gallant men of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment fought it out with the enemy.

His company claims the distinction of being the first unit to penetrate the Hitler line.

As the advance platoon reached the outskirts of the town two Germans on patrol, appeared. The Canucks shouted to them to surrender but they ducked and sought shelter. The Canadians took shelter in a large house and company headquarters was established in an adjacent dug-out.

Laid Siege to Company.

The Germans, under the protection of darkness returned in considerable strength and laid siege to the little band of Canucks. They yelled "English soldiers, surrender." The Hasty Pips replied with a hail of lead. Sergt Y. Gordon, of Prince Edward County ran headlong into a Nazi, when he came around a house corner. The Nazi hurled a hand grenade. It was a near miss.

The building was riddled with bazooka fire. In the adjoining house armor piercing shells crashed through doorways, ricocheted on walls. The Germans fell back. Expecting tank support, the Canucks advanced in pursuit and were met with a murderous fire. Both sides suffered heavily. Canadians and Germans worked together attending the wounded. They stood casually at each stretcher looking at each other while a deadly fire swept them.

Short of Dressings.

The victims were so numerous the Canadians found themselves short of shell dressings. The German medical officer offered aid and made several trips to the Canadian position. Owing to the number of fractured bones he offered to move the cases to his own field dressing station to set splints, suggesting the Canadian ambulances should then pick them up and return to their own lines. The Canadians were outspoken in their admiration of this Nazi doctor who forgot hates in the maelstrom of suffering.

That evening flanking companies from the regiment drove the Nazis from their positions in the village.

Loan Requires $430,000,000 To Obtain Quota

Ottawa, Nov. 7 — (CP)—Canada's Seventh Victory Loan total neared the $1,000,000,000 mark today in the third and final week of the campaign which has an objective of $1,300,000,000. Yesterday's purchases of $72,558,900 gave a cumulative total of $974,454,900.

An analysis of results to date shows that with 72 per cent of the canvassing time elapsed only 66 per cent of the Sixth loan total—$1,400,000,000—has been raised.

Individuals yesterday purchased $32,414,000 in bonds bringing their total to $329,732,400, which is approximately 88 per cent of the individual purchases in the previous loan.

Intensive Canvass

"The figures indicate a need for an intensive canvass in the final few days," a loan official said. "There are always delayed sales reported. These increase the total which we announced immediately after the official close of the loan. We must be reasonably close to the Sixth Victory Loan totals by the end of the week if we are going to make this loan the largest in Canada's history. Purchases in the final four days of the campaign must total $430,000,000 to reach last loan's total and of this $303,000,000 must come from individuals."

Out of a quota of $8,500,000 Canadian Pacific Railway employees numbering 37,645 had subscribed $8,338,100, according to the latest figures from C.P.R. officials. Thus, with about 7,000 employees yet to subscribe, less than $200,000 remain for the company's Seventh Loan to go over the top.

Happiest Girl.

Happiest person in the nation's capital today is 15-year-old Joan Carroll, who made a special trip from her home in Montreal to admire Ingrid Bergman from a distance. Here, however, was the Alice-in-Wonderland experience of being invited to the star's hotel room, meeting and talking with her. Today she's walking on air, clutching a picture of herself with Miss Bergman, who came to Ottawa for a victory Loan show.

The armed forces were within sight of the $47,853,300 they raised in the sixth campaign and were expected to exceed that mark today. All three services over-subscribed their quotas last week.

The Army still was in the lead with $24,236,800 for 115 per cent. The Navy had $5,375,850 for 111 and the R.C.A.F. reported approximately $18,500,000 for 110 per cent.

The latest list of large subscriptions included: Prudential Insurance Co., of America, through its Montreal office, $15,000,000; N. M. Paterson and Co., Ltd., Fort William, $625,000.

The Canadian National System announced its employees had subscribed $9,748,050, an increase of $620,000 over their final total in the last campaign, in the first 12 days of this loan.

In the first two weeks, 381 Ontario plants topped their objectives compared with 393 at the same stage of the sixth loan. The town of Milverton was the first municipality in Perth County to reach its objective—$2,000. Now it is aiming at $106,000.

McNaughton Sends Message to Armed Forces Overseas

Ottawa, Nov. 7 —(CP)— Defence Minister McNaughton last night told a Canadian Legion meeting he was sending to the men of the Canadian army overseas, which he once led as commander, a message pledging that "we will maintain our just part in the great Allied effort to bring the enemy to final defeat."

Text of the message follows:

Through all the long months since I had to leave you I have followed your progress with the deepest interest. Your performance on the field of battle has been magnificent and all at home in Canada have thrilled with pride in your gallantry and your mastery of arms.

In a steady succession of hard-fought actions, in Italy and Northwest Europe, you have driven the enemy before you in disorder and you have played your full part in bringing victory nearer.

Your great successes have given the deepest satisfaction and from my heart I congratulate you all.

Now, I have been called again to a position of responsibility in your affairs. It is my concern to see to it that you will have the support you need; and we will maintain our just part in the great Allied effort to bring the enemy to final defeat. It is my concern to watch over your every interest now; and when peace shall again be established.

Then, we will enter a new and changing era of great promise for Canada and my concern and duty will be to ensure that you who have borne the heavy burden in the heat of battle shall have fair play.

6 ENEMY SHIPS SUNK OR DAMAGED NEAR MANILA

Nearly 200 Jap Aircraft Wiped Out in Same Action on Sunday

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 7 — (AP) — American veteran troops, already four miles south of Carigara Bay, continued an unchecked advance today through Japanese mountain defences on the twisting highway toward Ormoc — 16 miles distant— and the finale of the Leyte island campaign.

Well-equipped Japanese reinforcements were somewhere along the shell-raked highway through Ormoc valley, waiting perhaps to launch a final attack which is expected to produce some of the campaign's fiercest battling.

While these fresh troops waited, infantrymen of the original Japanese garrison swarmed from strong hill positions in three suicide charges against the American perimeter 4 miles from the coast. All were repulsed bloodily, without denting the American lines.

The southern end of the Ormoc trap presumably also was closing tighter, although a communique made no mention of troops last reported some 12 miles south of the port.

Six enemy warships were caught near Manila and sunk or damaged Sunday (Philippine time) by aircraft of the U. S. 3rd Fleet, it was announced from Pearl Harbor.

The raid raised to at least 66 the total of enemy warships sunk or damaged since Gen. MacArthur landed Oct. 20 in the central Philippines.

The carrier planes sank a subchaser, probably sank a heavy cruiser, damaged a light cruiser and 3 destroyers and wiped out nearly 200 enemy aircraft in day and night attacks.

Germans Lost 100,000 Tons Shipping In Aegean Sea Operations

Allied Mediterranean Headquarters, Nov. 7. (CP-Reuter) — The Germans lost more than 100,000 tons of shipping in the battle for control of the Aegean Sea which the Allies have won.

An official statement on the operations said that what little remained of the German Navy in that area was so weak and demoralized that the Allied navies moved in the Aegean today with the same freedom with which they patrolled the whole Mediterranean.

A year ago it was estimated that the German effective tonnage in major shipping in these waters was more than 110,000 tons.

The statement added that thousands of Germans on the Aegean Islands are now cut off following the German withdrawal from Greece.

PTE. W. F. HEASMAN PRISONER OF WAR

Private William F. Heasman, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Heasman, R. R. 4 Stirling, who was reported missing in enemy action on August 27, 1944, is now a prisoner of war in a German camp, his parents have been officially notified.

Pte. Heasman, who recently celebrated his 20th birthday is in Camp Stalag 7, Germany, according to a cablegram received by the Director of Records, Ottawa, and forwarded to Mr. and Mrs. Heasman.

He joined the Canadian Armored Corps, Kingston, in April 1943 and trained in Canada until December of the same year when he was sent overseas. The following February he went to Italy where he served with the 48th Highlanders of Toronto until the time of his being taken prisoner.

Besides his parents he has one sister at home.

NO WORD RECEIVED OF IDENTIFICATION

Ottawa, Nov. 7 —(CP)— R.C.A.F. headquarters said last night no word had been received that identification has been made of the skeletons of four crewmen found last Thursday in the wreckage of a plane near Dartmouth, N.S.

As soon as the skeletons are identified word will be sent immediately to the R.C.A.F. casualty branch here which then will notify next-of-kin.

(Eastern Air Command announced in Halifax Sunday night that the wreckage was identified as that of a plane that disappeared last Feb. 14.)

Letter From Eire

By J. H. MURDOCH
Canadian Press Correspondent

Dublin, Nov. 7 —(CP)— Eire will play its full share in the development civil aviation after the war and might easily be the "mighty atom" of the International Civil Aviation Conference now meeting in Chicago.

Eire holds a key position in the most important aviation artery in the world. Government technicians and advisers are keeping pace with the times and Eire commands one of the best air ports in Europe — the land and sea base near the mouth of the river shannon.

No effort or money has been spared by the government to equip this aport with everything necessary to cater for the biggest imaginable trans-Atlantic aircraft. Full use has been made of the airport's ideal surroundings.

The Shannon airport is roughly 140 miles from Dublin which has a magnificent, first-class airdrome in its suburbs.

There is a distinct possibility that when commercial aviation is in full swing in a few years' time the Shannon airport may become the Southampton of Europe. It may be the big clearing house for North Atlantic aviation with first class shuttle services operating to all parts of Europe.

Eire government delegates at Chicago are Sean Leydon, Secretary to the Ministry of Supplies, J. J. Hearne, Eire High Commissionr in Canada, J. Brennan, Eire Minister in Washington, and T. J. O'Driscoll, a government aviation expert.

Money sent home to their families in Eire by Irish workers in Britain reached the record total of £10,950,000 in 10443. These figures have been issued by the Eire Ministry for Indutry and Commerce.

One outstanding effect of this great influx of money is that it is helping to create inflation. The price of all commodities has increased enormously and the cost of living in Eire is 70 per cent above what it was in 1939.

Report Hun Withdrawal Across Moselle River

London, Nov. 7. (CP-Reuter)— A Berlin military spokesman quoted by the German Transocean Agency said the Germans have withdrawn across the Moselle.

"North of Thionville on the Moselle fierce local fighting developed with advanced German fighting posts, which were ordered to disengage to the eastern bank of the Moselle", the Agency said.

The German garrison at Dunkerque has smashed "strong" Allied attacks against the eastern sector of the fortress, today's German High Command communique claimed.

HAD GOOD SEAT

Leyte, Philippines, Nov. 7 (AP)— Pte. William Nykaza of Chicago was high in a palm tree stringing telephone wire when the Japanese counter-attacked. He stayed aloft while the Japs took the position— and while Americans took it back. Said Nykaza, 'I had 50-yd-line seat.'

MORE PRISONERS-OF-WAR MAIL

Ottawa, Nov. 7, (CP)—Mail being sent to prisoners-of-war in Europe has increased 16 per cent compared with last year, the Wartime Information Board reported today. In September, 1943, 27,878 letters were sent to German prison camps while in the some month of 1944, 32,302 pieces of mail were cleared. The total in October this year was 31,572.

TRAIN WASHED IN 22 MINUTES

Chicago, Nov. 7 (AP)—Chicago and North Western Railroad company's fleet of streamliners are getting streamlined scrubs. Since installation of a portable mechanical car washer, an 18-car train is washed in about 22 minutes. The device, in the form of a steel arch, is lined with a series of revolving brushes which, with the help of a fine spray of water, scrub the train as it passes through.

Large Danish Ferry Escapes to Sweden

Stockholm, Nov. 7 (AP)—A huge Danish ferry essential to the Germans in traffic between the Islands of Seeland and Fyn escaped today to the Swedish port of Halsingborg instead of going to Helsingoer, a Danish port just across the channel between Denmark and Sweden, for repairs as has been scheduled.

The ferry carries 1,500 passengers.

The United States Office of War Information reported in New York that the Swedish radio in a broadcast said five Danish patriots had taken the ferry to Sweden after overwhelming its unarmed captain, officers and 27 crew members and escaping from a German minesweeper which had been escorting it to the repair yard.

FRENCH CABINET GRANTS AMNESTY

Paris, Nov. 7 (AP)—The French Cabinet today granted amnesty to Communist Leader Maurice Thorez. He may return to Paris now from Moscow to take his place as a member of the Consultative, Assembly.

The decision culminated a year of agitation by the Communists for the government to quash desertion charges arising from Thorez's flight from the country during the Daladier Government's Communist roundup in 1939. At that time Thorez was a member of the French Army.

Japan Called Typical Aggressor By Premier Stalin

London, Nov. 7 —(CP)— Japan, along with Germany, was named by Premier-Marshal Stalin as a typical aggressor last night when he urged creation of a special post-war organization of peace-loving nations empowered to act immediately to avert or suppress aggression.

Stalin pointed out that peace-loving nations always are ill prepared for war, while aggressive nations usually are better prepared.

He added: "Such unpleasant facts as the Pearl Harbor incident and the loss of the Philippines and other islands in the Pacific and the loss of Hong Kong and Singapore, cannot be treated as mere coincidence. Japan as an aggressor nation, was better prepared for war than Great Britain and the United States, who were pursuing a policy of peace."

Canada's Navy . . . guardian of a vital chain

JUST as the steady flow of Canadian and American-made war matériel to Britain was indispensable to the successful invasion of the continent, so final Victory depends on the maintenance of this stream of supplies from America to Europe, from factory to firing line.

The protection of these convoys is the specialized job of Canada's Navy. History will record the magnificent manner in which it has been performed

Indeed, in protecting convoy after convoy, Canada has forged another essential link between these two great comrades-in-arms, John Bull and Uncle Sam. And when tomorrow brings us Victory and Peace, surely Canada, of all nations, is best situated to further the continuation of goodwill between the British Commonwealth and the United States which is so necessary for a lasting World Peace.

In our hearts is the same concept of freedom!

CANADIANS, Americans and Englishmen share the same concept of freedom . . . share, too, one of the earliest defenders of freedom. He was a Calvert, a famous English statesman, Secretary of State to King James I.

In 1622 Calvert founded a colony in Newfoundland and, later, a colony in Maryland. Thus, over 300 years ago Calvert forged a link which has strengthened throughout the years . . . joining together the British Commonwealth and the United States.

In the new settlements the principle of self-government was inaugurated and religious toleration was fully enforced. Thus, in the early 1600's, a Calvert established in the New World many of the freedoms we are fighting for today.

Stalin On Victory and Peace

Marshal Stalin made one of his most striking addresses on Monday, marking the 27th anniversary of the Russian revolution. It told a story of the approaching collapse of Germany and gave figures of the German strength and reported that more than a third of the German strength had been eliminated on the eastern front, the Germans losing 1,200,000 men in the past year before the Russians and having slightly over two millions to man the entire front from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

The address gave unstinted praise to the British and Americans and the Western Allies for the part they had performed in making it possible to drive out the Huns from Russian soil and it also pointed to the aid that Russia had given by holding so many German divisions to the eastern front.

Fighting is on German territory. The task is to continue to hold the Germans between two fronts and that is the key to victory, the Russian chief declared.

The Russian reasserted that there is undoubtedly victory ahead for the Allies and that the great need is to make new wars impossible. "The only way is to create a special organization of the United Nations to preserve peace and security, give it armed forces and make it responsible to apply them immediately to avert or suppress aggression." That would be unlike the old "League of Nations which was without resources or powers. This organization will be a new armed organization which will be effective if the great powers that have borne the brunt of the present war continue to work unanimously and in concord—and only so." He made it clear that the alliance of Russia, Britain and the United States is vital for all, and it will be stronger at the close of the present struggle.

Marshal Stalin told of plans of the firm front of the United Nations for a secure peace and said that the amazing thing is not that there are differences but how small they are and how well they can be solved peacefully and pointed to the fact that there were differences about the second front but they were finally solved in a spirit of complete harmony. He referred to the conference at Dumbarton Oaks as a proof that peaceful solution is possible.

The Russian Marshal showed that his mind is not only dealing with the problem of defeating Germany but also with the problem of a peace that cannot be broken.

As to the immediate outlook he spoke of Germany as "on the verge of catastrophe." Joseph Stalin is a very practical man and he pointed out how Russian people's efforts had made it possible for Russia to be well supplied with food because "of the support of our entire country." His references to the peace to follow were on the question of security.

The Russian leader expressed appreciation of the harmony and the fruits it had brought in the successes of this year as a result of the invasion of France.

A Great Soldier

Britain has lost a great soldier in the death of Sir John Dill at Washington. He has been spoken of as the greatest British general since John Churchill who became the first Duke of Marlborough, one of the ancestors of Prime Minister Winston Churchill. He was known as a master strategist and he attended all the international conferences at which war policy was decided. He had been head of the British joint mission at Washington.

Sir John Dill was a Belfast Irishman and so he lived up to the reputation of so many Irishmen who have advanced far in the service of their country in time of war. He had served in France early in this war and became chief of the imperial staff in 1940.

General Marshall of the United States paid a high tribute to the British Field Marshal giving him credit for no small share of the breadth of vision and devotion bringing the war on so close to its end.

It is to be regretted that he did not survive to see the full fruitation of the service he had rendered Britain and the rest of the United Uations in the victory over Germany and Japan.

Shelling Corn

(New York Times)

There are, of course, worse jobs than shelling corn. Cleaning the hen house, for example, has just about the lowest possible priority rating in a teen-ager's list. But at the turn of the century, when northeastern farmers still raised fields of dent and flint instead of driving to the feed store for a load of grain, shelling corn was one of those jobs that had to be done.

Some farmers had small gasoline engines to furnish power. On most farms the boys furnished the power. Turning the crank on the sheller was a good deal like turning the grindstone. It took an unconscious amount of turning to get the desired results.

The first hour wasn't too bad. Likely enough it was a gray, stormy, late-autumn day. Shelling corn was clean compared to cleaning the hen house, and more active than oiling the heavy work harnesses. For a while it was rather fun to see the husked ears with their symmetrical lines of kernels go into the gears, and to watch the battered metal basket slowly fill with the nuggets of grain. If Father hadn't put the day's stint so high a fellow could get by. But by and by, turning the crank became a monotonous, tiring chore.

That's when a lad began to think seriously of Grandfather's stories. In his day they ground corn and cob together, and a treadmill powered by a steady horse furnished the energy.

Grandfather always claimed that corn and cob meal meant sleek cattle. He didn't hold with modern ideas. A good treadmill and horsepower seemed a mighty logical method. Some of the boys who turned the clanging, crunching gears years ago may possibly have read recently that a college expert on cattle nutrition says that corn and cob meal is excellent food. Shelling corn for the grain bin and the kitchen wood box had one remarkable similarity, they were hard to keep filled.

Traveller

The champion traveller of the bird world is probably the Arctic tern, a small, white, gull-like bird, says The London Express.

Metal bands have been attached to the legs of nestlings in Labrador and the grown birds recaptured a few months later at the mouth of the Niger River in West Africa and in Natal on the Indian Ocean coast of Sout hAfrica—nearly 9,000 miles from Labrador.

And the Arctic tern is found in the Antarctic during the winter. It is well known as a seasonal migrant up and down the western seaboard of both Europe and Africa.

From this it has been inferred that this species migrates from Arctic America across the North Atlantic to Europe, thence down the coast past Africa to the Antarctic Ocean, and back up the same route the following spring—a distance, in all, of about 24,000 miles, or almost equivalent to the total circumference of the earth.

A War of Position

(New York Times)

For the moment, therefore, the war in the West has again assumed the character of the war of position that characterized the greater part of the last war. It will be slow and grueling work, in which progress will no longer be measured by a day's auto ride, but in terms of yards. But it is work that must and will be done. According to some estimates, the Germans have no more than 450,000 troops in the entire West, while Mr. Churchill put the Allied armies in France at between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 men. Only a part of these can be put into the front line at any moment; but in the end, numbers which permit a steady flow of fresh reserves will tell against an enemy all of whose troops are engaged in battle all the time.

He that is habituated to deceptions and artificialities in trifles, will try in vain to be true in matters of importance; for truth is a thing of habit, rather than of will. You cannot in any given case by any sudden and single effort will to be true if the habit of your life has been insincere.—Frederick W. Robertson.

It is strange but true; for truth is always strange, stranger than fiction.—Byron.

ELECTION DAY

The polls are open! Once again
With God and conscience free men stand
Alone where eyes may pry in vain,
And none may threaten or command.

This day for us with life was bought.
For all it means our fathers died;
And battles still are being fought
'Gainst those who want this day denied.

The polls are open! Brave men die
This day of days to guarantee;
And who dares pass his ballot by
Fails all who fight to keep him free.

Belleville has tuned in on Puerto Rico over the radio. About a dozen persons heard a broadcast from Puerto Rico on Monday evening received over an Atwater Kent radio set which is installed in the Lewis Hardware Store on Front Street. When a reporter called this afternoon at the Lewis Hardware Store Mr. William Doyle told of the program coming in very plainly. "We often tune in on Los Angeles, California, and Havannah, Cuba, with this set", he said, "and "Father Killeen tuned in with a station in England using the same make of radio". Mr. Doyle has not yet personally "got" England. The music was plainly heard in the store through the loud speaker.

BLACK AND WHITE

Although white is popularly regarded as a distinct color, and for all practical purposes it is, technically it is not a color, but a combination of all colors.

Colors are produced by the difference in the length of light waves. We see the longer waves as red, those a little shorter as orange, those still a little shorter as yellow, and so on. The shortest light waves visible appear to the eye as violet. A red object is one that absorbs all the light waves except the red ones; they are reflected back to the eye and produce the color called red.

An orange-colored object is one that absorbs all the light waves except the orange ones; they are reflected back to the eye and produce the color called orange, etc., etc.

White consists of light waves of all lengths—of all or nearly all the light waves mixed together. A white object is one that reflects all or nearly all the light waves.

Although black is popularly regarded as a distinct color, and, like white, for all practical purposes, it is technically it is not a color, but the absence of color. A black object is one that absorbs all or nearly all the light waves.

The seven most conspicuous colors of the spectrum—red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet—used to be called the primary colors. Now that term is often applied to red, green and violet, out of which all colors are produced. An artist, however, is likely to regard red, yellow and blue as the primary colors.

With the spectroscope more than a million colors, hues and shades can be distinguished.

An ordinary person with normal vision can distinguish 150 or more, while an expertly trained eye can distinguish more than 100,000.

Unabridged English dictionaries list some 3,400 words for colors, hues and shades.

A normal baby generally recognizes colors in the following order: yellow, red, white, gray and black.

It has been determined that red, green and blue lights are the most readily distinguished by the average person.

Fire Fighters Thanked for Aid

By FRANK LOWE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 7 — (CP Cable) — The corps of Canadian firefighters, 400 strong, who came voluntarily in 1942 to fight blitz-created blazes in Britain, paraded for the last time Monday to hear an official farewell from a Britain, that was thankful for their aid. Shortly the firefighters are due to sail for Canada.

Led by a 15-piece band, the members of the Canadian Corps marched through the heart of London, smart in blue uniforms with red "Canada" flashes on their shoulders and as militarily correct as guardsmen on parade, to be reviewed by the heads of the fighting services and Home Security Minister Morrison. Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioned, also was present and made the official farewell speech.

The top-ranking officer at the review was Admiral Sir Edward Evans, "Evans of th broke."

Leading the Canadians on the parade was Gordon Huff, M. M., former Fire Chief at Brantford, Ont., and noe head of the corps.

Mr. Massey told the men: "Nowhere has the Civil Defence of Britain been more admired than in Canada. You have played a very fine part in that work. Now your work has come to an end . . . You have done a grand job. I want to thank you for all you have done."

HYGIENE OF THE CHILD WITH ENLARGED TONSILS

The child with enlarged tonsils and/or adenoids seems to have more frequent cri ("colds" to the uneducated). Dr. Kaiser (Children's Tonsils In and Out, Lippincott, '32) found that 4,400 children between four and seven years of age with enlarged tonsils in the schools in Rochester, N.Y., had slightly more "cold" in the course of the year than the same children had in the same period after removal of their tonsils. But Dr. Kaiser adds this pertinent observation:

"After ten years of age, the incidence of colds in the children whose tonsils and adenoids were not removed" (2,200 children with enlarged tonsils) "declined with even greater rapidity than in the children of similar ages" (2,200 children with enlarged tonsils) "whose tonsils and adenoids had been removed.."

Dr. Kaiser's actual statistics must have far greater weight than any off-hand theories of estimates advanced by doctors who have not made any comparable study of the question. Here I simply say that Dr. Kaiser's figures are real and the conclusions he draws from them are therefore significant. Yet it seems to me that he fell into the error which has long characterized the profession. As Dr. Kaiser sums up the examination of "The Common Cold: Relation to Tonsils and Adenoids:-

"Until the etiological factor" (our $10 term for cause, folks) "is positively known, the control of the common cold in children will be concerned chiefly with environmental conditions, and the avoidance of such irritating causes" (sic!) "as chilling, wet feet, wet clothing and draughts."

Now until I came upon that weird specimen of medical hokum I had included Dr. Kaiser's book in the 22 1-2 inch shelf of medical books I had bought in the past twenty years that proved worth the money. Now, regretfully, I shall file it away up on the top shelf among the curiosa. What's the use? Until the hypothetical cause of the nonentative "common cold" is positively known—which of course is talking through your hat—the old guard will continue making such utterances, and as long as the laity accepts this ponderous hokum distribution of the common respiratory infections will continue to provide three-fourths of the everyday illness doctors attend.

I ask you, who is going to worry about conversational, cough or sneeze spray when "such irritating causes as chilling, wet feet, wet clothing and daughts" will explain everything?

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Anyway There are L. P. and O.D.B.

At the age of 9 (I'm now 28) I took off my long winter underwear in mid-winter and began wearing light, comfortable underwear—the same as I have worn the year around ever since. We children often sat in school with feet and clothes wet, but that didn't do us any harm either, at least we have all grown up remarkably free from respiratory troubles and the like.

(L.P.)

Answer—That makes two of us who don't believe ordinary everyday "exposure" to cold, dampness, drafts, sudden change, etc., does no harm. In the booklet "Call it Cri" —mailed on request if you inclose twenty-five cents and stamped envelope bearing your address—I present with restraint, I hope, the facts concerning the respiratory infections as opposed to the folklore and hokum. I advise not only how to deal with the cri when you have it in the home but how to avoid spreading the infection to other members of the family, to fellow workers, playmates and the general public. That is a feature about which the public health experts who periodically hand out rules—such as "beware of chilling" and "keep your feet dry" and other almanac humor—are generally silent, or if they refer to it at all they put on the soft pedal.

Reducing Candy My Eye

How can I get a copy of your pamphlet "How to Lose Weight"? Do you recommend—— reducing candy? Does laughing make one gain weight?

(Mrs. W. G.)

Answer—Send stamped envelope—standard size, not a toy envelope—bearing your address, for the pamphlet "How to Lose Weight"—and do not use clipping. Of course no candy, sugar, sweet or substitute for sugar reduces. Ordinary sugar or candy or sweet of any kind has precisely the same value, either as regards reducing or supplying quick energy, as any fancy nostrum, trick sugar or special candy can have. Laugh and grow fat? No, ma'am—in fact, when you feel a laugh coming on, it is better to give it full expression, as you would or should a sneeze.

GEN. McNAUGHTON

Arrangements For Leave.

That arrangements are being made to grant leave to men of "very long service overseas" and he hoped some of them will be home for Christmas.

That "fair play" will be given the men overseas who feel the 70,000 men in the home defence army are a danger to their prospects of remunerative employment after demobilization. The overseas men would have fair play in this regard even if it meant delaying the demobilization of draftees who did not volunteer for overseas service.

The issue of reinforcements for overseas remained a prime subject of discussion in Ottawa during the day, as it has for six days since the resignation of Hon. J. L. Ralston as Minister of National Defence following differences of opinion within the cabinet on conscription for overseas.

Other Developments.

Other developments were:-

1. The Dominion Council of the Canadian Legion asked for conscription for overseas.

2. Col. Ralston said he had been pressed for an explanation of his resignation, but felt responsibility for informing the public belonged primarily to Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

3. The Prime Minister's office announced that he will make a broadcast on Wednesday and it was expected he would deal with reinforcements.

Just before Gen. McNaughton addressed the Ottawa Command of the Canadian Legion it passed by a standing vote a motion accepting the Dominion council's call for conscription for overseas.

The new Defence Minister was warmly welcomed. His audience heard him in silence as he bespoke his appreciation for the work of the legion and other veterans' organizations.

He then reviewed the progress of the Allied armies in Europe. To pass the fortified German lines, the Allies must turn to practice of siege warfare of the most intense character and above all else there must be guns and shells "in lavish quantities." He appealed to all women who could do so to assist the production of shells and contribute to the saving of soldiers' lives.

Then he went on to repeat several paragraphs of a speech he made at Arnprior, Ont., yesterday in which he said the question of adequate reinforcements for overseas units must be answered promptly.

Two Methods Open.

" 'Two methods of solution are open, either of which we might take,' he quoted.

" 'One is to continue the voluntary system for service overseas. The other is to resort to compulsion.' "

At the word "compulsion" the audience applauded loudly.

"Absolutely! Absolutely!" said one shouting veteran, as the chairman, J. B. Halpenny, called for order.

Gen. McNaughton said there had been honest differences of opinion as to the respective merits of the two systems, and members of the audience called: "take the right one."

The Minister said he was convinced the best hope lay in the "maintenance of our long traditions of voluntary service."

"Not a bit!" "Political expediency!" were among the shouted comments on this remark.

"What about the poor fellows over there four years?" asked one interrupter.

Gen. McNaughton said figures of reinforcements now available showed Canada could count on some short period yet before there was danger of the situation becoming acute.

"How long! How long!" interrupters called.

The Minister continued that he was confident that now the need is known "our men and women will come forward to serve."

"The women will," one veteran called.

Gen. McNaughton said he hoped the public of Canada would give the men overseas every support and encouragement.

Did Not Agree.

"Will you?" several men shouted.

"What about Mackenzie King? Get the boy scouts."

"I earnestly plead with you — you who are veterans in past wars who know—to accept the assurance that I give that there is no other way to correct this situation to be in time to be of use," said Gen. McNaughton.

"No! No!" came the reply from interrupters.

The Minister discussed the civilian jobs undertaken by some of the men in the home defence army. He did not think such work, while of national importance, should be done by soldiers to the prejudice of their proceeding overseas.

"I find that many of these men have been able to obtain remuneration on a scale which is quite fantastic and I do not wonder that those who seek their personal advantage and who have their chance to make large sums in cash would fail to come forward to volunteer for service overseas," he continued.

Cheers came when he said he had issued instructions that no more men are to be supplied for civilian jobs and that any men now out who are fit for military duty are to be recalled as soon as possible.

"What will Mackenzie King think of that?" a veteran called.

The interests of the men overseas would be protected in respect to jobs.

Gen. McNaughton closed his address by quoting a message he had sent to all ranks of the Canadian Army Overseas, stating it was his concern to "see that you will have the support you need; and we will maintain our just part in the great Allied effort to bring the enemy to final defeat."

Faces Many Questions.

The Minister then faced questions.

Th first was whether the voluntary service policy he set forth was popular in the eight English-speaking provinces.

"I have never been one who rested the decision on great matters on the question of popularity," Gen. McNaughton replied.

"Hear! Hear!" the audience cried.

In the fall of 1939 he had resigned himself to not seeing service in the field, Gen. McNaughton said. But he had been called to duty.

He recalled that after the First Great War he had been told by Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, Canadian Corps Commander, to study the basis of forces of the future. Since that time he had never ceased to study these problems.

Based on Advice of 1939.

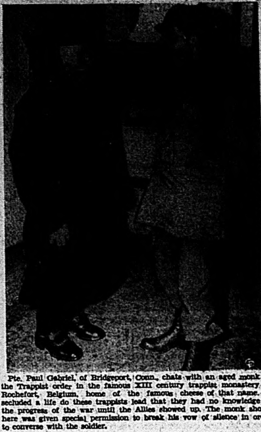
He had been what voluntary effort could do and if it had not been for voluntary effort there would not have been an army worthy of the name. He thought of the years when everything that was done to maintain any army was condemned and "we were driven underground so we did not know what to do to have something to oppose an enemy."

He said he knew what a voluntary effort could do. Popularity had nothing to do with his attitude; his decision rested on the merit of the case. The organization of the army had been based on advice he gave the government in 1939.

The meeting applauded loudly when the Minister made his vigorous replies and continued to assure the audience that he did not object to the inquiries.

The meeting over, a long line of veterans, many of them men who had served with him, waited to shake hands with the minister.

MEN OF PEACE AND WAR



Pte. Paul Gabriel, of Bridgeport, Conn., chats with an aged monk of the Trappist order in the famous XIII century trappist monastery at Rochefort, Belgium, home of the famous cheese of that name. So secluded a life do these trappists lead that they had no knowledge of the progress of the war until the Allies showed up. The monk shown here was given special permission to break his vow of silence in order to converse with the soldier.

MORE THAN 660,000 HUN PRISONERS SINCE D-DAY

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Paris, Nov. 7 — (AP) — Seven Allied armies have seized more than 660,000 German prisoners since D-Day, a recapitulation showed last night.

WILL FORM BRANCH

London, Ont., Nov. 7 — (CP) — Rehabilitated student war veterans at the University of Western Ontario yesterday completed arrangements for the formation of a branch of the Canadian Legion at the University. C. E. Johnson of London was named president.

UNITED STATES

Last night President Roosevelt made an election-eve radio talk from his Hyde Park, N.Y., home where he said he and his family were thinking about "our own sons—all of them far away from home—and of our neighbors' sons and of the sons of our friends."

(The President's four sons are all in the United States armed forces.)

He said the men overseas were thinking about the election and depending upon the people at home to retain the same system and kind of government for which they were fighting.

President Heard

The President said he was not making a partisan speech because that part of the campaign ended Saturday. He appealed to his listeners to get out and vote for their choice so that the decision would be a true Democratic expression of the people's will.

Gov. Dewey also made a last-minute radio speech to the nation and again he used the argument of Saturday night in his speech here in Madison Square Garden, that administration incompetence had delayed the conquest of Germany.

The Republican candidate said today's election might prove "the most fateful in our history." and discussed the argument that the government should not be changed at this critical moment in the country's history.

To argue that a change of administration should not be made in time of crisis was "the opposite of a free system of government," Gov. Dewey said.

Eastern polls opened at six o'clock and the far western polls will not be closed until 17 hours later eastern time.

But even then the result may be in doubt if the voting is close because upwards of 3,000,000 overseas votes may be in the hands of various state secretaries and in some states the time of receiving these votes extends into December.

However, the pollsters indicate a fourth term for Roosevelt is possible by such a decisive vote that the result will be independent of the overseas balloting.

In that event the decision may be made known before midnight.

Jewish Terrorists Kill Lord Moyne

Cairo, Nov. 7 — (AP) — Jewish terrorists assassinated Lord Moyne, British resident minister in the Middle East, yesterday, officials said today.

(Prime Minister Winston Churchill said in London that he had no official information giving a clue as to the motives for the assassination, or fixing its authorship. He added Lord Moyne had devoted himself this year to a solution of the zionist problem, and that the Jews in Palestine "had rarely lost a better or more well informed friend.")

King Farouk visited the hospital before Lord Moyne died. Funeral arrangements have not been completed but a state funeral probably will be held. Lord Moyne was 64.

Lord Moyne was shot down as he alighted from his residence here and died in an army hospital. His chauffeur was killed instantly.

London, Nov. 7 —(CP) Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today "very searching inquiries" would be made into the assassination yesterday of Lord Moyne, British Minister resident at Cairo.

Parliament and the country, Mr. Churchill said, had suffered a "very heavy loss" in the death of Lord Moyne.

Mr. Churchill said Lord Moyne had devoted himself this year to a solution of the Zionist problem, and declared the Jews in Palestine "had rarely lost a better or more well-informed friend."

Following Mr. Churchill's remarks, Lord Strabolgi, president of a newly-formed league to promote Dominion status for Palestine, said in an interview: "It is far more probable to my mind that Lord Moyne was murdered by Nazi agents."

Meanwhile, A. Abrahams said in a statement on behalf of the London Jews: "The new Zionist organization emphatically condemns this act of terrorism which has been reported as committed by Jews and is resolved to do all in its power to bring Jewish youths back to the realization that only the employment of political instruments of discussion, negotiation and public enlightenment can the legitimate Jewish claim of Jewish statehood be attained."

HEARS SON AWARDED D. C. M.

Chatham, Nov. 7 — (CP) — Mrs. Emma King of nearby Cedar Springs, said last night she was informed today that her son, Sgt. H. B. Kirkland, has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal for initiative, gallantry and spirited leadership in taking over a company of the Essex Scottish Regiment and clearing at least two machine-gun posts with bayonets at Tournehu last Aug. 13 after his two officers and 30 men of the 90 in the company had been wounded or killed.

"LOST BATTALION" RELIEVED

Somewhere in France, Nov. 7—(AP)—A "lost battalion" of the 7th Army, cut off by the Germans for a week in the St. Die area, was relieved by Japanese-American troops who fought brilliantly in Italy, it was disclosed yesterday. One 48-man patrol of the battalion came back with only six men after its seven days of isolation.

Earl of Strathmore, Father of Queen, Dies in Scotland

London, Nov. 7 (CP)—The Earl of Strathmore, 89, father of Queen Elizabeth, died at 6 a.m. today at Glamis Castle, his home in Forfarshire, Scotland.

Lord Strathmore had been ill for about a month. His condition took a serious turn last weekend and he was reported dangerously ill last night.

Although he had been in failing health for some time the critical turn in his condition came unexpectedly. News of his death was conveyed to the Queen early today.

The 14th Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne, whose daughter, Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon became the first commoner Queen of England since Henry VIII married Katharine Parr in the 16th century, was of a retiring nature, and had preferred living amid the heath-clad Scottish hills to court life in London.

"We have never aspired to court circles," he said in 1923 when his daughter married the then Duke of York. He described the match as "a marriage of love" between "an angelic girl" and "a fine fellow and a clean Englishman."

Succeeded Title in 1904.

Sir Claude George Bowes-Lyon succeeded to the title of Lord Strathmore in 1904. He came of a family which long had played a major part in Scotland's history, tracing his descent from the Lady of Glamis, a daughter of Robert II of Scotland.

His ancestral home, Glamis Castle also had survived much stormy Scottish history. Although the present building dates largely from the 17th century, much of the medieval stronghold, where—it is related in the chronicles upon which Shakespeare based his play—Macbeth murdered Duncan and seized his throne, still stands.

The Earl was said to have been happiest clad in rough, country tweeds, overseeing work on his 24,700-acre estate.

He had served for a time as a lieutenant in the 2nd Life Guards and afterwards honorary colonel of the 4th and 5th Battalions (Territorial) of the Black Watch.

For 32 years he was a Lord-Lieutenant of Angus, and held the Order of Knight of the Thistle.

He was the only commoner holding knighthood in the Orders of the Garter and the Bath.

In 1882 he married Nina Cavendish-Bentinck, a member of the family of the Duke of Portland. She predeceased him some years ago.

Lord Strathmore's death brought the second bereavement to the Royal family in less than a fortnight. The court was due Thursday to go out of mourning for the death of Princess Beatrice, great-aunt of King George and last surviving child of Queen Victoria.

Wife Preservers

Hand applicators used to apply floor wax should be washed immediately after each use. Warm, soapy water will remove the wax, then rinse the applicator and hang to dry. By doing this you will have a clean, fluffy applicator for each use, and the life of the article will be considerably lengthened.

Chronic Acne Hard to Cure

Janet Blair has a smooth, beautiful skin.

By HELEN FOLLETT

MEDICAL MEN who treat diseases of the skin say very frankly that chronic acne is a stubborn trouble. They suggest that treatment be sought in the early stages, when the first pustules appear, which is often at the age of 14. Health measures are important.

Blackheads are the forerunners of pimples. Sebaceous glands are over active, their exudations harden in the pores, forming wax-like masses, the tips of which attract atmospheric dust. These barricades break the walls of the pores, bacteria invades the premises, pus forms.

Home Treatment

Home treatment consists of giving the face a thorough washing at bedtime, frictioning in a rich, thick suds with the finger tips, rinsing, drying gently then applying steaming hot fomentations. Use a heavy wash cloth for this purpose, pressing it close to the flesh and repeating six or seven times. Dry gently, apply a lotion made by dissolving a teaspoonful of ordinary baking soda in half a cup of water. Let it dry on. Avoid the use of oily cosmetics.

Regard for the diet is essential. Many doctors put a taboo on chocolate in any form for some reason or other. All demand that the patients cut down on pastries and fried foods.

Large blackheads should be pressed out with a comedone extractor, a small, steel instrument with an open circle that can be placed over the black point so the surrounding flesh will not be broken.

The daily bath with warm soap suds and a heavy brush helps the skin all over the body to function as an organ of elimination and has a favorable effect upon the complexion.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Brooks, Hay Bay, Observe Their Diamond Anniversary

Hay Bay —(Special)— On Sunday, Oct. 29th., Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Brooks of Hay Bay observed their 60th wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks are staunch Conservatives in politics and Anglican in religion.

Mr. Brooks who is 85 years past is not in good health but very cheerful and bright despite all this. Mrs. Brooks, who is ten years younger, does all her own household duties. They have farmed at their home over 50 years and have two grandchildren who help them at present.

There were eleven children living who were all present for the occasion. At noon 37 guests sat down to a bountiful dinner, the table being decorated with a huge wedding cake. The oldest son, Irvine, proposed the toast and Mr. Brooks replied in very fitting words.

In the afternoon the family was visited by Rev. Secker of the Anglican Church, Adolphustown, who led in singing of the hymn "Blest Be The Tie That Binds," then closed in prayer. Miss Clara Lloyd, Point Anne, a granddaughter, read an address, Norman Brooks, a grandson recently returned from Italy, presented Mr. and Mrs. Brooks with two occasional chairs and a bouquet of chrysanthemums on behalf of himself and the family.

The children are, Irvine and William of Adolphustown, George of Sharps' Corners, Edward of Napanee, Percy of Deseronto, Aubrey of Demorestville, Arthur and Mrs. Furse of Hay Bay, Mrs. Dudgeon of Selby, Mrs. Lloyd of Point Anne and Mrs. Wickett, 35 Parker St., Belleville.

They received many cards of congratulations and all wish them many more years of health and happiness.

French A.T.S. in Action

By

2ND LIEUTENANT ANNE SAINSBURY

A Member of the Volontaires Francaises (the Fighting French Equivalent of the Auxiliary Territorial Service)

(BBC Press Service)

Lieutenant Sainsbury's story is one of the most exciting that has yet come out of France. She is a skilled nurse who formed part of an "Esquippe" or team who were among the first to assist with the work among the refugees in Normandy, in liaison with the American Army.

The team consisted of four women, one welfare worker, one nurse, one secretary and one caterer. These teams were under the command of a French colonel, whose job was to enter French towns the moment they were liberated, and set up the machinery of civilian rehabilitation known as Civil Affairs.

With the wheels of the administration set in motion once more and the welfare of the population assured the team went on to the next liberated town hot on the heels of the soldiers.

The work was fairly static until the break through at Avranches. Then the front moved so quickly that we could scarcely keep up with it. We went into Brittany where the welcome was even more delirious than in Normandy. As soon as we appeared in little towns the people collected in the squares, and after Colonel Chandon had addressed them they broke into the Marseillaise—often in eight different keys—wild with delight. We moved fast, and news came through that St. Malo was free. We set off immediately, for we knew St. Malo had been badly bombed, and that there would be a great deal of work to be done. We hadn't gone far before we ran straight into a German sentry on the road. He challenged us and we stopped. Despite the fact that we had the Cross of Lorraine on the car, and the colonel and ourselves were in French uniform, he asked for our papers. We produced them, written in English, and he let us through.

We can only imagine that he knew there was a big German Headquarters just ahead, and that they would know what to do with us better than he did.

Actually we turned down the first side road, and dashed back to safely occupied territory. We realized then that many towns had been bypassed in the speed of the advance and that isolated groups of Germans remained far into liberated territory. Thus, when orders came to proceed to Brest, we took precautions to follow the road liberated by the American armoured units.

We drove merrily along. Our hearts were high, and we sang as we drove. Lieutenant Cromie, in charge of our team, was at the wheel. I was beside her with the colonel whilst in the back were our caterer and a girl of the Resistance who had helped us as a guide.

Suddenly, about 30 kilometres from Brest, we passed a group of soldiers in grey on the side of the road. Thinking that these soldiers must be isolated stragglers, we hastily agreed to go on unless challenged, in which case we would promptly stop. The next thing we knew we were surrounded by Germans.

There is one thing German soldiers know how to do, and that is drink up all the wine in a town when they are leaving. This group were all pretty drunk, and without a word of challenge a soldier threw a hand grenade into the car. It burst with a tremendous explosion and Cromie stood on the brake. Then everyone opened up at us, with rifles, revolvers and tommy guns—a storm of firing that seemed to last for minutes. I managed to shout in German loud enough, and eventually the firing ceased. In the car all four of us women were badly wounded—but the colonel was dead. I saw that at once. I can only explain the fact that we were not all killed by the drunkenness and inaccurate aim of the soldiers.

Cromie had a wound in the back of the head, and was pouring with blood. I was wounded in several places in the shoulder, and a big piece of shrapnel had struck me in the region of the lung. I can never describe to you the force with which it seemed to hit. Our catering officer had two bullets in the lung, and the Resistance girl was badly wounded too.

I got out of the car and tried to explain that we were French welfare workers, but the mob of soldiers, when they saw women—French women, and in uniform, fell upon us and almost tore us to pieces. Their hatred and fear of French women was fantastic. They had so learned to fear the women of the F.F.I.

They took Cromie and I to their headquarters. There we were questioned by officers of one of the crack German divisions. I must say in contrast the the mongrel collection on to road—of conscripted Russians and Poles and Mongols of all sorts—they were magnificently smart. Saluting went on every second—like automatons they seemed to have hidden springs in their bodies. But no springs of human kindness, for no one would have anything to do with us. We were simply left to bleed for three and a half hours.

Cromie's head was in a terrible mess. I tried to bathe it with my tie, and finally I got some water from a little Red Cross assistant, and all the time my own wounds hurt more and more. At last, mainly I think, because we were making such a mess of their floor with our bleeding, they let the little Red Cross assistant, who said nothing but had a sympathetic air, take us off to the Hospice which had been taken over by the Germans. The name of the town was Carhaix. A young French doctor was in charge of the Hospice—with no water and no light. He made a bungled attempt to dress our wounds, and put me on the operating table to try and probe for the sharpnel near my lung. The operating table had handcuffs chained to it, and these were clapped on my wrists, and I was tied down. There was a shortage of anaesthetics, hence the handcuffs.

The night the Germans evacuated the town and came to fetch us. I might say that there was tremendous excitement about us everywhere. Women were regarded as a great prize, and the German soldiers had never seen women in uniform before. But I was on the operating table, and the others were still under anaesthetic and morphia and so they were obliged to abandon the idea of taking us with them. Mercifully they left us, and we listened all night to the noise of the soldiers leaving. Never have I heard anything like it—shouting and bellowing they sounded like a troop of wild animals. But in the morning they were gone.

Cromie dressed, and slipped out early to go and look for the colonel's body. She found our car had gone, and all our equipment with it. There was no sign of his body, but after searching for some time, she found him hidden under some straw in an open barn. His decorations had been torn off, and his badges and insignia removed. The shoulder flash with "France" had been cut out and taken away.

Cromie walked to a farm nearby, and the farmer accompanied her with a cart(there were no horses or farm carts, the Germans had taken them away, piled high with loot). Then he helped her to take the colonel's body to the Hospice, where the nuns prepared him for burial. The brave little town of Carhaix later gave him a magnificent funeral. Despite the fact that the Germans might come back, as they often did, and burn the houses where the Stars and Stripes and the flag of France hung from the windows, the entire town turned out.

Eight French families, relatives of eight youths who had been hung for reprisals, stood in front. Then came the coffin, surrounded by members of the Resistance, and a battalion of the F.F.I. marched behind, followed by the entire population of the town.

But we were getting steadily worse in our Hospice, so Cromie got a girl of the Resistance to go and try and get help for us, and wrote a message to our headquarters. The girl found a motor cyclist of the F.F.I.—a man who had been dropped by parachute in France, and who had trained in England. He went back to the American front, and intercepted an American ambulance. He persuaded it to make the long and dangerous detour to come and fetch us, and we were picked up and taken on a long journey.

The agony of that drive I shall never forget, but at last Cromie and I (we had to leave the other two as they were too bad to move) arrived at the American hospital near Avranches, and I was given morphia at last.

All that night as we lay in hospital we were strafed and dive-bombed because the Leclerc Division was quartered beside us, awaiting their break through and the wonderful dash to Paris.

Next day we were sorted out into the lot which were to be flown back to England, and taken down to the beachhead.

Here an American surgeon examined us, and found that we were not a pretty sight. The rather dirty cotton wool which the young French surgeon had pushed down my lung wound after he had probed unsuccessfully for the shrapnel, was pulled out, and it was properly dressed and cleaned. Cromie had her hair shaved, and a beautiful dressing like a skull cap fitted to the back of her head. Then we were put into an air ambulance and flown back to hospital in North Wales, where I have been until recently.

A LETTER FROM THE CHIEF*

BILL: Boy, that's what I call a letter!

JOE: From your girl?

BILL: Nope—from the President of my company. He tells me there's a job waiting for me and all the rest of the 2,200 Bell employees who joined up. Not only that—he says it looks right now as though they'll have to take on still more staff if they're to handle their post-war program.

They're giving credit for war service, too, when it comes to position and pay when we get back.

JOE: Pretty good outfit to work for, eh, Bill?

BILL: They're O.K.! Looks as if they have lots of work lined up—and that I'll be really needed...Think I'll write Marj about it right now.

*Bill is referring to a paragraph in a recent letter from our President to 2,200 Bell employees on war service, which read:—

"... I imagine you are more concerned with what conditions will be in the company when you return. Already we have done our best to look ahead and plan for the post-war period ... Our present estimates indicate that we will need to retain all our employees now on the force; that there will be a job for you and all other Bell employees who return from active service, and that it will be necessary for us to hire a number of new employees."

See Winter Operations On Scale As Great As Those of Summer

Ottawa, Nov. 7 — (CP) — The winter war in Europe is expected to see Allied operations on a scale as great as those of the summer and consequently little decline in casualties may be expected, Ottawa observers said today.

Discussing the continued need of army reinforcements, they said the Allies were pressing for a swift conclusion of the war and there was no tendency to be content with "digging in" for the winter.

Defence Minister McNaughton, speaking at Arnprior, Ont., yesterday, made clear the need of continued pressure on the enemy, when he said that the Germans must not be allowed time to organise his forces underground for sabotage and murder, to complete "new weapons and devices of vast power to use against us."

It seems possible, however, that after Canadian military operations on the Scheldt are completed the troops will be withdrawn for a rest and reorganization. Another factor to be considered is winter weather conditions which in the past have had a tendency to bog down operations and this has reflected in light casualty lists.

Government officials would give no figures of Canadian reinforcements overseas for security reasons, but estimates have ranged from 60,000 upwards.

At home there are some 70,000 men in the home defence army who have not volunteered for overseas service. It has been estimated from 10,000 to 35,000 are fit for overseas. In his Arnprior speech, the first public address since he became Minister of National Defence, Gen. McNaughton said he favored continuance of the voluntary system of enlistment in Canada, and indicated he opposed conscripting home defence troops for overseas.

When the appointment of Gen. McNaughton was announced last week, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said that the government would await whatever action was recommended by the new minister. This indicated that the status and duties of the home defence force will remain unchanged for the present.

DR. ALEXIS CARREL DIES

Paris, Nov. 6 —(AP)— Dr. Alexis Carrel, 71, surgeon and biologist who won international fame for his medical findings, and invention of a mechanical heart in research with Charles A. Lindbergh, died early Sunday.

His Paris office said Dr. Carrel, Nobel prize winner and author of the widely published "Man the Unknown," had been ill with a heart ailment for some months.

Two months ago Mrs. Carrel denied published reports, attributed to French Government agencies, that Dr. Carrel had been suspended from his post as director of the Carrel Foundation for the Study of Human Problems, and said he was at home, seriously ill. J. M. Boucher, director of the cabinet for the Prefect of Police, had declared the Carrel Foundation was established with Vichy Government funds in 1941.

From 1906 to 1939, Dr. Carrel was a staff member of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research in New York.

Would Deprive Huns Of Potential Supremacy

Washington, Nov. 6 —(AP)— Liberated European countries feel that the price of peace is "a settlement that deprives Germany of its potential economic and military supremacy" in Europe, the Foreign Policy Association said yesterday.

This viewpoint was reflected in a study made by Mrs. Winifred N. Hadsel, of the Association's research staff.

"Anything less, in their opinion, will merely invite a repetition of the events of 1938-44 in an even more disastrous form, particularly for those nations which are unfortunate enough to be Germany's neighbors," she wrote.

Izvestia Article Hotly Assailed

Washington, Nov. 6 —(AP)— Mrs. Eleanor Medill Patterson, owner-publisher of the Washington Times-Herlad, yesterday termed "crazy" a political article carried by the Soviet Government newspaper Izvestia.

The Izvestia article, which said there was a rumor that republican interests were plotting a fake assassination attempt against Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to sway voters in Tuesday's election, also said that suppor fottlftl mrh support of the Hearst, McCormick, Patterson and Gannett newspapers "betrayed Dewey."

Mrs. Patterson commented:

"This crazy story, as quoted by The Associated Press, makes the close alliance between our present administration and that of Mr. Stalin and the Communist Party clearer than ever."

(Gov. Dewey, reached in Albany, had no comment to make on the Russian newspaper"s story. President Roosevelt was in seclusion at his Hyde Park home."

In Rochester, N. Y., Frank Gannett, publisher of the Gannett newspapers, described the Izvestia article as "ridiculous and absurd."

"Not one of the 21 Gannett newspapers by any stretch of the imagination can be characterized as isolationist," he said. "We who are supporting Governor Dewey do not need to resort to any such communist-conceived plot to sway voters. The fact that the communists of Russia are so deeply interested in his defeat is in itself a powerful argument in his favor."

CHIEF OF STAFF MAY RETIRE

Toronto, Nov. 6 — (CP)—A dispatch to the Toronto Daily Star from Ottawa today reported that the retirement of Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, Chief of Staff of the Canadian Army overseas, "is momentarily expected" by those closest to the military situation which resulted in the change of Defence Minister last week.

The dispatch adds that Gen. Stuart's "retirement, it is predicted, will be a first major step in the complete reorganization of reinforcement training and establishments overseas..."

Early Solution Is Expected

Ottawa, Nov. 6 (CP)—Likelihood of an early solution to the current dispute between Quebec Senior Hockey League officials and the Ottawa and District Association was expressed here yesterday by George Dudley, former president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

"Things are working out well," said Mr. Dudley, "but details will not be available for a few days and will not have any decision to announce until I have consulted President Frank Sargent. I was quite pleased with the co-operation offered and some suggestions have been advanced which I think will contribute to a satisfactory solution to the dispute," said Mr. Dudley.

Mr. Dudley intimated that no clubs or players would be suspended by the C.A.H.A. pending settlement of the dispute.

The meeting was the outcome of a dispute in which the Quebec league had decided to continue operations outside the C.A.H.A. fold after Hull had been refused permission by the O.D.H.A. to compete in the Q.S.H.L.

PERALTA FIGHTS CASTILLOUX

Mexican fighter, Joe Peralta, who fought Dave Castilloux, at Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto, Ont., Nov. 6.

D. CASTILLOUX LOSES DECISION TO JOEY PERALTA

Damaged Hand in Third Round and Had to Coast Remainder of Way

Toronto, Nov. 7 —(CP)— Canadian Welter and Lightweight Boxing Champion Dave Castilloux lost his second decision to Mexican Joey Peralta here last night in a 12-round non-title bout that pleased a crowd of more than 6,000.

The "rubber" bout gave Peralta two wins over the Canadian title-holder, both in Toronto. Two months ago, Castilloux dropped a close match to the Mexican Lightweight Champion and scored a win against him in Montreal last month.

Castilloux, master of the left jab, did damage to Peralta's face, cutting both his eyes, but the third round saw Dave damage his left and he is awaiting results of an X-ray examination made today to see if the hand is broken.

Back-pedalling for nine rounds, Peralta did not stand up to the Montreal boxer until the 10th, trading blow for blow from then on.

Castilloux came into the ring at 135½ pounds and Peralta weighed 137.

In a fast semi-final over the six-round route, Ralph Walton of Montreal and Joe Bagnato fought to a draw. The lanky Montreal Negro boxer had it all his own way in the first two rounds, but Bagnato evened the count as the bout came to its end.

The 135½ pound Torontonian rushed Walton and landed a barrage of body blows, but Walton's longer reach tied Bagnato up often and inflicted facial punishment. Walton weighed 136.

The first fight of the card saw the only knockout as Scotty Ramage walloped' Nels Broadhead of Hamilton with a left to the solar plexus after one minute and 20 seconds of the first round. Ramage weighed 120¾ and Broadhead 121½.

Tony Golab, whose brilliant football earned him the Jeff Russell Memorial Trophy in 1941 as the most valuable player in the Big 4, has been promoted to Flight Lieutenant. The one-time Ottawa star now is serving in Cairo, Egypt, as a navigation instructor with the R.C.A.F. Tony has seen action in the African, Sicilian and Italian theatres of war since going overseas in December, 1942.

IN TITLE BOUT

"I'll show that baby-face Watson a few holds he never heard of. For years he's got all the breaks from Tunney and his mouth-piece, Phil Lawson — I'll be different Wednesday night now I've got Watson out of Toronto in a title bout. I'll show him who the strongest man in the world is — ME," proclaimed John Katan, the Palermo Panther as he prepared to meet "Whipper Billie" Watson in a British Empire heavyweight championship wrestling bout at the Hume Arena Wednesday night. However, Watson entertains much different views and claims his science will triumph over Katan's strength any time. Of course that point will be decided Wednesday night.

Supporting this championship bout sees Frank Sexton meet Al Dunlop and Joe Maich tangle with Tom Collins.

LEAFS SETTING BLISTERING PACE IN SCORING RACE

Schriner-Carr-Bodnar Line Holding Three of First Four Places

Montreal, Nov. 7 —(CP)— The blistering scoring pace that Toronto's Schriner-Carr-Bodnar line has been setting in the National Hockey League was reflected in the first weekly official scoring list today with the Toronto trio holding down three of the first four places.

At that, the high-powered Torontonians were just a shade ahead of Detroit's Howe-McAtee-Bruneteau combination.

Sweeney Schriner was tied with Syd Howe for top spot, each with 11 points, while the two other members of the Maple Leaf line were tied for third spot with 10 points each. Mud Bruneteau held down fifth spot with nine points, two ahead of Boston's perennial Bill Cowley and three ahead of linemate Jud McAtee.

Schriner's 11 points were made up of seven goals and four assists, while Howe had four goals and seven assists. Carr's total was split evenly between goals and assists and Bodnar had two goals and eight assists.

Schriner led the goals division with his seven, two more than Carr and McAtee who were tied with five each. Bodnar's eight assists put him ahead in that division, with Howe right behind with seven and Carr, Bruneteau and Cowley tied with five each.

Montreal Canadiens dominated the penalty list. Glen Harmon led with 11 minutes, Murphy Chamberlain had 10 and Leo Lamoureux seven plus a 10-minute misconduct.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Nov. 7—(AP)—There's a football team in Pocatello, Idaho, that rates a cheer if they never win another game all season . . . It's called the "Pocatello Mariné Devil-dogs" and is composed of 20-odd Marines from a guard detachment and a few sailors from the Naval Ordinance Plant with a coach, Cpl. Ken Doland, borrowed from an Army Air base . . . These few Marines comprise nearly half the detachment and every one is a combat veteran recuperating from wounds and jungle diseases incurred overseas . . . They lost their first two games because there were not enough reserves and the men weren't well enough to play a full game. . . Then they turned on the Great Falls, Mont., Air Base team and won though they were outweighed 25 pounds a man . . . Those guys must really like to play football.

Shorts and Shells

What's this story that the Cardinals demanded meal money when they left the "home" dugout during the world series and became the "visiting" club? . . . And, come to think of it, why not? . . . Boston's amateur hockey school drew 264 kids for the opening session . . . Gene Tunney is dropping out of the Baltimore pro football setup because he now thinks the war will last a lot longer than he believed before.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

One story which hit the mark and caused prolonged laughter was told as follows:

A farmer drove up to a railroad crossing. He was surprised to see draped and festooned about the near-by fences and ground the remains of an automobile and the inert forms of four persons. He approached one of the forms which gave the slightest sign of life and, leaning over him, asked:

Farmer—Was there an accident?

Injured Man (weakly)—Yes.

Farmer—Did the train hit you?

Injured Man (painfully)—Yes.

Farmer—Did the engineer blow his whistle?

Injured Man (croakingly)—No.

Farmer—Has the railroad claim agent been here yet?

Injured Man—No.

Farmer—Well, then, get over and let me lie down beside you.

Albert is Out.

Yesterday Coach Pepper of Albert College sporting fraternity, announced that his junior and senior six-man football squads had been withdrawn from the Bay of Quinte COSSA. group. "We will centre all our future season's football activities on the formation of a senior 12-man football team to compete in the COSSA," explained Coach Pepper, who apparently is looking to the future regarding interscholastic football at Albert College.

Not only has the COSSA. re-organized for Interscholastic athletic competition but we note the WOSSA swung into line last month with a full schedule of football, basketball and hockey.

At the Belleville Collegiate and St. Michael's Academy they are holding on tenaciously to the abbreviated six-man football game simply because each of these schools is reasonably sure of a championship. However, what about the day when the conventional game returns to its former greatness in the secondary schools' sports program?

Take for example the Lake Shore COSSA. group where the 12-man game has returned stronger than ever this fall even after four war years of inactivity, the squads in that sector have been playing for over two months.

Coming back home it is rumored the 12-man game is getting little encouragement at the B.C.I & V.S. for the simple reason there isn't sufficient equipment to supply one line of scrimmage. The boys are anxious to play the conventional game, which is proven in the fact some 35 answered the call for the initial practice last week. (There hasn't been any since.)

At St. Mike's Coach Jack Doran would like to try a hand at the conventional 12-man game, but is almost handicapped through the lack of adequate equipment. However, in the meantime the Albert College senior gridders started serious practising over the weekend and have two full weeks to practise plays. Coach Pepper and his Albert squad will find plenty of moral support for their decision in returning to conventional football, as Belleville grid fans are anxious and eager to support such a movement.

Here's the Situation.

For the general information of the local Interscholastic football moguls Peterborough's Fred Craig points out the Bay of Quinte and Trent Valley loop must be ready for COSSA competition by Nov. 18th. All we wonder is—how!

At any rate here's how Mr. Craig reviews the picture as follows: "The Peterborough Collegiate football authorities have been informed that the COSSA. football championship series, dormant for several years has been revived and will be played this season. The semi-final schedule that has been drawn up calls for the Lake Shore group winners to meet the Bay of Quinte title-holders while the champions of the Georgian Bay and of the Niagara Peninsula conferences will meet in the other bracket. These games are to be sudden-death affairs to be played on November 18 and the winers will clash in the finals on the following Saturday, November 25 in Toronto. The Lake Shore group, is of course, the Oshawa-Bowmanville-Lindsay, Peterborough setup. Just what will take place in the Bay of Quinte conference is not yet clear. Belleville, once one of the strongest football centres in that section of the province has been content to play the six-man brand for the last few years but may dig up a 12-man club to meet the Tweed district winners although there is nothing definite on that point yet.

This and That.

For those interested in boxing some of Canada's better boxers are appearing at the Mountain View School of Bombing tonight....Joey Bagnato, the army featherweight champion, the popular Frankie Pucci meets Frank Brancette, while Steve Rocco, ex-world flyweight champion will also be on hand.... The bows for the show go to Cpl. Vic Bagnato, boxing instructor at Mountain View.... Incidentally the army and Toronto boys boxing at Mountain View tonight are coming down at their own expense.... FLASH—Promoter Frank Tunney called this morning to say that Babe Zaharias had sustained a broken rib and would be replaced by Frank Sexton, the Ohio Powerhouse, in tomorrow night's semi-final wrestling bout at the Hume Arena.... This should be welcome news for the local wrestling clientele as Sexton is not only a much better wrestler than Zaharias, but has an old grudge to take out on Al Dunlop.... Should be interesting, but of course the grunt and groan fans are more interested in the Empire title bout between Billie Watson and John Katan....'Tis rumored that Trenton would be interested in an Intermediate O.H.A. grouping this winter, but there is ample time for such gossip later.

Mountain View Air Station Sponsors Classy Boxing Show

Some of Canada's leading boxers have been included on an exhibition boxing card to be presented for the entertainment of the personnel of the Mountain View R.C.A.F. station tonight, the show being staged by kind permission of Group Captain Gibb, commanding officer and under the direction of F/O J. P. McCaa, special service officer.

Former world's flyweight champion Steve Rocco will act as referee for the bouts that see Canada's leading lightweight, Joey Bagnato, box the Army featherweight titlist, Sgt. Al Robertson. Bagnato will also go two rounds with his brother Pvt. Charlie Bagnato. The highlight will be a bout between two Toronto boxers, Frank Pucci and Frankie Brancette, while Cpl. Morton, of the RAF and undefeated on this side of the Atlantic, meets Les Dowswell.

Several other preliminaries have been added to the show, which was made possible through the efforts of Cpl. Vic Bagnato, former Golden Gloves champion and at present boxing instructor at Mountain View.

D. CASTILLOUX LOSES DECISION TO JOEY PERALTA

Damaged Hand in Third Round and Had to Coast Remainder of Way

Toronto, Nov. 7 —(CP)— Canadian Welter and Lightweight Boxing Champion Dave Castilloux lost his second decision to Mexican Joey Peralta here last night in a 12-round non-title bout that pleased a crowd of more than 6,000.

The "rubber" bout gave Peralta two wins over the Canadian titleholder, both in Toronto. Two months ago, Castilloux dropped a close match to the Mexican Lightweight Champion and scored a win against him in Montreal last month.

Castilloux, master of the left jab, did damage to Peralta's face, cutting both his eyes, but the third round saw Dave damage his left and he is awaiting results of an X-ray examination made today to see if the hand is broken.

Back-pedalling for nine rounds, Peralta did not stand up to the Montreal boxer until the 10th, trading blow for blow from then on.

Castilloux came into the ring at 135½ pounds and Peralta weighed 137.

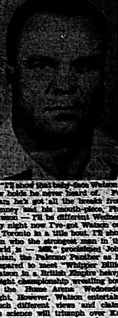
In a fast semi-final over the six-round route, Ralph Walton of Montreal and Joe Bagnato fought to a draw. The lanky Montreal Negro boxer had it all his own way in the first two rounds, but Bagnato evened the count as the bout came to its end.

The 135½ pound Torontonian rushed Walton and landed a barrage of body blows, but Walton's longer reach tied Bagnato up often and inflicted facial punishment. Walton weighed 136.

The first fight of the card saw the only knockout as Scotty Ramage walloped Nels Broadhead of Hamilton with a left to the solar plexus after one minute and 20 seconds of the first round. Ramage weighed 120¾ and Broadhead 121½.

Tony Golab, whose brilliant football earned him the Jeff Russell Memorial Trophy in 1941 as the most valuable player in the Big 4, has been promoted to Flight Lieutenant. The one-time Ottawa star now is serving in Cairo, Egypt, as a navigation instructor with the R.C.A.F. Tony has seen action in the African, Sicilian and Italian theatres of war since going overseas in December, 1942.

IN TITLE BOUT



"I'll show that baby-face Watson a few holds he never heard of. For years he's got all the breaks from Tunney and his mouth-piece, Phil Lawson — I'll be different Wednesday night now I've got Watson out of Toronto in a title bout. I'll show him who the strongest man in the world is — ME," proclaimed John Katan, the Palermo Panther as he prepared to meet "Whipper Billie" Watson in a British Empire heavyweight championship wrestling bout at the Hume Arena Wednesday night. However, Watson entertains much different views and claims his science will triumph over Katan's strength any time. Of course that point will be decided Wednesday night.

Supporting this championship bout sees Frank Sexton meet Al Dunlop and Joe Maich tangle with Tom Collins.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

One story which hit the mark and caused prolonged laughter was told as follows:

A farmer drove up to a railroad crossing. He was surprised to see draped and festooned about the near-by fences and ground the remains of an automobile and the inert forms of four persons. He approached one of the forms which gave the slightest sign of life and, leaning over him, asked:

Farmer—Was there an accident?
Injured Man (weakly)—Yes.
Farmer—Did the train hit you?
Injured Man (painfully)—Yes.
Farmer—Did the engineer blow his whistle?
Injured Man (croakingly)—No.
Farmer—Has the railroad claim agent been here yet?
Injured Man—No.
Farmer—Well, then, get over and let me lie down beside you.

Albert is Out.

Yesterday Coach Pepper of Albert College sporting fraternity, announced that his junior and senior six-man football squads had been withdrawn from the Bay of Quinte COSSA. group. "We will centre all our future season's football activities on the formation of a senior 12-man football team to compete in the COSSA.," explained Coach Pepper, who apparently is looking to the future regarding interscholastic football at Albert College.

Not only has the COSSA. re-organized for Interscholastic athletic competition but we note the WOSSA swung into line last month with a full schedule of football, basketball and hockey.

At the Belleville Collegiate and St. Michael's Academy they are holding on tenaciously to the abbreviated six-man football game simply because each of these schools is reasonably sure of a championship. However, what about the day when the conventional game returns to its former greatness in the secondary schools' sports program?

Take for example the Lake Shore COSSA. group where the 12-man game has returned stronger than ever this fall even after four war years of inactivity, the squads in that sector have been playing for over two months.

Coming back home it is rumored the 12-man game is getting little encouragement at the B.C.I & V.S. for the simple reason there isn't sufficient equipment to supply one line of scrimmage. The boys are anxious to play the conventional game, which is proven in the fact some 35 answered the call for the initial practice last week. (There hasn't been any since.)

At St. Mike's Coach Jack Doran would like to try a hand at the conventional 12-man game, but is almost handicapped through the lack of adequate equipment. However, in the meantime the Albert College senior gridders started serious practising over the weekend and have two full weeks to practise plays. Coach Pepper and his Albert squad will find plenty of moral support for their decision in returning to conventional football, as Belleville grid fans are anxious and eager to support such a movement.

Here's the Situation.

For the general information of the local Interscholastic football moguls Peterborough's Fred Craig points out the Bay of Quinte and Trent Valley loop must be ready for COSSA competition by Nov. 18th. All we wonder is—how!

At any rate here's how Br'r. Craig reviews the picture as follows: "The Peterborough Collegiate football authorities have been informed that the COSSA. football championship series, dormant for several years has been revived and will be played this season. The semi-final schedule that has been drawn up calls for the Lake Shore group winners to meet the Bay of Quinte title-holders while the champions of the Georgian Bay and of the Niagara Peninsula conferences will meet in the other bracket. These games are to be sudden-death affairs to be played on November 18 and the winers will clash in the finals on the following Saturday, November 25 in Toronto. The Lake Shore group, is of course, the Oshawa-Bowmanville-Lindsay, Peterborough setup. Just what will take place in the Bay of Quinte conference is not yet clear. Belleville, once one of the strongest football centres in that section of the province has been content to play the six-man brand for the last few years but may dig up a 12-man club to meet the Tweed district winners although there is nothing definite on that point yet.

This and That.

For those interested in boxing some of Canada's better boxers are appearing at the Mountain View School of Bombing tonight....Joey Bagnato, the army featherweight champion, the popular Frankie Pucci meets Frank Brancette, while Steve Rocco, ex-world flyweight champion will also be on hand.... The bows for the show go to Cpl. Vic Bagnato, boxing instructor at Mountain View....Incidentally the army and Toronto boys boxing at Mountain View tonight are coming down at their own expense.... FLASH—Promoter Frank Tunney called this morning to say that Babe Zaharias had sustained a broken rib and would be replaced by Frank Sexton, the Ohio Powerhouse, in tomorrow night's semi-final wrestling bout at the Hume Arena.... This should be welcome news for the local wrestling clientele as Sexton is not only a much better wrestler than Zaharias, but has an old grudge to take out on Al Dunlop....Should be interesting, but of course the grunt and groan fans are more interested in the Empire title bout between Billie Watson and John Katan....'Tis rumored that Trenton would be interested in an Intermediate O.H.A. grouping this winter, but there is ample time for such gossip later.

Mountain View Air Station Sponsors Classy Boxing Show

Some of Canada's leading boxers have been included on an exhibition boxing card to be presented for the entertainment of the personnel of the Mountain View R.C.A.F. station tonight, the show being staged by kind permission of Group Captain Gibb, commanding officer and under the direction of F/O J. F. McCaa, special service officer.

Former world's flyweight champion Steve Rocco will act as referee for the bouts that see Canada's leading lightweight, Joey Bagnato, box the Army featherweight titlist, Sgt. Al Robertson. Bagnato will also go two rounds with his brother Pvt. Charlie Bagnato. The highlight will be a bout between two Toronto boxers, Frank Pucci and Frankie Brancette, while Cpl. Morton, of the RAF and undefeated on this side of the Atlantic, meets Lee Dowswell.

Several other preliminaries have been added to the show, which was made possible through the efforts of Cpl. Vic Bagnato, former Golden Gloves champion and at present boxing instructor at Mountain View.

LESSON NO. 325

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

An immediate game bid is always stewing in its own juices. Its ingredients seem to change with every new situation. When I offer any set advice on that subject, I do so in abject humiliation.

An immediate game bid of four in a major suit denies it has all the items needed for a one bid or two bid or three bid. According to standard rule, it shows a long-strong suit with eight tricks.

An immediate opening game bid of five in a minor suit means the same as four in a major, except for one item. The five bid promises nine instead of eight tricks.

However, few players stick to the standard rule. They use these bids for shut-out, sacrifice, uncontrollable-urge purposes with seven tricks; sometimes less. Even with less cards in the suit.

Mess around with this hand:

♠ None
♥ Q 7 4 2
♦ A Q J 10 8 6 5 4
♣ Q

This hand is an opening of five diamonds by rule. But under some circumstances, good players might bid five diamonds with one or two less diamonds. Maybe even with one less queen.

Suppose a player suspects his opponents have a game. He might open with five diamonds with a weaker hand. He would do so with the knowledge that he might be defeated.

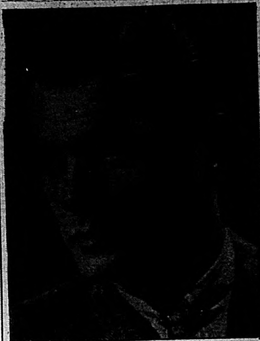
Suppose a player suspects opponents of having a slam. He might open with five diamonds with a weaker suit. He would do so with the knowledge that he will be defeated plenty.

Thus, partner of such a bidder must always discount the rule and assume the worst. The main thing to remember is that game is already reached. Partner should keep his yap shut.

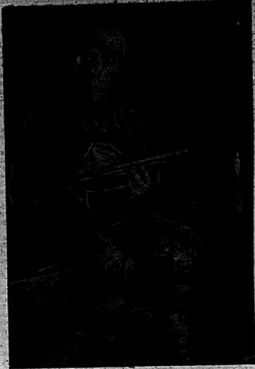
Under some conditions, some players seem to know when to shut out or take it on the chin. They feel it in their bones or in the air.

Some of us can get it only the hard way.

AT THE BELLE — Life is just beginning for Irene Dunne and Alan Marshall in M.G.M.'s "The White Cliffs of Dover." They have just been married and are celebrating the event. The picture has a tender appeal for all audiences, and is attracting large audiences.



AT THE McCARTHY — Joseph Cotton reaches new dramatic heights in "Since You Went Away," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, with Claudette Colbert, Jennifer Jones and Shirley Temple.



AT THE CAPITOL — With all the names of those who literally hated every pear-shaped note which issued from the musical instrument, Eddie Dibble (Charles Butterworth) does a home-made engraving job on his bugle in Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army," filmed in Technicolor and now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

The Little Old Lady of Dover

By WILLIAM HOLT
(BBC Press Service)

I heard about her first when I was in the caves of Dover. The women were talking about her. The women who shelter in the caves from the shells which the German big guns fire across the Straits. They often talk about her. She's becoming a legendary figure among the folk there. The Old Lady of Dover.

"She never comes to shelter", one woman said to me. "She stays at home in her cottage and sleeps there at night." Another woman said "She doesn't know there's a war on. She's eighty-eight and she just goes on as if there wasn't a war." I leaned against the chalk wall of the cave and listened to the women talking. Each one of them had some anecdote about her. "When the siren goes" said one of them "the old lady says 'What's that dreadful noise?' " There was some chuckling in the cave.

"But she's got some pluck, the old lady, to stick it there day and night right in front of the cliffs" said another woman. One woman began to tell about what happened when the old lady's daughter got a Morrison shelter for her. (A Morrison shelter—in case you don't know—is a steel table with steel netting down the sides. You put it up in your dining room and use it as a table and during an air raid you can get underneath it, sleep under it if you like. It's strong enough to support the falling debris of a house, and the steel netting gives protection from flying splinters. It's an indoor shelter). Well they put this shelter up for the old lady, and her daughter spread a cloth over it. The old lady said "What's she got that ugly thing in the kitchen for?

One day she said to a neighbour "Don't go out . There's a dreadful row going on out there." It was the All Clear.

I listened to these stories with mixed feelings. Either the poor old lady didn't understand what was going on around her and in that case it was very tragic that she should be there, exposed to danger; or else she was joking herself.

Now I've known a lot of interesting old ladies and I know how artful and sly they can be. My own grandmother used to pretend she was deaf. I found out that she heard what she wanted to hear and pretended not to hear what she didn't want to hear. You could never draw her into any family squabbles. She never took sides. She just didn't hear. But when she was staying at our home, if she was sitting in an armchair alone with her back to me, no matter how quietly I tiptoed, she heard me come into the room and got up from the chair to sit on another one. It didn't matter how much we protested to her that she was a most welcome visitor she didn't like to feel that she was ever in the way. She lived until she was ninety and was the sweetest old lady I've ever known.

So I listened to these stories in the Dover cave, with curiosity.

One remark the old lady had passed about her daughter's shopping was "She hardly seems to bring anything back with her now."

One day she insisted on going out into the town with her daughter and when she saw one of the shops with its windows broken she said "Who's done that? Boys? what do you say—'Bombs'! You're always talking about bombs. Where do they come from? Out of the sky?"

After listening to those stories I decided to visit the old lady and find out the truth for myself.

I went to her cottage with some hesitation. Wasn't my curiosity rather an intrusion?

"You can tell her cottage by the flowers in the window" the women had said to me. I'd no difficulty in finding the house, and I knocked at the door.

But before I tell you any more—just a word about this shelling. It must be very difficult for you to realise how near that part of England is to the German lines. They fire across the Straits with fifteen inch guns and this shelling has gone on intermittently for years. Just now it has become heavier. Since the big attack started the periods of shelling across the Straits have become more frequent. There have been long lulls but at times the shelling has been sharp and heavy. It's part, when all is said and done, of the battle of the Second Front. And that old lady is in it.

Fifteen inch shells . . .

I knocked at the little cottage door. It was opened by an old lady with a pleasant round face covered with tiny wrinkles and crows' feet at the corner of her eyes. She was smiling at me. The character of their lives is written on the faces of old people, and standing in front of me was a brave woman. She stood there modestly in the passage way beyond the threshold where she had stepped back to let me come in—a small, slight figure in black satin, with a black lace cap. A cream lace collar of fine crochet work was just showing under a short black knitted woollen shawl like a small cape. I told her why I had come, how I'd heard about her while I was in the caves.

"It's very nice of you to come" she said, and she invited me into her little parlour. Her daughter, a cheerful middle-aged woman who lives with her and looks after her, shook hands with me and went into the kitchen saying that she would make me a cup of tea.

I sat down with the old lady in the window—a box window—it was full of flowering geraniums and polygoniums behind the prim lace curtains and the window panes were polished and bright. Why, I've seen windows in mansions of the West End of London which would seem shabby in comparison with the carefully cleaned windows of that old lady's cottage. It's easy to make excuses these days about dirty windows and say "Oh there's a war on."

"We've had the windows out seven times" said her daughter, who had come back into the room, "but we had them put back again."

"Look at this" said the old lady, delicately fondling a tall polygonium. "I had this given to me. I asked for it. It was just a little bit of a seedling and they said it was dead. I put it in that pot and look at it." It was luxuriantly flowering, two feet high.

I told her what the women in the caves had said about her. She looked at me with her blue eyes through her spectacles and smiled. There was a touch of merriment in her eyes. "But surely you know that there's a war on?" I insisted. She nodded. "I suppose it will all be settled up again sometime" she said.

"But why don't you go away to a safer place? Why stay here with all this danger around you?" I said.

She looked at me steadily and with deep meaning and said: "What is there to go away for?"

Her daughter was now sitting beside her and the old lady turned to her and said "Your button's undone," and she fumbled with her small ivory fingers and fastened the top button of her daughter's print overall.

There was a pause and then her daughter said. "We hold our own little service here every Sunday. I play the hymns and she sings. Her favourite hymn is God is Good.' " The old lady nodded to me and insisted on singing it for me. Her daughter took a seat at the upright piano and played while the old lady sang. It was a tune based on Temple Carmina, 1829, which she played from the Methodist Hymn Book. When her daughter stopped playing the old lady turned to her and said "There are two more verses yet."

On top of the piano were some family photos. One of them was a portrait of grand old man with a beard, an old sea captain. It was the old lady's husband, lost at sea.

"Come and see our little garden at the back" her daughter said, and I went with her through the little kitchen which was all spick and span like the parlour. There in the middle was the Morrison steel shelter. It had been neatly covered with oilcloth. "She doesn't like this, I believe?" I said, touching it with my fingers. "No" said her daughter, "she says what do you want this ugly thing filling up the kitchen for.' " I looked at it, ran my fingers over the oblong steel thing, it was longer than an ordinary kitchen table, as long as a bed, it nearly filled the little kitchen. "It is ugly," I said.

"She won't go away" whispered her daughter. "She won't budge." She pointed to a trundle bed which was folded up in the corner. "We sleep there together" she said. "We roll out that feather bed and she's as happy as a bird. Sometimes I've managed to get her to sleep under the table, but she doesn't like it there."

She led me through into the back garden—a little vegetable plot and flower bed. The path was swept neat and clean, although there were ruins within a few yards.

"The furniture is the same as she had when she set up a house here sixty years ago" her daughter said to me, as we went back. "She's always been careful and she mends things. She knits her own woollen shawls" said her daughter. I walked back with her up the lobby, or passage, with the oilcloth all shining and the carpet spotless. There seemed to be a glow everywhere—it made even the sun seem brighter.

We went back into the parlour where the old lady was sitting, looking out through the window over the sea.

Well, I felt I'd like to tell you about her — that little old lady of Dover, so before I left I asked permission. I asked the old lady and I asked her daughter who looks after her, and they kindly granted it.

When I got up to go, the old lady gave me her hand—a tiny ivory hand with fine blue veins—and she gave my fingers a little squeeze. "It's nice of you to come and see me" she said.

"I hope we shall meet again" I said, "in more peaceful surroundings".

And as I came away I waved to her through that flower-bright window — the Little Old Lady of Dover.

Hollywood and HERE

By HYE BOSSIN

International studios in Hollywood have an idea which, if applied generally, would solve the problems of the world.

All who work there eat the same lunches but pay according to their earnings. In that way the meal for which an executive pays three dollars costs a secretary a few pennies.

It seems to me that it's the same idea as our income tax. The purpose of the income tax as applied now is to create a classless society without changing the economic system. (Joke.)

Here's something: Maria Montez is wearing earings with Pierre Aumont's picture on them. He's her husband, and is overseas with the Free French. Aumont made one film in Hollywood, "Assignment in Brittany," after being discharged from the Free French forces but re-enlisted when well again . . . Manager of the Rivoli Theatre, New York, is writing a book called "It's a Wonder Movie Managers Aren't Nuts!". . . Gracie Fields and Monty Woolley, who made such a hit in "Holy Matrimony," will star in "Molly, Bless Her," a picture based on incidents in the life of the late Marie Dressler, Cobourg-born star. It was inspired by Miss Dressler's experiences as a cook when she couldn't get any stage jobs.

In "Out of This World" Bing Crosby sings for Ed. Bracken. The audience understands that Bracken's "voice" is dubbed.

Bing's four youngsters are in the film and when the Crooner's voice fades out one of them says: "Aw—I like the guy with the bow tie better!"

"The guy with the bow tie" is Frank Sinatra.

The Tarzan series has been running for 26 years and "Tarzan and the Amazons" is the 21st film since 1918 on that subject. There have been nine Tarzans, the current one being Johnny Weissmuller. First thing you know baldheaded men will be considered glamorous. Screen stars used to be afraid of being caught without their wigs but they make so many public appearances these days that they would be wearing them all the time.

Charles Boyer, Paul Lukas, Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire are among those who stand naked and unashamed before the world—above the brow. Something good will come of it, too. The gals will look with kindlier eye upon lads with smooth noggins.

Reminds me of the wisecrack someone threw at a star after he unveiled his clean conk. "What's the matter," jeered someone. "Hair raid?"

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was putting cigars in his humidor with a loving expression, and ma said, William, I positively cant remember signing that check I sent the gas company yesterday. Oh dear, if I sent it unsigned it will be practically worse than useless, wont it, William? she said.

I'd hardly say that, pop said. At least it will add its mite to the waste paper drive, he said, and ma said, But William, the more I rack my brains the less I can actually recall signing that check.

But in that case you cant actually recall that you didn't sign it, so isn't that a ray of comfort? pop said, and ma said, Certainly not, because if I knew I hadn't signed it there wouldn't be any further doubt in my mind and I'd promptly send the gas company another check without fear or favor. Oh dear, William, the company may think we're tipical fortune hunters planning to move without paying our last gas bill, she said.

That's so, even an unimaginative gas company is likely to have a fanciful notion now and then, pop said. But still, after all these years of never once failing to pay our gas bill, we have propably established a credit that will be respected even by a corporation so soulless that it gives credit with extreme reluctance even where credit is due. So if you'll take my advice you'll calmly wait for your check to be either formally protested or ruthlessly cancelled, in other words let the solution trickle through the vast machinery of modern business and finance, he said.

That happens to be very unconstructive advice, William, because I just happened to remember that I never even made the check out, so according to common sense I couldn't of sent it in any shape or form, and, to make a long story short, the bill is still on my desk, ma said.

Being the end of the subject.

GYPSY BLOOD

By MARGARET NORRIS

CHAPTER 2

The night before they landed in New York Anna sat in the appointed spot awaiting her companion until far after the appointed hour with an anxiously beating heart. Why didn't he come? What had happened? Had their meetings been discovered?

There was no moon and it was cold. The coil of rope felt very hard. Anna shivered with the chill and her loneliness. She was utterly miserable. As time advanced she grew frightened, got up and began pacing the deck. As she did she saw shadows. Was it two shadows or only one? Was it two so close that they looked like one? She tip-toed nearer and heard voices. There was something terribly familiar in those soft, caressing tones, in the outline of the shadow. Anna drew still nearer—then leaped back stunned by the hideous thing she saw.

There sat her very own sailor lad. He had his arms around Rose. He was kissing the little Italian girl tenderly, as he had kissed Anna.

When Anna found her sailor lover kissing another girl she knew the pangs of jealousy for the first time in her life — blind rage that verged on madness and the desire to kill—to hurt both Rose and the sailor overboard into the sea.

Was this thing love? she asked herself—this blind fury that consumed her — this inexpressible loneliness that was eating into her heart? If this was love why seek it? Why not shun it as one would shun fire—fire and disease and pestilence from which one prays to be delivered?

Weakness enveloped Anna, like the nausea she had felt when her seasickness had left her limp in a corner of the deck, without strength to move. She did not know how long she lay there until, chilled and thoroughly exhausted, she stumbed to her feet and groped her way along the dark corridors of the ship. Unmindful of the route she took she wandered aimlessly up and down stairways until suddenly she discovered she was hopelessly lost with no idea where to turn.

"What does it matter where I sleep?" she asked herself, all emotion deadened. Anything would be pleasanter than the stuffy cabin down in the bowels of the ship where the Polish woman snored heavily and her babies cried untended.

Anna pulled open a heavy door at her right—to find herself emerging on a deck as broad and spacious as a city avenue, a bewildering thoroughfare lined with flowers and bordered by the sea.

Through a lighted window she glimpsed a room as beautiful as a palace, bright with flowers and music and people — the sort of people about whom one dreams. There were lovely women in soft silken dresses with bare throats and gleaming shoulders; men tall and well groomed in evening coats and shoes polished until they shone. They were dancing together to the gayest tune that ever beat on Anna's ear drums—so whimsically catchy, so merry that involuntarily her own little feet in their clumsy shoes began keeping time to the irresistible rhythm.

Hidden in the shadows of the deck outside, her nose flattened against the window pane, Anna stood bewildered by the scene, intoxicated by its beauty, while couple by couple the dancers whirled by, in and out of her angle of vision, like the ever changing pieces of colored glass that succeeded each other in a kaleidoscope.

Swept beyond herself by the thing she saw, Anna forgot her loneliness, forgot the faithlessness of the sailor who at that very moment was kissing Rose. She herself was transported to another world, the world she had dreamed of and longed for, and her heart picked up the melody to which her feet were beating time.

Swift moving and graceful as leaves in a breeze, one couple came dancing toward her and, unconsciously attracted by their beauty, Anna's eye followed them around the room. The girl was as slender as a flower; indeed, her face resembled one; her frock was as filmy as petals and her silken legs and feet might have been the stem. Her hair fit her head like a dark silken cap, curling over her ears and forehead and even from her obscure place outside Anna could see her dark eyes gleam.

The girl's partner was the same nice young man Anna had noticed from her steerage quarters as she watched the people on the people on the deck above—the young man with the nice eyes and kind smile which one time she fancied was flashed her way. But it couldn't have been, she told herself now. Not with girls like that in its range.

Again jealousy pricked its way to Anna's heart, the irresistible longing that she, too, might be part of this picture and be sought after in the dance.

Just then a second young man tapped the flower like girl on the shoulder, claimed her as his partner and danced off with her in his arms. Robbed of his lady, the first young man stood there, nonchalant and graceful, looking over the dancers for a possible partner to supplant the one he had lost. Then he turned on his heel and strode out on the deck — nearer and nearer the window—to within ten feet of where Anna stood huddling, a pathetic onlooker of the entire gay scene.

Anna's heart missed two beats as he struck a match to light a cigarette. Then there in the flare he saw her, a strange contrast to the picture inside—a sturdy young girl that was built like a boy, a rough shawl concealing her fine shoulders, clumsy shoes, and bright yellow hair tousled by the breeze from the sea. But before the flare died the new comer saw Anna's black eyes gleam and the picture was by no means unpleasant. He advanced a step further.

"Hello, there!" he said with the same nice smile which Anna had so often admired. In his voice was an invitation which Anna longed to heed.

But a strange impulse born of the contrast between herself and the new world she was glimpsing, made her bound like a wild creature back into the darkness and flee through the door through which she had come.

"Well I'll be darned!" said the surprised young man, as he found himself alone.

Anna was wakened next day at dawn by the bustle of preparations for landing. There was noise and confusion all over the ship. The hallways were full of baggage. Men and women were running in and out of their cabins chattering in every language from bad English to excellent Russian. Anna knew a smattering of both.

Everywhere was the cry of "land in sight." Anna was tired of the great wastes of water and was running to the deck for a glimpse of land when a burly man barred her way.

"Immigrants below, kid! Soon comes Ellis Island!"

Anna was herded into the inevitable line. Behind her was the Polish women and her babies. A little ahead was Rose, her silky braids over her shoulders, her black eyes more velvety than before, her cheeks glowing like two peonies. She flashed at Anna a dazzling smile. It was quite as sweet and guileless as though she had not stolen Anna's sailor. But Anna could not forgive so easily. She scowled back like a thunder cloud. cloud.

Around the corner was her father. He had been drinking and his face was flushed. When he spied his daughter he shouted and signalled and her heart sank with misgiving. Must she land in this strange new country with no one but him to care for her?

As hours dragged by and they still stood in line the air grew hotter and more breathless. The Polish woman was crying like a great helpless calf.

"What's the matter?" asked Anna. It was getting on her nerves.

"I'm afraid I won't get through the Island."

"What's the Island? America?"

"No, Ellis Island. If they don't like you there they send you home."

"They shan't send me back," said Anna, "once I get off this ship!"

"You can't tell," said the woman. "They say it's awful there!"

"If it's any worse than this jam," said Anna, "it must be pretty bad!"

"Anyone to meet you in America?" Why wouldn't that woman keep still?

"My father—he's with me on this ship."

"Oh, that doesn't matter at all. Unless someone comes to the dock to meet you and promises to look after you, and says that you'll obey the laws of the land, they'll probably send your home."

"Oh, keep still!" said Anna rudely. It was bad enough to stand in that perspiring, shifting, mob-maddened line with not a breath of air. She wanted to see what was happening on deck. She'd get up there or know the reason why. She edged her way forward a little. A big man with a club shoved her back. Anna stuck out her tongue at him.

"Oh, ho!" he said. "Here's a vixen. A fine candidate for the melting pot. Behave if you want to stay in America!"

Anna dropped back into the miserable line of over-heated, muttering people, complaining in every language of Europe, no one understanding the other. She had the feeling she was going to faint. She must have one moment of air. Like Hercules destroying the temple, she shoved her way out of the line, wriggled past the big man with the club and fled up the stairs to deck. The cool air on her face was like water to a man dying from thirst. Then she stood transfixed by what she saw.

Like fairy towers rising out of the mist rose the skyline of the promised land. Slim white spires that pierced the clouds and massive gray piles like fortresses. Facing her was the Goddess of Liberty, her mighty torch lifted high—the torch that has kindled so many hopes and left so many to die again.

Like a challenge to her strength the new world lay mysterious and powerful, beautiful and relentless, across the blue bridge of the harbor So Anna lifted her face to the sky and flung her arms wide in welcome.

"I accept your challenge, Oh Fate!" she cried.

As Anna stood there poised like a small statue, a sharp whistle caught her ear. She followed it, to see on the upper deck the nice boy of the night before, looking down at her and signalling. The sun shone on his wavy brown hair turning it to bronze. His eyes (Anna could see them for the first time) were blue, and his smile was kinder than ever. He typified so completely her conception of the new land that lay ahead that for a moment he did not seem like a separate individual but only a part of her vision. Then he raised his arm and something white fluttered to her feet. It was an envelope. Anna picked it up, but she scarcely completed the gesture when the dreadful man from quarantine snatched her by the ear.

"Hi, kid! Go down where you belong. You get off at Ellis Island!"

Helpless as a puppy before a great dog, Anna was driven down to her quarters. The line was actually leaving the ship. Furtively she opened the envelope. The note was written in pencil and scrawled so hastily that she could scarcely decipher it.

"To the little girl I have watched on board and who ran away from me last night: If you are in New York, you may need help. If you do, you can always find it by calling on Harry Baldwin."

There was a Fifth Avenue address.

Anna was in the city of her dreams—but the reality was quite different from the vision. The misty spires, the fairy towers she had glimpsed from New York harbor—where were they now? The New York she saw had streets that were dirty and clanging, bounded by great stone buildings that rose high as cavern walls, crowded with ugly rude people who bumped her as she walked. The heat was stifling and breathless and the vista stretched no further than her nose. Her new home was one room in a tenement house which she must share with her father.

"Let me have a room to myself, Pa," she begged. "I'll pay for it with my wages."

"You'll give your wages to me not waste them on a room we do not need! Who are you to put on such airs? A room to yourself, indeed!"

Anna wondered herself who she was. Could she be the same little Polish girl who only a few weeks ago was driving the ox team, making hay in the far away fields of the home land?

How much had happened since those days! Or had she only dreamed it dreamed of the ship and the sailor, of the nice boy on the upper deck, the indignities of Ellis Island? Was this new life only a clattering nightmare from which she would some day awaken to find herself in the adobe hut helping her mother get breakfast, or striding along in the blessed sun, the blessed wind in her hair?

Would she be glad to awaken like that? Anna often wondered.

Anna's father discovered a friend in New York, a big Pole like himself with rough, bearded face and a clumsy walk who often came to visit them. The two men would sit in the tenement room, drinking and telling coarse stories until far into the night, while Anna hid her face in the bed—covers and tried to sleep.

A charity organization found Anna a job. It was in a gray prison called a fur factory. Here she sewed small pieces of fur, matching them as her mother used to match squares for a patchwork quilt. Unless the pieces were perfectly matched, the stitches invisible, a terrifying man, the inspector, would make her rip them out. Too many mistakes resulted in tradedy since she was paid not by the hour but by the piece.

The air was so filled with bits of fur that by the end of each day Anna felt as thought she were fur lined inside from her nose down to her toes. At the end of the week she received her pay, $12 in crisp green bills. She had never held so much money in her hand before. In Poland she had no wages; All was paid over to her father. She knew he would claim this, too. Already he was asking for it.

"We must save every cent," he warned.

"How much will it take to bring Mother to America?"

"More than $100."

Anna gasped at the thought of the long, weary weeks it would take to save that amount.

But in this glorious land of the free there must be other ways to earn money. Must she crucify body and spirit on the dust altar of the fur factory? Must she breathe filth and fur all the daylight hours and give all her earnings to her father?

Somewhere beyond her tenement room lay the America Anna had pictured, peopled by women, beautiful and kind; by men like the lad on the ship. It might be as far from her tenement room as was Poland from New York harbor, but her feet were itching for the road and she knew that she could get there. There must be other work to do, fields to plow here as in her own country. Her powerful muscles ached to be used; should she let them grow soft in the fur factory?

Anna remembered the note Harry Baldwin had tossed her, that nice lad on ship board! The penciled words were too faint to read—but no matter, she knew them by heart.

"If you are in New York you may need help. If you do, you can always find it by calling on Harry Baldwin."

Anna remembered the 5th Ave. address. From the gypsy urge beating in her temples was born a tremendous resolve. The crackle of the new bills in her hand gave her strength to act upon it.

"Money talks in America!" How often Anna had heard that remark! Armed with these bills she need ask favors of no one. On feet like wings she hurried home. Her father might return any time, but she had no possessions, nothing to pack, no longer an extra pair of shoes.

Quickly Anna changed her shabby dress for a pair of overalls and a coarse blue shirt of her father's. How angry he would be to find them gone! But she was through with women's work; henceforth she'd be a boy. With a knife she cut off her yellow braids, tucked the ragged ends under a cap and with throbbing heart stole out on the broad highway of adventure.

It was six o'clock of a summer's evening when Anna slipped stealthily from her tenement room into the twisted, crooked streets that mark New York's lower East side. It mattered little which way she turned; the destination of each street was unknown. Her great desire was to get away—to put distance between herself and her father. Soon he would be coming home from his work and she must get beyond sound of his voice before he discovered she was gone.

HOW TO RELIEVE

PILE TORTURE

QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is natures' warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

SOUTH AFRICAN PENICILLIN

Wooler, Nov. 7. (Special).—Stricken suddenly with a heart attack while deer hunting, Mr. Elgin Milton "Pat" Wessels, 70, well-known farmer of the Wooler district, was found dead at noon on Monday on a deer runway a short distance from Roach's camp at Gilmour.

Mr. Wessels had been delegated as a member of the hunting party to watch the runway and when he did not return to camp at noonday a search was made for him. He was found dead on the runway by Grant Broach.

Son of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Wessels, the deceased had lived his entire life in the Wooler district where he farmed a short distance from the village. He was a member of Wooler United Church. The last remaining member of his immediate family, he is survived by his wife, the former Lily May Anderson.

The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon from the late residence with interment to be made at Friends' Cemetery, Wooler. The Rev. W. T. R. Delve will officiate at the service at the home at 2.30 o'clock.

2 15-Year Terms, Others Imposed

Toronto, Nov. 7 — (CP) — Five men convicted a week ago in connection with the armed robbery of a $35,000 liquor load and kidnapping of George Butcher, driver of the truck, were sentenced today by Judge James Parker.

Donald (Mickey) McDonald was sentenced to 15 years in penitentiary consecutive with a two and a half year sentence he now is serving for assault. Sam Mancuso was given 15 years, McDonald's younger brother Edwin was sentenced to five years and William Baskett, 10 years.

Convicted of receiving the liquor, Benedetto Zanelli was given two years less one day determinate and three months indeterminate.

Evidence was given at the 12-day trial that a truck load of 600 cases of liquor was hi-jacked on Dec. 13, 1943. The liquor was taken to a barn on the Lazy L ranch, near Weston, Ont., while Butcher, driver of the truck, was kidnapped and later thrown into a ditch on a North York sideroad.

Council Approves Motion To Study The Gas Question

Motion Also Passed to Rescind Recommendation on Pension Plan

A motion "Whereas the municipal corporation of the City of Belleville have voted in favor of presenting certain questions to the electorate of the City of Belleville in relation to the status of the Belleville gas plant and whereas certain taxpayers and gas users of the City of Belleville have shown apprehension as a result of such action and whereas in the interest of the citizens of Belleville and for the purpose of obtaining all available information with regard to the Belleville gas plant to allow an intelligent vote to be obtained and also to allow council to be properly informed regardless of the result of the questions to be submitted, that the Comptroller, the Manager of the Public Utilities and the City Engineer be a committee for the purpose of assembling all available factual and statistical information concerning the Belleville gas utility and further all other information that may be obtained by way of comparison with other gas plants with the view that if and when the question comes before a Belleville council that a sufficiency of information may be at hand for the purpose of intelligent decision and further that any relevant information that may be collected be disseminated to the press at regular periods between now and the day of voting on the question dealing with the gas plant and that this committee be a continuing committee during the next year and that the incoming council be urged to reappoint the same for the same purpose", moved by Ald. Butler and seconded by Ald. Follwell was unanimously passed at the regular meeting of the City Council on Monday evening in one of the shortest sessions of the Fall term.

Little Business.

There was little business to transact and the members were invited to the camp of Ald. Clapp at Moira Lake for a social evening and get-together before the end of the administration of the present council. A most pleasant evening was enjoyed as guests of Ald. Clapp. Ald. McDougall introduced a recommendation rescinding the motion to form a pension committee and the council closed the book on this plan as the civic employees did not whole-heartedly support the proposal made by the council. Ald. McDougall stated that the question of pensions for civic employees had been put fairly and squarely and that the council should have no regrets as to the outcome. The council opposed the plan that would make all the employees a beneficiary but voted in favor of a plan that would take in the employees for future service from now. The employees endorsed the first plan but refused to accept the plan for future service from now. The mayor thanked Ald McDougall and his committee for the time spent in formulating the plan and presenting it to the employees and believed that the council had done their share in the matter.

Population Increases.

Ald. Clarke reported that the assessment showed a population of 15,967 an increase of 330 over last year. A by-law was passed to provide for the borrowing of $50,000 in ten year debenture at 3 1-2 per cent to purchase property for the construction of the Riverside Drive and another by-law was passed to obtain the consent of the electors to borrow the money. This by-law will be voted on at the next municipal elections. A price of $50 was accepted from a Toronto newspaper for a piece of land to be taken off Panter Park and the council agreed that employees could purchase bonds on the payroll saving plan. The council was agreed to contact the owners of five lots on the east side of Chatham Street and south of Queen Street if they would be interested in acquiring part of Lingham Street at a price of $25 per lot frontage with the stipulation that all must purchase or none will be sold.

Number of Inquiries

Several inquiries were made Ald. Butler asking about the speeding on Dundas Street East. He stated that excessive speed on this thoroughfare was the rule not the exception and that someone was bound to be injured. Ald. Trudeau added his word and asked that something be done. Mayor Rollins stated the matter would be immediately taken up with the police. Ald. Chamberlain inquired if the catch basin promised for Chatham Street had been put in and he was informed the matter was being taken care of. He also asked about the smoke nuisance on Coleman Street and Mayor Rollins promised action through the police. Ald. Woodley asked if any profit was made on the recent salvage paper drive and Ald. Clapp told Ald. Woodley that a profit was made on the 25 tons collected and that it would be divided among the three service clubs, who did such an excellent job.

Not Rectified

Ald. Allin inquired why the flashers were not working at the main intersection and Ald. Follwell stated he would look into the matter. The Alderman also explained that the interference caused by the flasher at Victoria Avenue had not been rectified and that it was not being used at the present time. Tenders will be asked for the plowing of snow off the city streets this winter. A caution light will be placed at the corner of Pine Street and Bleecker Avenue. Miss Lynch of the Welfare Department will attend a meeting of the Welfare administrators in Toronto today. The Industrial Alcohol Company of Corbyville notified the city that mashing operations at the plant would cease on November 3rd. The foreman of the bread company operating on Turnbull Street notified the Chief of Police that he would co-operate in keeping down the disturbance of trucks unloading in that district at night, which disturbs the residents.

Several by-laws conveying property were passed and a by-law to provide for the municipal elections was also passed There being no further business the council adjourned.

London Paper Says McNaughton's Appointment Intensifies 'Crisis'

London, Nov. 7. (CP Cable)—The Canadian "crisis" over the use of conscripted troops to reinforce overseas volunteer forces "has been intensified by public anger which official silence has aroused", the Daily Telegraph said yesterday in a dispatch from its correspondent in Toronto.

The resignation of Col. Ralston as Minister of Defence and the appointment of Gen. McNaughton to that position have done nothing to resolve the situation, the Telegraph said in a story three-quarter of a column long.

In the absence of an official explanation or clarification of the change and the issues behind it the newspaper's correspondent cited three facts which, he said, seem clear:

1. "McNaughton, creator of the 1st Canadian Army, has entered the cabinet pledged to maintain the government's 'no overseas conscription' policy".

2.—"Any advantage the government might have gained by securing him as Ralston's successor is largely lost because of its silence".

3. "The political character of the crisis has been intensified".

The correspondent added it still had to be demonstrated that Gen. McNaughton's appointment "has inspired confidence in the nation", and said the first reaction to his acceptance of the defence post "was one of shock". Politically, the immediate effect of the change was to save the Mackenzie King ministry from mass resignations, the correspondent asserted.

Responsibility Rests With Prime Minister Says Col. J. L. Ralston

Ottawa, Oct. 7 —(CP)— Hon. J. L. Ralston, in his first public statement since resignation as defence minister after a cabinet crisis over the reinforcement situation, said last night he had been pressed from many quarters for an explanatory statement, but he felt "that responsibility for informing the public belongs primamily to the Prime Minister."

He said he recognized that in this matter the public and the armed forces were entitled to full information consistent with military security. He had made his report to the government and his letter of resignation was addressed to the Prime Minister.

"I would assume," said Col. Ralston in his statement, "that the Prime Minister would inform the public of the circumstances by making available my letter of resignation and any further correspondence between us in the matter. The correspondence will speak for itself. I therefore refrain from making any statement at present."

POTATO HARVEST

In the soft sunlight of an Autumn day,
The workers gathered in the potato field,
With team and plow and fork and buckets gay
Seeking the latest of the harvest yield;
School boys were there making of work a play
And stalwart youth his strength a sun and shield.

An aeroplane was circling overhead
Breaking the rural quiet in its flight;
As o'er the workers it now dipped and sped
Did the youth long to reach the lofty height?
Was he content as fast the Autumn fled
To seek in rival toil his chief delight?

Another year he may be called away
To answer to his country's urgent call
For men to gather for the bloody fray,
To sacrifice their home, their life, their all;
O God forbid that he the price should pay—
This lad now grown so strong and straight and tall.

We watched his growth through all the passing years,
His childhood days, his school days fleeting by,
Ambition's fire and all that life endears
Reflected from his future-seeking eye;
Nought but the voice of nature yet he hears
Nor for life's gay adventure heaves a sigh.

Content he seems upon his native soil
Delighting in the task each new day brings,
He loves the land, he scorns not honest toil,
Though far his thoughts may soar on spirit wings;
Oh! From the thought of war our hearts recoil
God keep him safe, this lad who laughs and sings.

It seems to me so little while ago
He was a child and trudging by my side,
Clinging to me with toddling steps and slow,
Trusting, confiding, whatso'er betide;
Little I dreamt that war's deep ruddy flow
Would claim our youth in its dark crimson tide.

Oh! That this year may stop this hellish strife
That claims our youth our country's ardent life!

—Helen B. Anderson.

TO RETAIN FOOD VALUES

Quick cooking in minimum water keeps food values from wasting.

Refrigeration Subject of Talk To Rotary Club

While he predicted there would be no drastic changes in the construction of refrigerators during the immediate post-war period by the "Big Four" manufacturers, Rotarian Jack Ireland, city Kelvinator representative told his fellow clubmen at a luncheon address that the new models would contain a sealed-in mechanism with quick-freezing compartments.

He foresaw the manufacture of small refrigeration units such as water-coolers, room conditioners and food cabinets and stated the big change insofar as refrigeration is concerned, would take place in business. Butchers, grocerymen and others with perishable foodstuffs will be the first to get the benefits of the larger refrigeration plants.

Cost of the new model home refrigerators will be approximately the same as the present day type, in the neighborhood of $250, he said.

Plastics No Big Factor

Plastics, he felt would not play such an important part in the manufacture of these home appliances. It has been used and has not proved as satisfactory as was at first anticipated. Metal will be used to a large extent in the manufacture of the new models.

Using a late model and an early one to illustrate his address, Rotarian Ireland gave his listeners a keen insight into the mysteries of refrigeration. The theory, he said, was originated by an English scientist in 1900, and fourteen years later was developed by some Americans. Some of these 1914 models are still in use.

Simplicity of the late models was illustrated by comparison to the cumbersome former types with their multiplicity of parts.

Three refrigerants had been in use since 1914, the speaker pointed out. "The first used was sulphur dioxide but this resulted in an offensive odor. Next came methyl chloride but this proved to be inflammable. The latest is Freon gas which has proved highly satisfactory.

Demonstrates Action of Gas

The Freon gas was demonstrated by the speaker by means of a small container and coil. Frosting of the coil was plainly evident as the gas, released slowly contracted the warm air. The vapor, he explained, was compressed to 110 pounds by means of a pump, brought down to ten pounds and then passed through a radiator where it cools and condenses.

Freon, he said, was used in refregiration units using motors up to five horse-power. Above this the ammonia system was used, such as in ice arenas.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Dr. Bert Howard with President Pink Pingston expressing club appreciation. Rotarians Bert Houston and Harry Moorman looked after the musical part of the luncheon in the absence of Leo Riggs and Sandy Burrows.

HOLD ENTIRE CONTROL

London, Nov. 6 (CP)—Marshal Tito announced in a communique today that the entire Yugoslav-Greek frontier had been brought under control of his Partisan forces with the liberation of Bitolj.

Albanian Patriots have gained control of the greater part of their capital, Tirana, in three days of street-fighting, the communique said.

HELP KEEP THE HOME FRONT STRONG!

BUDGET YOUR SPENDING FOR VICTORY

Here's a simple budget method to help you—Send for free copy and join the Budgeteers

"I WILL do my part to keep the home front strong!" Surely everyone of us should live up to that simple pledge until full Victory is ours. Part of that pledge consists in keeping our personal finances sound—in planning our spending so that expenses don't get out of line with income.

Your income must do more now

Even before war brought new claims on your earnings, you probably found a budget could often be very useful. Now, with war savings, higher taxes, contributions and all your regular living expenses to come out of your pay cheque, wouldn't a budget be even more helpful?

A new way to budget

Not long ago Household Finance published the Budget Calendar as a service to customers. This is a brand new way of making a family budget. It gives no fixed spending pattern, no rules that you spend so much for this item and so much for that. On the contrary it asks you to take the expenses you now have and shows you how to go about meeting them out of the money you have to spend. Isn't that a simpler, more practical way to plan a budget?

Get more out of your income

Families who stay out of unnecessary debt, who spend their incomes wisely to keep themselves in fighting trim, can do a better job on the home front. Because we believe a budget plan that really works can help almost any family to get more out of their wartime income, we are now sending the Budget Calendar to everyone who requests a copy. We hope that it will help many families not our customers to plan their spending to better advantage.

What the Budgeteers receive

All who use the Budget Calendar seriously are invited to join the Budgeteers. Budgeteers receive a new booklet or letter from time to time to encourage them in their efforts. They may also ask for individual help with their problems at any time. All Budgeteers who complete a full year of budgeting receive special recognition.

Household Finance is Canada's largest and oldest Small Loans company. We offer the Budget Calendar to families everywhere in the hope that it will encourage more of them to budget their wartime spending. We will not take advantage of your request to send you a loan solicitation of any kind. Won't you ask for the Calendar and see if it doesn't help you budget your spending for Victory?

LANDSLIDE FOR ROOSEVELT

President Given Sweeping Mandate To Continue Term

Gov. Dewey Admits Defeat In Radio Talk at 3.15 A. M.

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 8 —(CP)— Seesaw swings in three key states today kept in doubt the actual size of President Roosevelt's fourth-term victory but it was clear that he was armed with a fresh mandate from the American people to continue the leadership he has given them during the last 12 years.

Governor Dewey, his republican opponent, inched into a lead in New Jersey while Mr. Roosevelt threatened to capture Michigan and Ohio for the democrats.

New Jersey shifted from the Roosevelt column at mid-way but in a vote total approaching 2,000,000 Mr. Dewey's margin amounted to only 400. Outstanding ballots made the eventual decision uncertain.

Gaining in Two States.

Mr. Roosevelt was gaining in both Ohio and Michigan and there was a possibility that if New Jersey switched back and he won a lead in those two states he would run his electoral vote up to 451 against 80 for the Governor of New York who opposed him.

Early in the afternoon the popular vote for President, from 100,414 of the country's 130,210 voting units, showed Mr. Roosevelt with 20,434,190 and Mr. Dewey with 17,894,641.

The hopes of the 42-year-old New York Governor, who made a spectacular attempt to end the 12-year Roosevelt regime at the White House, crashed under an avalanche of ballots to which his own populous state added its majority.

In 1940 Mr. Roosevelt won 449 Electoral College votes to 82 for the late Wendell L. Willkie.

Along with his mandate from the people to continue his leadership of the nation the President seemed certain to have a strong democratic majority behind him in both Senate and House of Representatives.

Dewey Admits Defeat.

Gov. Dewey admitted his defeat in a radio talk at 3.15 a.m. today. Before a crowd of 300 correspondents and friends in his New York hotel Dewey used the microphone to extend his congratulations and ask divine blessings upon the President he had tried so hard to defeat.

Gov. Dewey told reporters he used that means of extending congratulations because he assumed the President had long since retired in his Hyde Park home on the Hudson River near here, after telling a serenading crowd of neighbors before midnight that the voting results seemed satisfactory.

But the President was listening to the radio and soon after the Dewey talk he sent the defeated candidate this message: "I thank you for your statement which I have heard over the air a few minutes ago."

Kansas Goes Republican

Out in Kansas City, Mo., Senator Harry Truman, the Democratic vice-presidential candidate who automatically wins with the President although his own state went Republican, said "It was a grand statement by Gov. Dewey and it shows American sportsmanship in this political campaign."

Gov. John Bricker of Ohio, who wanted to be the Republican nominee for President but took second place to Mr. Dewey on the ticket, received the news of his defeat in Columbus, where he has occupied the Governor's Mansion for three years. His state also went Republican. He sent warm congratulations to the winner and promised his co-operation.

The election of Roosevelt was conceded without waiting for the count of overseas soldier votes in the 11 states where they may be received after the statutory home voting date.

So far as reports indicate the election was conducted quietly throughout the country.

In this city and in most communities liquor stores and bars were closed until after the polls closed. Times Square was crowded and extra police were on hand while many store keepers boarded up their plate glass windows. But there was little need for these precautions.

Little was revealed of the fate of the four minor parties which had presidential electors on some of the state ballots, including Norman Thomas who has been Socialist candidate in every presidential election beginning with 1928. He said recently he would not run again after the present contest.

As the Roosevelt trend became apparent shortly before midnight newspapers supporting the Republican cause, several of them such as the New York Daily News and Chicago Tribune, bitterly anti-Roosevelt, began to concede victory to the President.

The final blow came when New York, with its 47 electoral seats and about one-tenth of the total eligible vote of the country, swung from the Dewey to the Roosevelt column.

The traditionally solid south, California and the west coast generally, Massachusetts, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, Rhode Island, Connecticut, swelled the President's Electoral College support.

Sidney Hillman, chairman of the P.A.C., said the results were "a stunning repudiation of the anti-labor isolationist and defeatist element who based their campaign on bigotry and prejudice."

GEN. K. STUART, CHIEF OF STAFF, IS BEING RETIRED

Major General Price J. Montague Likely To Hold Post Of Administration Officer

Ottawa, Nov, 8 — (CP)—Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, 49, Ottawa, Chief of Staff at the Canadian Military Headquarters, London, has gone on leave pending retirement, Defence Minister McNaughton announced today

The brief announcement contained no reference to a successor, but said that Maj.-Gen. Price J. Montague, general officer in charge of Administration at C.M.H.Q., London, would continue to hold his present post.

There had been reports that both Gen. Stuart and Gen. Montague had either resigned or would be retired. These reports arose after Gen. McNaughton succeeded Col. J. L. Ralston as Defence Minister after a cabinet crisis over the reinforcement question.

Col. Ralston's resignation came after a tour of the battlefronts during which he is believed to have gathered information for his argument before the cabinet on the need for conscripting home defence troops for overseas service.

Gen. Stuart accompanied Col. Ralston back to Canada and it was understood his trip was for the purpose of supporting Col. Ralston's views if his advice was sought.

Gen. Stuart at present is visiting Montreal on personal business and when approached yesterday on the subject of his possible retirement he said he had nothing to say "at the moment."

The announcement said:—

"Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, C. B., D.S.O., M.C., Chief of Staff in Canadian Military Headquarters, London, has proceeded on leave pending retirement, Gen. McNaughton, Minister of National Defence, announced today.

"Coincident with the announcement, he stated that Maj-Gen. the Hon, P. J. Montague, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., M.C., V.D., senior officer at Canadian Military Headquarters in charge of administration, will continue on his present post.

"Lt.-Gen. Stuart was appointed Chief of Staff, Canadian Military Headquarters, London, in December of last year."

Montreal, Nov. 8 — (CP) — Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart said today he was "not at liberty to discuss" an announcement from Ottawa that he had gone on leave pending retirement.

Roosevelt's Election Makes Certain Early Meeting with Churchill, Stalin

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Nov. 8 (AP)—President Roosevelt's re-election makes it virtually certain, that he will hold an early meeting with Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin.

Turning on key questions of post-war co-operation, the conference will largely shape the course of Mr. Roosevelt's fourth-term foreign policy.

The proposed second session of the big three, a year after their first gathering at Teheran, becomes possible now because the outcome of Tuesday's voting has restored to diplomacy the stability lost during hectic campaign weeks. Then foreign governments did not know whether they would have to reckon with Mr. Roosevelt or Gov. Dewey during the weeks ahead.

Consequently diplomatic authorities expect an acceleration in international affairs beginning with the projected big-three session, which some officials hope may even be held this month.

It appears certain that attempts will come soon to speed organization of the proposed world security organization and to get agreement with Britain, Russia and the other Allies on control of a defeated Germany.

Issues to be Settled.

The great political issue to be settled in the big-three meeting is basic to American foreign policy: how far are Russia, Britain and the United States willing to go in harmonizing their interests? Since the United States and Britain have had long experience and share much confidence in their bilateral solution of this problem, the question really boils down to one of Anglo-American and Russian interests.

Mr. Stalin is believed to be looking to Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt for answers to these two fundamental questions:

1. Will the United States take part, this time, in a world security organization?

2. Can Britain be depended upon to work with Russia rather than against her in Europe?

Great Domestic Problem.

These problems also pose for the President one of his greatest domestic problems—holding popular support for the proposed new world organization against the attacks that are certain to develop. These are due to come to an issue in Congress over Senate approval of treaties commiting the United States to join the proposed new league and over legislation governing the use of American armed forces to help prevent aggression.

State Secretary Hull has been the author of the world organization campaign to date and despite Hull's age and illness the President is expected to continue to rely on him for this and similar work as long as Mr. Hull is able to remain in office.

The fact that Mr. Roosevelt now is assured four more years in office is regarded by diplomats, rightly or wrongly, as the strongest possible guarantee to Britain and Russia that United States policies will move forward generaly unchanged so far as the chief executive is concerned.

Elected President of the United States for a fourth term but returns are incomplete. The President has already secured 400 Electoral College votes out of a possible 531 with 266 needed for election.

Five Escapees From Hastings County Jail Now in Custody; 4 Arrested by Toronto Police

Three Apprehended in Department Store in Toronto While Fourth Captured at His Home After Telephone Conversation

"All of the five youths who escaped from the Hastings County Jail here Monday evening are now back in custody." Belleville police announced here today.

Martin Green, 20, David Quigley, 17, and Bert Hawkins, 18, all of Toronto, were recaptured in a downtown Toronto department store by Toronto police early today. Norman Bell, 17, also of Toronto, a fourth member of the escaped gang, was apprehended at his Toronto home late Tuesday night, while the fifth man, Floyd Andrews, 16, was arrested in Belleville early Tuesday morning.

The four Toronto arrests came after the stolen automobile in which the escapees were riding crashed into a bus and gasoline pump in East Toronto after a hectic police chase Tuesday night. At that time the escaped prisoners evaded police until Bell was apprehended at his home. The final roundup came today when the remaining trio submitted to arrest in downtown Toronto.

WILL BE BROUGHT BACK.

At noon today in company with Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn, Chief R. W. Probert, Inspector J. C. Hayes and Sergt. C. Arnott of the Belleville Police Department left for Toronto to bring the recaptured quartet of prisoners back to Belleville. When speaking to the Ontario Intelligencer this afternoon Crown Attorney Donnan stated that charges had already been preferred against the quintet of escapees, but would not be executed until the authorities had returned from Toronto. It is believed they will be charged with breaking prison with violence. They will be arraigned immediately upon their return to Belleville.

Stole Car at Brighton.

Early Tuesday evening police here and Provincial Police learned that a motor car had been stolen at Brighton and later abandoned at Colborne, where a 1941 model Pontiac with full gas tank was taken. At Oshawa four men were seen speeding through the city and a general alarm raised. Racing at high speed the quartet continued their wild ride until Scarboro police first took up the chase at close quarters. However, the driver of the stolen car in which the four escapees were riding managed to elude the Scarboro police car, but not before Toronto police took up the hunt. At this point the men were driving desperately through side streets and alleyways in a futile effort to shake off the Toronto police.

It was during such a mad race that the stolen car crashed into the gasoline pumps after which the occupants dashed up alleyways and backyards to escape. However, Toronto police say Bell later telephoned from his home to state his whereabouts and was subsequently arrested.

Interview Inmates.

Today Belleville police said Inspector Wm. Lougheed, of the Provincial Police C. I. D., had personally interviewed all inmates of the county jail yesterday during which time statements were taken from each individual prisoner regarding the procedure in the prison prior to the jail-break. Inspector Lougheed was assisted by Chief Probert, Inspector Hayes and Provincial Constable Soubliere. The result of the findings was not made public at this time.

Bell told Toronto Police the five youths had hidden out near here until yesterday morning, when they boarded a west bound train. Andrews said, when taken into custody, he had been kicked in the face and forced off a moving train because he was not in favor of going further with the escape.

The five youths attacked Joseph Samain, governor of the jail, and Herbert Urch, Turnkey, causing serious injuries to their heads. Both, however, were able to return to their duties after first aid treatment.

Glad It's Over Says Hawkins.

"I am glad it is over", Hawkins told police. "We made a very foolish

EXPLOSIVE ACTION PROMISED ALONG EASTERN FRONT

Torrential Rains Hinder Red Army Troops Jabbing at Outskirts of Budapest

London, Nov. 8 — (CP) — The promise of explosive action hung today over the long eastern front, where for the past two days Moscow has announced there have been no essential changes.

Torrential rains hindered Red Army troops jabbing at the outskirts of Budapest. The Russians were moving infantrymen into the front lines beside their tanks, while Soviet artillery plumped shells into the city.

Berlin said the Russians were preparing for a new large-scale attack toward Tarnow in southwest Poland from the Soviet bridgehead on the west side of the Vistula river. The Nazis declared the Russians have been withdrawing mechanized

Cruiser Uganda, Britain's Gift To Canada, Visits Her Home Port

By JOHN LEBLANC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

An East Coast Canadian Port, Nov. 8. (CP)—Canada's most powerful ship of war—the Cruiser Uganda—has dipped her keel in the water of her adopted homeland for the first time, received the salutes of her fellow fighting craft, and gone off to seek the enemy on the open sea.

Standing like a titan among the lesser vessels of the Dominion's small-ship navy, the newly-commissioned Uganda spent several days at this base while she was primed to fighting pitch for her new role as Queen of the Canadian fleet.

The 8,000-ton package of punch, spruce in her new paint, came here from the United States navy yard where she had been turned over to Canada October 21. She had spent several months in the yard for the repair of war wounds suffered in hot action with the Royal Navy.

But there were no signs of the ravages of battle as the cruiser made her bow to Canada. Her 549 feet of fighting power, spiky with literally dozens of guns, looked as trim as the day she slid from the ways of a British yard two years ago.

Ugandas' fresh appearence belied her record. Already in her short career she had taken on a near-fatal wound in the blistering job of protecting the Salerno landings in the Mediterranean last year.

A Nazi glider bomb smashed through her upper deck, plunged past decks and then went out the ship's bottom to explode beneath her keel. Crippled and with her plates badly torn, the Uganda was saved only by top-flight damage control. The holed ship was taken to Malta, then Gibraltar, and from there she hobbled across the Atlantic on one engine for final repairs.

"She's a good ship", said Cmdr. Hugh Pullen, of Oakville, Ont., second in command to Capt. E. R. Mainguy aboard the Uganda. "She goes well, and she has a good feel to her". Cmdr. Pullen formerly skippered the Canadian destroyer Ottawa.

Most of the 59 officers aboard the big craft are Canadians, while the crew of 800 men that the Uganda carries is practically all Canadian.

Officers and men are ready now to take the ship into action. Most of the personnel, representing every province in the Dominion, have served aboard British cruisers at various times.

Kingpins of Uganda's offensive armament are her six-inch guns, which give her more slugging power than any other Canadian craft. Jane's fighting ships lists an even dozen six-inchers, plus eight four-inch anti-aircraft weapons and 16 smaller guns.

Americans Score Mile Gains Along 25-Mile Front

Heavy Fighting Reported Southeast of Aachen

London, Nov. 8 —(CP)— United States 3rd Army troops charged in a dawn offensive today at points along a 25-mile front between Metz and Nancy, seized four lightly-contested villages and scored advances up to a mile.

To the north, infantry of the 1st Army still battled strongly-reinforced Germans in the town of Vossenack, 13 miles southeast of Aachen. Bloody and as yet inconclusive fighting continued throughout the Hurtgen Forest area. Two enemy counter-attacks near Schmidt were broken.

The 3rd Army "substantially improved" its line between Nancy and Metz, a front dispatch said. Mid-way between the two French cities, the Americans crossed the Seille River. Resistance ranged from light to moderate.

Wreck Meuse R. Bridges.

In Holland, the Germans retreating to the north bank of the Meuse River had wrecked every river bridge between the sea and Hedel, north of 'S Hertogenbosch, a field dispatch said.

In southwestern Holland Polish forces of the 1st Canadian Army attacked the last remaining German pocket south of the Hollandsche Diep-Maas River line, at the southern entrance to the Moerdike bridges.

Farther west British forces were completing a mop-up job on flooded Walcheren Island, attacking an enemy pocket northwest of Domburg where fighting still continued for the only German artillery position left on the island.

The encounters southeast of Aachen—in which the Germans used heavy panzer units—were described by William Smith White, Associated Press War Correspondent at the front, as greater in scope than the battle for Aachen itself.

Hand-to-Hand Fighting.

In Vossenack, once seized by the Americans and then retaken by the enemy in a swift counter-thrust, a bitter hand-to-hand struggle raged through the centre of the town, and American artillery and fighter-bombers blasted at the enemy forces entrenched in every house in the northern half of the battered strongpoint.

The fight to clear up the French ports where isolated Nazi garrisons are holding out continued. Rocket-firing fighters destroyed two military buildings yesterday in one of these—Dunkerque.

Ross Munro, Canadian Press War Correspondent, said in a field dispatch that about 100 reinforcements were sent across the Hollandsche Diep to join the German Moerdike force which is hopelessly cut off as the Germans already have destroyed the bridges here.

The stand in this pocket is being made by about 300 enemy soldiers, Munro added.

Britain Pleased With Elections

London, Nov. 8 — (AP) — A new grand-scale conference of the "Big Three" before Christmas was regarded in diplomatic quarters today as an almost certain follow-up to President Roosevelt's re-election.

It was believed highly probable that the conference would be preceded by a meeting in Paris of Mr. Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Gen. deGaulle.

London's three evening newspapers all bannerlined President Roosevelt's re-election, and editorials hailed the result.

"Above all," said the London Star editorially, "he now has authority to act, without fear of electoral contradictions, in the setting up of the world security council. He can meet Mr. Churchill and Marshal Stalin again backed by a terrific vote of confidence to win the war outright and the peace."

The Evening Standard said: "The triumvirate whom all the world regards as the supreme architects of victory face future tasks every whit as colossal and inspiring as the grim conduct of the war."

The Evening News, saying that Britain had kept its lips sealed in an attitude of elaborate impartiality during the campaign, observed:

"It would be hypocritical to pretend that President Roosevelt did not have our friendly, if unspoken wishes in the fight."

"America will hit even harder now that all her belligerency can be used for export," the news declared.

Many Farm Workers Being Placed in Pulp Wood and Lumber Camps

With seasonal farm work beginning to be caught up for another year, many younger farm workers in the Bay of Quinte district and in the north part of Hastings county are being placed in lumber and pulp wood camps for winter employment, according to Mr. H. H. Reed, manager of the local selective service office here.

Such workers accepting employment for the winter months are given permits to work outside of their agricultural pursuits until March 30th when they are expected to again return to the farm. Approximately 20 young farmers in Hastings have already been given permits to work in camps for the winter months, it was stated.

Mr. Reed reported that from 1,200 to 1,500 men were needed in the pulp wood camps in Northern Ontario and that some men had been sent there from Hastings. Others in the northern part of Hastings had received permits to work in camps in their own area.

"Regardless of the need in Northern Ontario, we are going to look after our own interests in Hastings before men are sent out of the area," stated the selective service official.

Farmers in the northern end of the county do not need to travel to Belleville to secure a permit to work in camps for the winter months. They may pick up application forms at their local post office and apply by mail thereby saving themselves travel expense and time away from their employment.

Boys Overseas Welcome Fags From Kinsmen

"The only time I get cigarettes from Canada is when some organization like yours sends them. So you can plainly see how welcome they are here at the front," Gnr. R. C. Brown recently wrote in gratitude for "fags" received through the Kinsmen Fag Fund.

"Down here in Italy it's hot these days, and in more ways than one, but that's when we like to pause and light up a Canadian cigarette. So you can readily see how welcome your periodical shipments of cigarettes mean to we Belleville boys," wrote Bill Morgan from Italy. Similar letters of appreciation were received from "Beach" Payne, Tony Fardella, J. A. Lazier and scores of other Belleville boys sending their thanks for fags and urging more Canadian cigarettes be sent to our fighting forces, especially now that winter is approaching.

The following Belleville boys were each shipped 300 fags by the Belleville Kinsmen Club Fag Fund this week:—

Walter F. Allore To Head Assoc.

Twenty-five members of the Ontario Hotel Association for this district comprising the territory between Oshawa and Napanee and all points north of these two boundaries gathered at the Quinte Hotel on Monday to discuss business pertaining to the trade. The members were addressed by Jack Connell, managing director of the Ontario Hotel Association and H. A. Wilson, president of the Hotel Association for Canada.

Walter F. Allore was elected director of the district succeeding William H. Nugent, who has been appointed to the Ontario Hotel Board and thanked the members for the honor conferred on him. In the local district meeting, which comprises the territory from Belleville to Napanee, Picton and points north between Belleville and Napanee, C. B. Treverton was elected president with J. N. Yanover as vice president and Walter F. Allore as secretary treasurer.

POLICE BLOTTER

Police investigated the breaking of a window at the north side of the Belleville Collegiate Institute shortly after midnight Tuesday evening. Nearby residents heard the shattering of the window pane and notified police. They also reported as having seen a man wearing a dark coat run from the rear of the school. All was quiet when police arrived and no attempts to make entrance were in evidence.

Earlier in the evening prowlers were reported to have been loitering about a private garage at 323 Foster Ave. Here also the marauders had faded into the darkness before police arrived in the cruiser. No damage resulted.

Provincial Police are investigating the theft of a motor car at Brighton today after the vehicle was reported stolen late Tuesday night.

Many Local Men Enjoy Outing in Deer Country

If "Ole Buck Deer" now casting wary eyes at bushes and thickets bordering his favorite runways in the northern district could have a choice of human occupations from which to select the lethal bullet, he would have a wide variety from this city.

For back in the green-carpeted deerlands, lying in frost-covered runways at the crack o' dawn; cooking over hunting-cabin stoves or joining in the general hunting atmosphere at night are representatives of all phases of life.

Clad in the colorful mackinaws, red hunting caps, breeches and other outing paraphernalia are ministers, doctors, bakers, clerks, factory workers, office executives, industrialists, and others.

Dean of north country hunters, with the gleam of five decades of experience gleaming in still bright eyes, eighty-five-year-old Byron Lott, will shoulder his trusty rifle next week and go for the annual "buck". He seldom misses. With him will be Derby Jeffery and party.

Dr. Geo. H. Stobie with a Toronto friend is sojourning in the deer haunts of MacKenzie Lake while Sandy Lummis, Claire Boyle, Bill Davern of Wellington and party are enjoying the crisp hunting air of the "Otter River Hunt Club" Lummis-dubbed cabin that nestles somewhere north of Marmora.

Dr. Van Blaksley, Jos. Shortt, Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, Russ White and party, are raiding the runways at Weslemkoon Lake.

A large number of other hunters will leave next week for the annual sport. Over 300 licences have been sold in the district by Mr. Ed. Thomas.

Sgt. Francis Keilty Killed in Holland

Storming the sand dunes of Holland with the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, Sergeant Franis Keilty, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Keilty, of Tweed has been killed in action, an official cablegram informed his parents on Tuesday. He was 28 years of age.

Employed in a Sudbury Mining company at the time of his enlistment in April, 1942, Sergt. Keilty went overseas as a reinforcement in October, 1943. He trained extensively in England and went to France in June where he took part in the daring landing of his regiment on D-Day.

The late sergeant has two brothers, Tom at home, Andrew at Gananoque and two sisters, Dorothy of Belleville and Pauline of Peterborough. He was unmarried.

Maj. Angus Mowat's New Book Places Scene Of Action in District

Angus Mowat, that colorful gentleman with the rank of a major on his epaulettes, who drove the tortuous roads of M.D. 3 on his motorbike with dog "Elmer" mounted on the rear, for over two years, has literally broken into print.

The former liaison officer for the Reserve Army in this district, and now an inspector of libraries has written a book which should hold especial interest for residents of this district especially in the Trenton and Prince Edward County areas.

The book, "Carrying Place" which comes off the press in the near future has been well received by the critics. It deals with the life of a young veteran of the last war, and as is indicated by the title, the scene is laid in and around Carrying Place near Trenton. The author delves deeply into his store of military knowledge and through it weaves a fine pattern of romance that is bound to please lovers of stories of this type.

The book is Mr. Mowat's second literary venture. His first was "I'll Look Up."

He is well known in this district and was at one time connected with the library here. He was born in Trenton, near his beloved Bay of Quinte. He attended Queen's University following early education in Trenton. He enlisted in 1914 and saw service in the first Great War.

Returning he went into business but gave it up to look after bees in Hastings County.

Later after graduating from a library school, he became associated with libraries in Windsor, Saskatoon and Belleville. He joined the "Hasty Pees" in the present war and received an honorable discharge last year.

His ketch the "Scotch Bonnet" named after the lighthouse off the village of Wellington, is a familiar sight in Quinte waters. Its "Mowat" sails of many colors always attracted attention.

Premier Drew Stresses History and Literature

Toronto, Nov. 8 —(CP)— Premier Drew said last night the importance of literature and history in education has "not been recognised to the extent it should be." Speaking at the official opening of the first of three school libraries in East York, he said "the well-trained citizen, the ideal product of education, must have an understanding of his own religious principles, at least to the degree of achieving a clear and simple faith, and he must also have an understanding of literature and history."

Irwin's Garage, Deseronto Entered, Three Tires Taken

Although nearly caught in the act of robbery, thieves made off with three new tires from Irwin's garage in Deseronto shortly after midnight. The marauders were interrupted by Edgar Irwin, proprietor of the garage, who entered the garage by the front door after hearing a disturbance. As he came into the front of the premises the thieves escaped by a rear door and roared to the east in a high-powered car.

Forcer Rear Window

Entrance was gained by forcing a rear window, Chief Noel Langton told the Ontario Intelligencer today. "Before attempting to rob the garage the burglars first opened the rear garage door and backed a large black sedan to the entrance in preparation for a speedy get-away in the event of an emergency," Chief Langton stated.

Apparently the robbers had planned a wholesale robbery and speedy get-away from the garage as they had piled all of the available tires in the building near the rear entrance, along with the complete stock of cigarettes, tobaccos and candy. All of the loot, except the three missing tires, was found at the rear door by Mr. Irwin after the robbers raced away into the darkness. Napanee and Kingston police were notified while Chief Langton gave chase, but the robbers vanished. Mr. Irwin's alertness doubtlessly saved him from a serious loss.

Today Provincial Constables Driscoll and Hendren visited the scene of the robbery to continue the investigation, Inspector H. Storey revealed.

Hunters Return With Trophies Of the Hunt

If reports of local hunters already returned from the northern county districts are correct — and they have the goods to prove their story —the many sportsmen in the bush country in search of venison will have little difficulty in acquiring their quota.

After only two days of the hunting season, already three local hunters are back from the north part of the county with their respective quotas and all report plenty of deer. The three huntsmen who were successful in bringing down their quarry the first day of the season were Mr. "Ack" Ketcheson of Belleville, "Vic" Nolan of Trenton and Jack Lee of this city. The first two named hunters were members of an eight-man party hunting at Mink Lake in the Lake St. Peter district, while Mr. Lee hunted in the Millbridge area.

Mr. Ketcheson was successful in bringing down a 200-pound buck and Mr. Nolan a fine doe. Jack Lee brought down a 175-pound doe after being on the runway only two hours.

According to Mr. Ketcheson there are plenty of deer in the woods as is verified by the fact that his party bagged three on the first day of the season. There were also plenty of wolves in the Lake St. Peter district and were heard frequently both during the day and at night at comparatively close range. None was seen, however.

Hunters who expect to get a few partridge while deer hunting will be disappointed, however, as it is stated there seem to be very few birds in the woods. There is about an inch of snow in the Lake St. Peter district.

FO. Williamson Takes Plane To Target on 3 Engines

With R.C.A.F. Bomber Group Overseas — It takes a lot to surprise a reporter but F/O. Al Mercer of Toronto (34 Strathcona Ave.) bomb aimer, formerly of the Globe & Mail, owns that an incident, on his 33th sortie did at least that.

During the first of two operations against Duisburg not long ago, the motor of Mercer's Iroquois Squadron Halifax "conked out" about an hour before reaching the target.

The pilot, F/O. H. F. "Knute" Williamson of Belleville, Ont., continued though his bomb-heavy aircraft lost height steadily on the three engines remaining.

"Our low altitude over the target turned out to be an advantage," Al smiled. "The flak barrage burst thousands of feet over our heads. It must have been terrible up there."

He learned that their height was also a disadvantage. When the Halifax neared the aiming point, intent on his bombsight, something made Mercer look up quickly. Just outside the nose window two huge bombs whizzed by. He realised that if the Halifax had been a few feet farther ahead at that second, it would have been his last.

FRANKFORD

H. Powell, D.F.C., And Mrs. Powell Are Entertained

Frankford, Nov. 8 — Stockdale and surrounding communities were well represented on Thursday evening when a homecoming party was held for F.O. Harvey Powell D.F.C. and Mrs. Powell at the United Church. Rev. H. H. Lackey acted as chairman and a short program was enjoyed. Solos were contributed by Miss Madeline Walt, Miss Helen Charlesworth and Miss Vera Frost. Misses Florence MacDonald and Doris Leitch sang a duet. A reading was given by Mrs. Will Johnson. Mr. Ernest Anderson read an address to the young couple, who were married in England only a short time before returning home. A beautiful chest of silver was presented to them as well as several gifts of money. Harvey and Mrs. Powell both spoke briefly thanking their many friends for the handsome gift. A social hour brought to a close this enjoyable evening.

F.O. Powell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Powell of Stockdale. After graduation from public school he attended continuation school at Frankford. He enlisted in 1940 with the R.C.A.F. and received his training at No. 2 Wireless School at Calgary, going overseas in Dec. 1941, as a wireless operator and gunner.

After completing his first tour of operations over enemy territory he spent about a year and a half as an instructor in England. In 1942 he received his commission as Pilot Officer and began his second tour of operations which lasted from beginning of invasion to finish. In all he has made 57 trips over enemy territory, totalling about 1200 flying hours.

In June of 1944 F.O. Powell received the Distinguished Flying Cross. He returned to Canada in October and will be posted here in future.

F.O. Powell has two brothers in the services, Cecil Powell with the Army in Italy and Garnet with the Royal Canadian Navy and another brother Jack at home.

In July of 1944, he married Miss Grace Howard, W.D., of Kolona, B.C., whom he met while on training operations in Western Canada.

Red Cross News.

Considerably more interest was shown at Red Cross work room on Tuesday afternoon but there is still a great need for workers of all kinds. Much sewing and knitting is to be done, also quilting and the making of surgical supplies. Knitting and sewing may be taken home by those who are free to do a measure of work there in their spare time.

A bouquet of chrysanthemums donated by Mrs. W. Watson was raffled and won by Mrs. W. B. McClung. A donation of $1.00 was turned in from Miss Walker's class at College Street School.

During the rationing of tea this pick-up for the workers in the afternoon was discontinued but now that tea is again plentiful the ladies are again enjoying this treat.

Charge Dismissed.

Mrs. Margaret Wright, Carrying Place, appeared in Trenton Police Court on Tuesday afternoon charged with dangerous driving as the result of a serious accident some weeks ago, but the charge against her was dismissed by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, after hearing the evidence of Henry Dwyer, and John Nancarrow. Both testified that the gas car which Mrs. Wright's car is alleged to have struck, had stopped before proceeding over the crossing, but both were unable to swear whether or not the signal system was working. On the other hand, T. Burns, section man working at the station when the accident occurred swore that the signal system was working. All agreed, however, that the car was being driven at a moderate rate of speed and the Magistrate could not find a sufficient degree of negligence to warrant a conviction of dangerous driving. Both Mrs. Wright, and her mother, Mrs. Fred Fairman, swore that the signal system was not working.

The charge against Mrs. Wright was laid after the car which she was driving on October 17, in the afternoon, allegedly struck a gas car on the Dundas Street West crossing of the C.N.R. On the car at the time were Walter Connelly, of Bannockburn and three Trenton men. Connelly suffered a fractured leg and is still confined to Belleville hospital. The others received minor injuries and two of them gave evidence in court on Tuesday.

Clifford Fitchett, charged with careless driving had his case enlarged for one week.

Donald Crowe, M. Greenley, Everett Cook, were all fined $10 and costs for careless driving.

Thomas Chewchuk paid $5 and costs for failing to give a signal when making a left turn. He was involved in a slight accident.

Jack Mundy paid $5 and costs for failing to obey a traffic signal. J. Redner was fined $25 and costs for careless driving and F. Smith paid $50 on a similar charge.

B. Jones and E. Smith were fined $5 and costs each, for speeding, while W. Wood paid $5 and costs for failing to have his name on the side of his truck.

Eight paid the usual $10 and costs for breach of the Liquor Control Act.

Twenty-three cases in all came before the Magistrate with S. Gordon Robertson, Assistant Crown Attorney, prosecuting.

move and we are sorry we ever did such a thing".

Following questioning, the trio was taken in a police van to the Toronto jail.

The youths were captured by William Black, a former Toronto detective and now a store operator. Walking through the store's coffee shop, Black spotted the trio, and, growing suspicious, asked for their registration cards. Unable to produce the identification, the three admitted they had escaped from the Belleville jail. Black then summoned help and two detectives rushed over from the city hall to take charge of the prisoners.

Black, helped by two women store detectives, first trailed the youths from the ground floor. They had lunches in their pockets which they said a farmer "somewhere down east" had provided.

Germany Says V-2 Secret Weapon Used on Britain

London, Nov. 8, (CP)—The German High Command announced today that London has been under bombardment by a new secret weapon, V-2, "for some weeks".

The Berlin broadcast of the German communique said "a new weapon, much more effective" than the V-1 flying bomb has been launched against the British capital.

The V-2 has been described in dispatches from Stockholm as a missile resembling a "flying telephone pole" with a range of more than 250 miles. The weapon, accord to Stockholm reports, is said to have possibilities of being developed into a rocket bomb capable of spanning the Atlantic.

Victory Certain Says Wilson

Allied Headquarters, Mediterranean Nov. 8 (CP Reuter)—Victory is certain said Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Allied Supreme Commander in the Mediterranean, in an order of the day today marking the second anniversary of the Allied landings in North Africa.

He said: "We rejoice equally in the Allied triumphs on the western front, on the eastern front and in the Pacific.

"They're all part of one global war.

"The importance of our share in the war in Europe is as great as ever, and will remain so until the end. Victory is certain. Let us see to it that it is not long delayed"

No One Surprised Says Berlin Radio

New York, Nov. 8 (AP) — The American people must "bear the consequences of Roosevelt's re-election," which surprised no one, the Berlin radio said today.

"Roosevelt's leading motive is to avoid everything that may displease the Kremlin and he is even willing to deliver his Chungking Chinese ally into the hands of Communism" the official D.N.B. agency commented. "This servile attitude was rewarded by Moscow with support of Roosevelt's re-election.

"The American people will be burdened with very great sacrifices in view of Roosevelt's well-known tendency to stake all on one single card without remembering former election promises. Europe will answer Roosevelt's re-election by doubling its efforts to frustrate eastern Communism and western capitalism."

Berlin asserted that "victorious termination of the war against Japan is and will remain the hinge around which Washington's foreign policy revolves."

Youthful Orators Heard at Club

Youthful orators from the Columbian Squires occupied the spotlight at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday at the Quinte Hotel when Boyd Upper, Ted Doyle and John Boyle spoke on the Robot Bomb, Marshal Tito and Argentina. These young boys have appeared at several meetings to give their discourses and at each place they have been roundly applauded for their perfect diction, their art of delivery and fine appearance. Tommy Mascaro acted as chairman and explained the objectives of the Columbian Squires, which are the developments of the fine arts, public speaking, athletics and the spiritual teaching. Their addresses were most heartily appreciated by the club and the thanks was ably expressed by Lawrence Kells.

The meeting was presided over by Jack McVeigh, who announced the election of Lorne McDougall to the post of president for next year. Lorne thanked the members for the honor conferred upon him and made one appointment, that of chairman of membership his choice being Jack McIntosh who has rendered most valuable service in that chairmanship for some years. Mark Vanner reported that the Scout Apple Day netted $527 and he thanked all the members of his committee for the fine help given in raising such a fine sum. A letter from the Kinsmen Club was read thanking the Kiwanis Club for the assistance given at the Shell-Out party held in the Armouries on Hallowe'en night. It would be useless to repeat the speeches of the three boys because they have been covered in previous issues at different service clubs.

THE LATE MR. WICKEL

Equipped for placer mining and wearing a confident smile, Rudolph Wickel, of Verona, N.J., is shown leaving New York, en route to Holyoke, Mass., to dig up a bonanza of $1,000 whose location had been sold him as a studio guest at the radio program "Truth or Consequence." Unfortunately some hundreds of Holyoke citizens went out hunting too and when he arrived the $1,000 already had been found by Joseph E. Roy and his brother-in-law, of Holyoke. Under the law, buried treasure belongs to the finder. However, Wickel may get a consolation prize.

2 Jew Terrorists Confess Killing Of Lord Moyne

Cairo, Nov. 8. (AP)—British officials announced today that two Jews from Palestine, claiming membership in the Sternist organization, had confessed the assassination of Lord Moyne, British resident commissioner in the Middle East.

The confession was given to two members of the Palestine police who arrived here yesterday, a day after the diplomatic member of the Guinness Brewing family had been shot down at his residence, the British spokesman said.

The men were quoted as saying they came to Egypt with the express purpose of killing Lord Moyne. His chauffeur also was killed.

The police also quoted the men as declaring that the policies of the resident minister were prejudicial to Jewish aspirations for a national home in Palestine, and giving that reason for the assassination.

Their names were announced as Mosche Cohen Itzak, and Ch. Salzmann.

"We are members of the Fighters for Freedom of Israel organization and what we have done was done on the instructions of this organization", the prisoners were quoted.

Officials said this organization was the Stern gang, which has been charged with numerous acts of terrorism in Palestine.

Dortmund Canal Bombed Again

London, Nov. 8. (CP)—Big formations of United States bombers crossed the east coast this morning and shortly afterwards German radio stations started going off the air, the usual sign of a heavy raid on Germany from the west.

After the heaviest bombing siege of the war, with more than 26,000 tons of bombs falling on Germany in three days, bomber crews of the R.A.F. and the 8th U.S. Air Force were given a much-needed rest on Tuesday.

Italy-based Fortresses and Liberators of the U.S. 15th Air Force, however, made heavy attacks on troop concentrations and rail targets in Yugoslavia, Northern Italy and Austria. Despite bad weather British and American fighter-bombers based on the continent also carried out attacks on key railway yards, bridges and gun positions along the western front.

A large railway bridge at Goch, just across the Dutch frontier southeast of Nijmegen, an oil storage tank and railway sheds at Emmerich were smashed by the R.A.F.'s famous rocket-firing Typhoons, which also destroyed two more Nazi-occupied building at Dunkerque. United States light bombers cut a number of rail lines and bridges in the Ruhr.

Meanwhile, the Air Ministry disclosed that R.A.F. Lancasters had again drained the Dortmund-Ems Canal, Germany's most important inland waterway, in a spectacular operation last Saturday. The canal was hit at exactly the same point—where it divided into two branches—as was smashed Sept. 23.

German Labor crews had just completed repairs on the embankment so the Canal would hold water again.

Monty Had Pre-War Ideas on Invasion

London, Nov 8. (CP)—Six years ago, before the war, a small combined operation was carried out as a test by a brigade of infantry which embarked in Portsmouth harbor and went ashore at Stokes Bay.

The soldiers wearing the "Battle dress" of the day—Norfolk jackets, lace-up gaiters and deer stalkers hats—were under command of a little-known officer, Brig. Bernard Montgomery.

"I like to think", said Lt.-Gen. W. D. Morgan, general officer commanding, Southern Command who told the story, "that Field Marshal Montgomery looks back on those days and derives considerable satisfaction in view of the successful operation in France".

ADMITS WITHDRAWAL

London, Nov. 8. (CP-Reuter) — Berlin today admitted a withdrawal in Holland. The German Transocean News Agency said:

BLIMP CRASHES

Boston, Nov. 8 — (AP) — One man is dead and a second is listed as missing in the wake of a navy blimp crash at sea about 12 miles east of Cape Cod, first naval headquarters announced yesterday. The announcement said eight survivors and the dead man had been picked up by naval vessels engaged in search operations.

Six to Eight Persons Killed

Sacramento, Calif., Nov. 8- (AP) —Six to eight persons were killed and 75 to 80 injured in the derailment of the Southern Pacific's westbound Challenger near Colfax this morning, California Highway Patrol Headquarters reported.

Southern Pacific officials said their information was meagre, but that the death of the engineer of the train was confirmed.

The Highway Patrol Headquarters here said 15 ambulances had been sent from the Dewitt General Hospital, near Auburn.

The Patrol Headquarters said injured included both military and civilian personnel.

COLLECTIONS DECREASE

Ottawa, Nov. 8 (CP)—Collections by the Revenue Department totalled $232,343,281 during October, a decrease of $7,439,079 from October, 1943, Revenue Minister Gibson announced today.

Income tax collections amounted to $137,418,136, a decline of $11,257,588 from last October, while customs and excise collections came to $94,825,145, up $3,818,509.

Income tax collections for the first seven months of this fiscal year April to October inclusive amounted to $979,898,517, an increase of $37,598,688 over the corresponding period last year.

Canada's Seventh Loan Edges Past Billion Dollars

Ottawa, Nov. 8—(CP)—Canada's Seventh Victory Loan in its third and final week yesterday edged past the $1,000,000,000 mark on the way to an objective of $1,300,000,000, but the day's total was $11,000,000 below the 14th day in the previous campaign.

Yesterday's purchases of $75,826,750 brought the cumulative total for the seventh loan to $1,050,281,650.

The drop in yesterday's result was in the large subscription group, many of which were recorded earlier in this campaign than in the sixth loan.

On the 14th day of that campaign large buyers signed applications for approximately $57,400,000 while only $28,700,000 came from individual subscribers. In yesterday's total $35,933,150 came from individuals with $39,893,600 from large buyers. Cumulative purchases by individuals now amount to $475,663,550.

As the loan now stands, 77.8 per cent of the canvassing time has elapsed but only 74.4 per cent of the sixth loan total, which was slightly in excess of $1,400,000,000, has so far been raised. The large buyers with $574,618,100 are somewhat below their purchases six months ago, due to the falling off in today's figures. The purchases of individual Canadians are better than 74 per cent of the $643,000,000 which they purchased in the sixth loan.

On the total dollar value of purchases, the present loan is approximately $40,000,000 ahead of the same stage of the sixth loan.

Japan Changes Four Admirals

San Francisco, Nov. 8 — (AP) — Four new Japanese generals and admirals have been named to take over command of badly battered Nipponese forces in the Philippines in an effort to stop the American invasion, Tokyo radio reported today.

Bullet - headed Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, one of Japan's most successful field commanders, was named Commander-in-Chief of land forces in the Archipelago.

Admiral Denshichi Okochi, who led landing parties in "the Shanghai incident of 1937," was appointed to command naval forces in the Philippines area. Vice Admiral Shigeu Fukutome and Vice Admiral Takijiro Onishi were named joint commanders of naval air units in the Philippines.

Democrats Capture Senate Majority

Washington, Nov. 8 (CP)—Democrats today clinched a majority of the treaty-ratifying Senate and took stronger control of the House of Representatives as well as returns continued to roll in from Tuesday's congressional elections. The 79th Congress will convene Jan. 3 predominantly Democratic.

Presidential intimates in the Senate will be enabled to route important international commitments, perhaps even the final peace treaty ending the second Great War, through the legislative machinery. The United States Constitution requires that a two-thirds majority of the Senate approve all treaties made with other countries.

Long before dawn the Democratic party clinched a mathematical Senate majority. Not since President Roosevelt carried the party into power in 1932 have the Democrats lost control of the Senate but successive elections sharply reduced their majority and the Republican this year, for the first time in 12 years, had a chance of getting a slim majority. Of the 36 seats at stake yesterday Democrats took 15, Republicans 7, with 13 to come.

Poppy and Remembrance

Blood-red symbol of remembrance, the poppy this year will take on a deeper significance for many Canadians. Discovered carpeting the blood-stained fields of France, and waving gently over many a soldier's grave of the last war, it was selected by veterans of the first great struggle as symbolic of the sacrifice made by their comrades.

Down through the years since the Armistice, the red flower has become a household word synonymous with remembrance. Each year at the commemoration of the Armistice, its soft petals and red beauty are revived by veterans. Each year the people of Canada and the Empire are reminded by the little flowers of the terrific sacrifice made by those heroes of the first war and the present one.

The poppy is playing a dual role. Not only does it signify the blood of those who gave their all for Freedom, those who came back maimed and disabled, and those who fought in the great struggles, but its production each year opens a channel of employment for veterans unable to do anything else.

Canadians as a rule, do not forget. During the past five years the terrible meaning of the word "War" has been brought home to families who heretofore had missed the enveloping tentacles of the greatest scourge on earth. Today there are many vacant chairs around family firesides; chairs which will not be occupied by former members of the family.

Canadians, we are sure, will not forget. They will not forget those bright-eyed laughing sons who gaily marched away to war. They will not forget those grey-haired sires who even now bear the scars of the first great holocaust. They will not forget those gallant youngsters who now are savagely driving the forces of tyranny back to their spawning ground. They will not forget them when they come back.

They will not forget those who have come back, or who will come back and who have paid the sad price for us in the loss of sight, hearing, health and limb. These can be helped.

Poppy Day in Belleville is being held on Saturday, November 11th. Residents, it is felt, will not need much urging to purchase the little flowers. Remembrance is symbolized in all its phases. For those who have given their all; those who are now fighting, and those who, unable to follow their former vocations in life, are producing the poppies in order that we can more readily remember.

Premier-Marshal Stalin

Those who have read the speeches of Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin have been struck with the great vigor of this leader of the Russian people, a vigor which shows itself not only in his administration of the farflung Soviet Union in peace and war with its many races and its varied territory but also in his military genius and in his gift in expression, all called to serve Russia at the same time. His oratory is of a kind that is direct and carries an inspiring message to his native country. No speech that he makes but furthers the Allied cause. His words are carefully weighed and what he says goes far by its convincing logic and its fervent appeal.

In his last speech this week he pointed to facts that stood out in the early days of the war when the Allies were comparatively weak because they were not ready. He indicated that the peace-loving nations always are ill-prepared for war while the aggressive nations are usually better prepared. In this instance he speaks of "unpleasant facts as the Pearl Harbor incident and the loss of the Philippines and the other islands in the Pacific and the loss of Hong Kong and Singapore" which "cannot be treated as mere coincidence. Japan as an aggressor nation was better prepared than Britain and the United States who were pursuing a policy of peace.

Then he turns to draw a lesson from Russia herself as he goes on, "Neither can we treat as a coincidence such unpleasant facts as the loss of the Ukraine, White Russia and the Baltic area in the very first year of the war, when Germany as an aggressor nation was better prepared for war than the Soviet Union was." Then in his irresistible argument he proceeded to say that it would be simple-minded to think that Germany would not after defeat attempt to restore her power and start to develop a new aggression. "Everybody knows the German rulers are already preparing for a new war." His argument for an armed organization with power and resources was presented very clearly.

Marshal Stalin possesses the oratorical gift of marshalling of facts in the most logical and impressive manner. Even across the differences of the idioms of Russian and English languages the speeches of Stalin strike English-readers with their great effectiveness. The Premier-Marshal has acquired the art of reiteration of a phrase such as that with which he so often closed his addresses, repeating the appeal for the defeat of the Hitlerites.

Marshal Stalin is a man of rare and great gifts and he shows co-ordination of these gifts in his outlook upon history. He speaks for Russia and his language is one that the entire outside Allied world knows and appreciates. His firm grasp of the principles of government and of the conduct of war places this Russian leader among the great. He has long since shown how great a fortune it was that brought him forward to the leadership of the powerful Soviet Union in which he could so ably co-operate with the other peace-loving nations in the task of crushing Hitler and Nazism.

Scriptures for Troops

The British and Foreign Bible Society in Canada and Newfoundland has reported an issue of 690,000 presentation New Testaments through the chaplaincy department in the five-year period of the present war. 32,000 have been sent to hospitals, prisons and internment camps, including supplies to Hong Kong. 3,800 New Testaments and Gospels in waterproof envelopes have been placed in life-saving craft of the R.C.N., the R.C.A.F., and the Merchant Service. This latter thoughtfulness prompted a sailor, one of only four survivors of fifty-one men adrift at sea for weeks, to say, "There was a New Testament which gave me and others, I am sure, a lot of comfort." The cost of these special war services up to date has been $85,000.

Throughout the ages men and women have sought and found strength in Holy Writ. It has always inspired the noblest deeds of men. Heroes have dedicated their lives to its teachings.

Plastics

Such terms as "synthetic resin" and "low-pressure lamination" may not mean much to the average citizen; but they are going to mean a lot in his daily life after the war, says The Chicago News.

One of the big chemical companies announces that it has developed a new synthetic resin plastic capable of being molded under low-pressure lamination processes into articles of virtually any size or shape. Up to now, mass production of molded plastics has been restricted to relatively small objects — radio cabinets, instrument housings, handle knobs, trimmings and small sheets, tubes and shapes.

Under the new system a fabric core tailored to the proper shape, is impregnated with the plastic, under heat and pressure, making possible three-dimensional molds of bathtubs, luggage, boats, furniture, wall panels, automobile fenders, or trailer bodies.

Transparent plastics will preserve the colors and pattern of the fabrics. Colored plastics will provide a wide range of permanent finishes. Ceramics, wood and metal will face the competition of a new and highly flexible material.

QUESTION

Oh, would life better be, I often wonder,
If never came the lightning or the thunder;

If hopes were sure, and disappointments never,
And man could hold his happiness forever?

Would all so eagerly await tomorrow
If never felt our hearts the sting of sorrow?

If doubt were done with; fear no more a fetter,
Would life for mortals then be worse or better?

The future's dark; its paths with hurt attended,
But what if life, as death, found all things ended?

THE FRETFUL PORCUPINE

It is a common but erroneous belief that porcupines "shoot" or "throw" their quills at an enemy when attacked.

This belief is very old. About the year 1300 A.D. Marco Polo said: "Here (a region somewhere in the interior of Asia) are found porcupines, which roll themselves up when the hunters set their dogs at them, and with great fury shoot out the quills or spines with which their skins are furnished, wounding both men and dogs."

The quills or spines, which assume an upright position when the animal is disturbed, just as the hair stands up on a cat's back, are loosely attached to the body and tail and come out upon the slightest contact with other objects. When attacked the porcupine thrashes about actively with its tail and if the tail comes into contact with brush or other objects the tail quills are likely to be knocked out or detached. Frequently they are scattered around to a considerable extent.

Under such circumstances the flying quills might readily give the impression that they are voluntarily thrown or "shot" at the enemy. They are not, however, actually thrown or shot out in the sense of being discharged by a propulsive effort of the animal other than the thrashing and flicking of its tail.

Quills are frequently embedded in the flesh of animals that attack porcupines. Dogs that attack these animals usually get their noses full of quills for their pains.

When attacked the porcupine does not roll itself into a ball, as often stated. It charges backwards. Each quill is barbed and is so sharp that it seldom causes bleeding. The point often "works through" the part injured and causes great pain.

Wolves, dogs, lynxes and other carnivorous animals that attack "quill pigs," as they are called in Canada, sometimes get so many of these quills in their heads and mouths that they starve to death because of their inability to eat.

A large porcupine may contain as many as 355,000 quills scattered among its hair. The animal's flesh is edible and was considered a delicacy by the Indians.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

RE. GAS PLANT

To the Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Permit me first to thank you, Mr. Editor, for allowing space in your valuable paper at this time. Three cheers for the freedom of the press.

With reference to the letter of Alderman R. A. Pringle of Oct. 28th. I regret he has not seen fit to answer my letter of Oct. 21st. However wisely or unwisely he points out that the Utility made a good profit for three years after the City took over from the Ontario Shore Gas Co.

If profits could be shown at this time when the ebb of business was very low, why cannot this Utility be made to pay in these prosperous times?

In view of this state of affairs it is evident that Mr. Bean touched a vunerable spot in his denunciation of the management of the Utility.

For further confirmation, may I point out that after having purchased two gas ranges from the Belleville Utility Commission I found that this commission had no expert who could advise me in the operation or adjustment of these ranges, which again brings out the lamentable truth that the Gas Department is being run by a commission who does not apparently understand anything about gas appliances under conditions such as these. How could anyone expect them to make a success of it?

Mr. Bean suggested that this Utility be placed under the management of a gas expert responsible only to Council and in this I heartily agree.

What does Mr. Pringle mean by compensation?

I am in a certain business which has been tried again and again with electricity and could not be made to work. It was for this reason that before I started in his line of business that I asked the advice of the Mayor at that time and others and was advised that gas was going to be permanent in Belleville. Upon those assurances given me I made my investment and have been successful.

Does the Alderman propose that by compensating they will assume all responsibilities thereafter and compensate me for my total investment besides my past three years work?

I am sure had Alderman Pringle been aware of all the facts of the Gas Co. and had he known that practically all our industries, drug stores, dentists, restaurants, bakeries, etc. use gas, he would have taken a different stand.

Permit me to call your attention to all the new homes that have gone up in the City and none with gas. Apparently something must be lacking with our sales department in our Gas Utilities Commission.

In reply to the letter of Householder of Nov. 4th. being troubled for four years with gas, which again goes to prove that our Gas Utility is not getting proper attention. I would suggest this party get in touch with the Health Department and am sure this will get attention very soon.

Thanking you,
Yours Sincerely,
Geo. Devuyst,
30 Bridge St. E.

Bitter Battle Rages for Ormoc On Leyte Island

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 8—(AP)—One of the bitterest battles of the Leyte campaign rocked the road to Ormoc today as United States troops and units of four Japanese divisions collided in ridges south of Pinamopoan.

The fight began when probing American advance parties were cut off in a series of Japanese counter-attacks.

The Americans extricated their isolated units after a night of fighting and U. S. long-range artillery—possibly firing over the mountains from the Jero area—harassed the Japanese rear at Ormoc and Valencia, starting fires in warehouses and hitting fuel dumps. They also assaulted enemy traffic in the narrow, winding road north from Ormoc to the current front line.

American fighting planes dive-bombed Palompon, on the west coast. This port is the only one from which Japanese units north of Ormoc could hope to escape if they were cut off from Ormoc by the southern prong of the American pincers.

In eastern Leyte, where large-scale Japanese resistance has been crushed, Americans wiped out remaining enemy pockets in the hills near Patok and Dagami.

Hundreds of carrier planes from the U. S. 3rd Fleet, in two knockout blows at Manila, increased to 1,000 the total Japanese aircraft they have destroyed and to 71 the warships they have helped sink or damage since Gen. Douglas MacArthur invaded the Philippines.

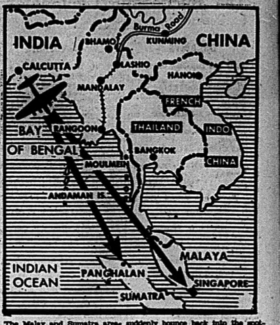
OPEN SEASON FOR DEER IN ALDBOROUGH AND DUNWICH TOWNSHIP

St. Thomas, Nov. 8 —(CP)— Deer have become so numerous in Aldborough and Dunwich Township that the Game and Fisheries Department has declared an open season from Nov. 20 to Nov. 23. Farmers have complained that the deer were destroying crops.

SIREN AS FIREHALL BELL

Waterloo, Nov. 8 —(CP)— For nearly 75 years the bell in the firehall here has called attention to blazes. Council has bought a modern siren but hasn't decided yet what to do with the two-ton bell. Some councillors think the tower too old to bear the bell's weight. Others consider the bell an heirloom.

NEW TARGET OF SUPERFORTS



The Malay and Sumatra areas suddenly bounce back into the spotlight as the result of the record daylight flight of a B-29 Superfortresses from India, during which they blasted targets in the great naval base at Singapore and on northern Sumatra. No details of the raids were immediately available, but it is believed that considerable damage was done to the former bastion on the tip of the Malay peninsula.

MONKEYING WITH BLOOD PRESSURE

Mrs. W. informs me she has been taking garlic pills for her high blood pressure, but the pills are so expensive. . . .

There is a lot of high blood pressure about the country, too, and from the queries about it in the daily mail I infer that a great deal of it is sadly neglected or maltreated, as in the case of Mrs. W.

I am taking the lady's high blood pressure on her own statement—she does not say that a physician found the blood pressure too high. In many instances wiseacres assume the blood pressure is too high when in fact the blood pressure is not higher than it should be or must be to maintain good circulation.

It is difficult to comprehend why so many people believe garlic or something made from it has some influence upon the pressure of the blood in the arteries. Can it be ascribed to the power of suggestion—the fact that nostrums containing garlic or a garlic derivative are exploited as remedies for high blood pressure?

Even if garlic or anything else were a specific cure or remedy for high blood pressure, and a dose or a month's medication with it would bring high blood pressure down to normal, the wisdom or safety of using such a remedy would still be questionable.

Blood pressure is what makes the blood circulate. It is comparable with the water pressure in the municipal water supply—the normal pressure is sufficient for all ordinary requirements, but in some emergencies a fire engine may be necessary to increase the water pressure and get the water to where it is needed. Just so, it is sometimes necessary to increase blood pressure to get the blood through in sufficient amount to where it is needed.

Momentary or sudden increase in blood pressure occurs under emotional excitement —nature's way of preparing the individual for fight or flight, as circumstance may require. This change in blood pressure occurs, be it noted, whether the individual actually does fight or run away or just strives to restrain the impulse and preserve decorum.

Besides repressed or unexpressed emotions, probably the abuse of tea, coffee and tobacco—I say the abuse of these things—contributes to the development of pathological conditions of which increased blood pressure is one manifestation, notably cardiovascular degeneration. If you would learn more about this consult CVD, booklet about heart and artery wearing out, available on request (no clipping) if you inclose ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

The sensible thing to do about high blood pressure is to leave it to your doctor to deal with it—as you would high temperature or elevation of pulse rate, wouldn't you?

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

A Nip of Iodine

I am 23 years old and just seem to be tired all the time. I work at an easy job from 7 to 3 and when I get home I can go right to bed and sleep till next morning—it is getting so that I do nothing but work and sleep and am too tired to go out in the evening. (M. M. H.)

Answer —In two pages you tell precious little about yourself, daughter, but it can do no harm, at any rate, to begin taking an Iodin Ration—a drop or two of Mild Tincture of Iodine in water two or three times a week. Send stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for (do not send a clipping) "Instruction for Taking an Iodin Ration". This is advisable for all growing children, youths and young adults who are not under medical care, and especially if the "tiredness" is associated with gloomy spirit or lack of the normal cheerfulness of youth.

Cough Medicine

Last winter I read in your booklet "Call it Cri" about terpin hydrate capsules for winter cough. I started taking one twice a day for about six weeks, and had no more cough all winter. Would it be all right to take them again this winter, if or when I get bronchitis again? God bless. . . . (C. J.)

Answer—Yes, God bless America, a free country, and yet some of the medical brethren submit that very suggestion of mine to certain susceptible publishers and editors as evidence that my teachings and advice are dangerous to the public. It is all right to repeat the course of terpin hydrate this coming winter if you need it. On p. 32 of the same booklet you will find instructions for making and using Foolproof Cough Medicine—for man, woman or child, and on p. 22 you will find What to Do about the Cri ("cold" to you, dumpkopf). For the booklet send 25 cents and stamped envelope bearing your address. When I say envelope I mean an ordinary size, not a toy envelope.

British Troops Make Progress

Rome, Nov. 8 —(CP)— Polish troops of the British 8th Army are making "good progress" in high ground between the Rabbi and Montone rivers near Italy's Adriatic coast, and have captured the important hill feature of Monte Casluda, an Allied communique said today.

The hill fell only after fierce fighting, and several German counter-attacks upon it since have been beaten off.

To the west San Ruffillo on the Florence-Forli road fell to other Allied units which advanced into high ground beyond the highway.

On other sectors along the front inclement weather limited Allied activity to patrolling.

Hun Merchant Ship Is Destroyed By Canadian Craft

A British Port, Nov. 7 —(CP Cable)—A large German merchant vessel was destroyed and an E-boat set afire by the 29th Canadian flotilla of motor torpedo boats in a blazing ten-hour action off the Netherlands coast recently, it was announced yesterday.

A heavily-escorted German convoy was sighted off the Hook of Holland just after dark on Nov. 1 by a flotilla unit under the command of Lt.-Cmdr. Tony Law, D.S.C., of Quebec City. A 3,000-ton merchant vessel and a barge towed by a tug was escorted by several trawlers, armed coasters, four minesweepers and eight R-boats.

The Germans illuminated the sky with star shells as the M.T.B.S. closed in and engaged the R-boats. One torpedo boat commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. C. A. Burg, D.S.C., of Toronto, broke through the protective screen and fired two torpedoes into the merchantmen which disappeared in a large pall of black smoke. Later Burk's boat set an enemy R-boat afire with direct gun hits.

During the entire action the Canadian force suffered only two casualties, both from a vessel commanded by Lieut. Glenn Creba of Winnipeg. They were AB. Harry Broadley of St. Catharines, Ont., who was fatally wounded by shrapnel and AB. A. Bevan of Charlottetown, who was slightly wounded in the heel.

Early in the attack one M.T.B. commanded by Lieut. L. C. Bishop of Sherbrooke, Que., was hit by enemy fire in the bow but returned to base under own power.

After several exchanges of gun fire the convoy turned and fled.

Pipe Industry 400 Years Old

Broseley, England, Nov. 8. (CP)—Clay pipes have been made in this Shropshire town since before Sir Walter Raleigh brought tobacco from America in 1565, but manufacturing today centres around one man only, publican Harry Southorn.

His favorite pipe is "Broseley's Pride", a magnificent job with a coiled stem which, if straightened, would stretch for 18 feet.

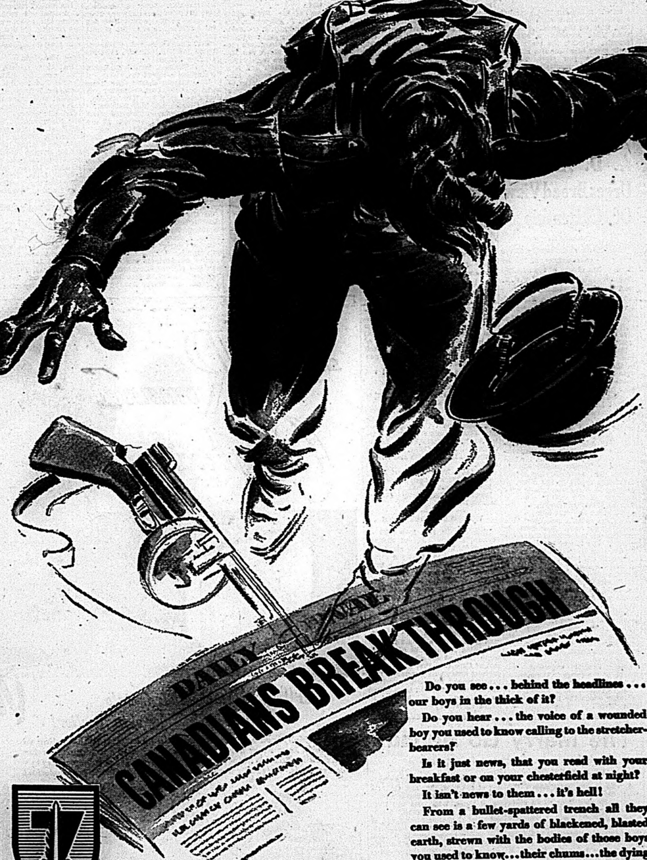
PARIS TAXI — CYCLE STYLE

Here is a typical Paris taxi of today — a bike-taxi — with the driver enjoying a snooze inside as he waits for a fare.



IS IT SIMPLY NEWS TO YOU?

Do you see . . . behind the headlines . . . our boys in the thick of it?

Do you hear . . . the voice of a wounded boy you used to know calling to the stretcher-bearers?

Is it just news, that you read with your breakfast or on your chesterfield at night?

It isn't news to them . . . it's hell!

From a bullet-spattered trench all they can see is a few yards of blackened, blasted earth, strewn with the bodies of those boys you used to know . . . their chums . . . the dying and the dead!

All they know is that this bit of ridge must be taken, this river must be crossed, this last machine-gun nest must be silenced.

Do you ever figure what it costs to hold each bit of ridge . . . to cross each tiny river? . . . Lives! Lives! More Lives!

Weapons help!

Weapons save lives!

Keep sending them!

Send more this time than ever before!

And when you buy that extra bond . . . a little grudgingly, maybe? . . . think of what those chaps over there have parted with . . . perhaps for ever!

Sixty Members Of Sodality Attend Meeting

About sixty members of the Sodality of the Children of Mary of Saint Michael's parish met on Monday evening for their monthly meeting. Presiding was Miss Gertrude Lynch. Reverend Sister Mary Lenore, directress of the Sodality was also present. After the reciting of the Office and the reading of the minutes, Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson addressed the girls in his usual edifying manner. Miss Mariana Thompson explained to her fellow members some points of parliamentary procedure which will be practised at all meetings. Upon the suggestions and recommendations of the assembled members, it was decided that a card party under the auspices of the Children of Mary would be held on Tuesday, Nov. 14. The matter of membership fees was decided upon. The result of the discussion on this subject was that each member would receive a membership card and would pay a monthly fee.

Miss Marie Doyle, chairman of the Publicity Committee, then spoke to the Sodalists, telling them the aims of her committee, and announcing that a Sodality Paper is to be published. This paper, the first of its kind in the Sodality, will contain such interesting items as reports of the activities of the Sodality, birthdays or marriages of the members, a Question Box, and book reviews.

A Revitalizing Treatment For Undernourished Hair

Frances Gifford gives her hair a thorough daily brushing.

By HELEN FOLLETT

THOUGH baldness is not one of woman's beauty fears she has moments of alarm concerning her hair now and then. It may be falling more than usual, it may be thinning at the temples. Those pretty rolls atop her brow may not be as thick or as numerous as they were last year. Nature gives no guarantee that tresses will stay as is.

Should it happen that your hair appears to be in a state of depletion, work on the scalp. A healthy clean scalp produces a luxuriant growth. Friction the scalp vigorously every night for five minutes. But before you start rubbing, pinching and pummeling, brush the hair well.

Use Narrow Brush.

The best brush for this purpose is a narrow one with bristles set in groups. It can be kept cleaner more easily than a wide brush.

Take the hair, strand by strand, holding each wisp away from the head placing the brush on the scalp, sending the bristles along the length of the shafts with a rolling motion. Throw the head forward, brush from nape line to crown, from ear tips to crown.

Spread out fingers and thumbs over the head keep the fingers stationary; do circles with the thumbs, pressing deeply into the flesh. Use the finger tips at the temples and along the forward hair line.

Conditioning Treatments.

Don't have permanents oftener than you have to give your hair a rest between them if you can. While permanents are practically harmless to the silky threads, too frequent treatments are likely to make the shafts dry and harsh. Beauticians recommend conditioning treatments for two weeks before each permanent, mineral oil being used to cause the shafts to relax.

Be good to your hair, and it will be good to you. Don't fancy it can get along on its own. It needs continuous care.

A. D. Archibald Urges Broad View Of Citizenship

The Christian Citizenship Group under the convenership of Shirley Hitchon had charge of the splendid program of Holloway Street Y.P.U. held on Monday evening.

The President, Noreen Frederick opened the meeting and conducted a short business period, after the Roll Call and the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by the Secretary, Pat Thurston.

The theme of the Worship Service was "The Christian's Responsibility in the Community". Taking part were Shirley Hitchon, Jenny Burris, Velma Thompson, Maude Burke, Max Maguire and Harry Dewson.

Guest speaker of the evening was Mr. A. D. Archibald who chose as the theme of his remarks, 'World Citizenship'. He urged the young people to have a broad vision of what being good citizens means, that they might extend their citizenship beyond their own community to include the Province, the Dominion, the Empire, and finally the World. Mr. Archibald showed how citizenship begins in the home, in learning to live harmoniously with members of the family; —how it then continues its growth at the school where the child adjusts himself to the varied personalities of a larger group; and how then it branches out in service to the community. 'The life of the community can only be harmonious when the life in the homes which make up that community is harmonious', said the speaker.

Mr. Archibald reviewed the major world problems which young people will be called upon to help settle and mentioned a few ways in which the group might try to improve this community.

As a fitting climax to this instructive and interesting address, Miss Hildegarde Helliwell song "My Task" accompanied by Lois Harper at the piano.

Marion Daniels expressed the thanks of the group to the speaker and soloist.

Ruth Olliphant led in some games following which the meeting closed with 'Taps'.

WORRIED ABOUT VOTE

Niagara Falls, Nov. 8 — (CP) — Richard Dawson, 31, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., worried more about losing his vote than about the injuries he suffered yesterday in a traffic accident. "Roosevelt will have to be elected without his vote," said Dr. G. B. Snyder as he placed eight stitches in a wound in Dawson's head.

BLIMP CRASHES

Boston, Nov. 8 — (AP) — One man is dead and a second is listed as missing in the wake of a navy blimp crash at sea about 12 miles east of Cape Cod, first naval headquarters announced yesterday. The announcement said eight survivors and the dead man had been picked up by naval vessels engaged in search operations.

The Marry Go Round

TAKE IT FROM EVE

A wife is the only guaranteed safety-device for protecting an impressionable man from all the other attractive women he meets.

After a "Wolf" has had the same engagement ring returned to him 3 or four times, he begins to look upon it as a "lucky stone".

There is a neatness, a poise, a spirit and brightness about a WAC, after a few months, that only Army training can give. Yet you can safely wager that most of them will get back into their Civvies and fluffy ruffles with a glad, sweet cry.

Making a success of marriage may be a difficult feat these wardays; but even so, it is a sinecure beside making a permanent joy of single blessedness.

A girl's most common mistake is to go around with an inferiority complex imagining that her heart is broken just because some man's indifference has shocked her vanity into a state of temporary paralysis.

Now the girls have taken to whistling at the boys, they say. Oh well, customs have become merely a matter of times. What was bad form yesterday is merely "smart" today; and what is shocking today will be merely "popular custom" tomorrow. How many generations is it from the blushing maiden to the Sinatra-swooner? Or from high-button-shoes to bobby-socks?

So keen is a wolf's dramatic instinct, says Cynical Sybil, that he can automatically swear undying devotion to one girl while he is secretly wondering how he is going to break away in time to keep his date with another.

Traffic Rule for Love: Never try to head off a man who is trying to get past you. Give him the road and save yourself from a smashed vanity and a lot of heart-bruises.

Always give a man plenty of rope; but never let him forget that you have a firm grasp on the other end of it.

Women's Activities

BRIDGE STREET UNITED CHURCH W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Soiety of Bridge Street United Church was held in the Ladies' Parlors, on Nov. third, Mrs. Davidson presiding.

Mrs. Pearsall's group was in charge of the program. Those assisting in the devotional service were Mrs. Foster, Mrs. Bolte, Mrs. Black, Mrs. Gilroy and Mrs. Farnsworth.

Mrs. E. N. Baker introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Stinson of China, home on her first furlough.

Mrs. Stinson gave three pictures of China: the first as it presents itself to a newcomer—muddy streets, shops extending out onto the sidewalks, with the people walking in the streets or roadways, and the shops made of bamboo poles.

Mrs. Stinson's second picture of China, was of the changes made in the province, in which she lived, due to the closing of the Yangtse River by the Japs as a means of travel and the tremendous influx of Cantonese Chinese who fled before the oncoming Japs. This was probably the largest migration in history, and it brought with it terrible problems of sanitation and crowding and language difficulties. Inflation and bombing were also big problems.

Mrs. Stinson's third picture was of the work of the missionaries, who try to teach the people of Christ and Christian living in three ways: by medical, educational and evangelical missions. Many superstitions have to be overcome but many doors are open at the present time and will continue so after the present war is over.

Mrs. Pearsall moved a vote of thanks for Mrs. Stinson's most interesting address.

Mrs. Davidson invited the ladies to stay for a cup of tea.

Mrs. Stinson showed the ladies some beautiful Chinese curios. A hymn was sung by Miss English, Miss Gilmore and Miss Helliwell.

MANY a campus and sports style coming in is either bifurcated or so short of skirt as to amount to the same thing as to leg display. For them, a new and most appropriate stocking has been designed . . . a smart tow rayon model of silhouetting smartness which can take wear without making it synonymous with tear.

The Marry-Go-Round

He will be grown up!

There will be one great difference in the homecoming service-man who has seen so much of life and death that he will not talk about them. He will be GROWN UP! He will be mature—adult!

At first you may hardly recognise the light-hearted, laughing, wisecacking boy you sent away two years ao. It will take time for him to readjust himself and become "juvenile" and gay again. Perhaps you may like him better in his new serious mood.

Normally, the Canadian man never grows up. He is "a boy at heart" until he's seventy. By the time the average man is ready to settle down, give up his games and mature, his wife's nerves are usually frazzled out and she is tottering toward a sanitarium.

Recently half a dozen middle-aged men were asked if they ever longed to be back in their "wolfing days" again.

"AGAIN?" was the astonished answer, "What makes you think my "wolfing days" are over?" You see, Canadian men do not fear growing old. Most of them NEVER grow old and lots of them never grow UP!

Many a woman with an attractive husband has firmly shut her eyes and listened patiently to his alibis—and kept on deferring the trip to Reno, in the rainbow hope that his dancing foot will grow stiff, and his eyes will some day become too dim to distinguish between a blonde and a brunette.

Many a lonely golf-widow has fondly clung to her wandering boy in the sweet delusion that the day will come when his rheumatism will keep him in the house and they can get acquainted again.

Meantime she has to hide the children's Christmas toys from him, let him play with the radio all the time he's around the house, and let him go out and yell himself hoarse at baseball games and political rallies.

It's the "boy" in him—the adolescent-which makes him follow the comic strips, play practical jokes, read dime novels and mystery stories and always think of himself as a "wolf."

So if your returned soldier or sailor is quiet and serious and a little grave instead of so boyishly bouyant, perhaps you will find him more companionable and understanding.

When a man has to stand on his own feet, make his own decisions and defend his own life, he GROWS UP! His character is formed—and he is no longer a carefree adolescent. You will love him more than ever!

Your own home test may bring new beauty —in just 14 days!

WOMEN PROVE SKIN REGAINS ELASTICITY

How often a woman wishes . . . that her face looked as young as her shoulders. You see, shoulders stay smooth, soft, elastic—while faces have pores clogged with make-up, unable to breathe for hours at a time. And when pores can't breathe, skin becomes wrinkled and prematurely aged. But this needn't happen to your complexion. Palmolive offers a proved way to help keep it young and lovely.

You can look younger in 14 days! Each time you wash, (use a face cloth) massage warm, rich, vitalizing Palmolive lather thoroughly into your skin for . . . one full minute. Now, a quick rinse and pat dry. Palmolive's 60-second Beauty Massage has been scientifically tested by 2,301 women and 36 doctors. Their reports prove conclusively that . . . in just 14 days, it brings lovelier complexions.

A NICE BALANCE between sweater and blouse is found in a short sweater-blouse of velvety-surfaced cotton chénille with scooped out square neckline and bracelet sleeves. Elastic thread backs the neckline, cuffs and waistband to ensure a trim fit. Nice in vivid colors.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her Career

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I will graduate from high school before long and cannot make up my mind as to what to do afterward. I would like to become a trained nurse, but my friends and some relatives advise against it, saying it is hard work. But I am strong and dependable enough to tackle anything.

My parents want me to go to college, but I don't want to go to college and then take up nurse's training. I've always had a great imagination and want to write, and would be glad to go to college for four years if I can take up writing there.

I feel that in nursing I will be helping someone and doing something useful. On the other hand, I feel like writing. I've also thought of becoming a doctor.

Can you give me any help as to what I should take up after high school?

P. T.

You seem drawn in several directions. But if writing appeals to you more than the other professions, why not go to college and specialize in English and Journalism? On the other hand nursing offers a wide field at the present time.

You're very fortunate to be able to follow your own inclination as to your life work. So many girls have to become self-supporting after leaving high school.

Self-Supporting Girl Discouraged by Tragic Home Conditions

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm very unhappy at home because of my parents and youngest sister. My parents are very dominating and are usually ill-tempered and if I should assert myself at all, life would be still more miserable for me. They were the same to my older brothers and sister who married young and left home, but as my boy friend is overseas, I have to stay home. My parents are even rude to my friends, so I never bring them to the house.

I'm 22 years old, don't smoke or drink and have always been what you'd call "nice". They suspect me of awful things. My youngest sister of 15 wears my best clothes when I'm not at home, and has even lost things of mine. Money disappears from my room, so I have to keep my purse under my pillow.

Knowing all these things, do you think it is my place to stay at home and accept conditions until my boy friend returns, or do you think it would be all right for me to get a room away from home? My job is in this city, so I'd have to stay here because I cannot get a release from my job in an essential industry. Leaving home, I fear, may incur gossip.

Disgusted.

It's difficult to take the responsibility of advising a girl to leave home without knowing both sides of the question.

Why should this sister of 15 be permitted by your parents to treat you in the way you describe? Did you do anything to incur your parents' distrust?

Knowing as little of the case as I do, the best solution would seem to be for you to make your home with some relatives in the city, if you have any. Lacking these could you not share lodging with a former school-teacher, or board at the Y.W.C.A., or some family recommended by your church? In this way you could avoid gossip.

You tell me one of your sisters married young to leave home, and that your parents have made things unhappy for your brothers. All things considered, it would seem reasonable to make a change.

BEAUTY By HELEN JAMESON

HANDS UP! LOOK 'EM OVER.

Something has happened to your hands and you are pretty mad about it. You tell yourself that they have suddenly gone back on you. Why not tell the truth? Confess that you have gone back on them. You've been busy; and haven't attended to your beauty chores. What can you expect?

The skin is rough and red. The cuticle around your fingernails seems bent upon crawling up to the very eaves. As it clings to the nail fabric, it has become shreddy and there are painful, detested hangnails. The nails are brittle, always breaking. You have to stop whatever you are doing and rush for the nail file to do repair work.

Don't fancy that there is anything you can do to recondition hands and nails over night. It will take several weeks of faithful care to make them nice again. Also, the older one gets, the more care hands need to ward off tiny wrinkles in the tissues.

We assume that you will use a hand lotion freely every day—several times a day, if you are the unassisted boss of the menage and wash dishes and do laundry work. Frequent contact with soap robs the flesh of the natural oil that keeps the surface soft. Those milky, semi-liquid lotions dry immediately, so applications will not keep you from going ahead with your work.

Every time you take your hands out of water, dry them thoroughly. This practice is particularly necessary in the winter season. If you must hang the washing out of doors, slip on loose cotton gloves. When a moist skin surface comes in contact with cold winds, it is bound to chap. Once dry scales appear, it is difficult to restore the satin smoothness that makes hands attractive.

Twice a week give yourself an oily massage. Use cocoa-butter or lanoline for this purpose, conserving your precious cold cream or massage emollient. Rub the palm of one hand over the back of the other and vice versa. Sweep from the bases of the fingers up to the elbows. Force the fatty substance into the elbows; they can always do with a little attention.

Start thumbing from each finger base. Make little circles—working on the knuckles, forcing the oil into the cuticle around the nails.

Brittle nails may be caused by some diet deficiency or sluggish circulation in the underlying flesh. Friction and lubrication will help make them pliable. When the cuticle has been treated, lift it gently with the orangewood stick; kept clear of the nail fabric there will be no hangnails. If you flush up some shreds, remove them carefully with the curved scissors. Don't take the chance of causing a wound which is always exposed to infection.

While nail polish cannot be applied atop cream, cream can be used on the tinted surfaces without dimming the glow.

When Hair Starts to Fall

With health and good luck a shaft of hair can hang onto the scalp for six or seven years. In time it withers at the root, detaches itself from the papilla from which it grows; it's life is ended. If the scalp is in normal condition, circulation active, a little fuzzy understudy will appear to carry on. When it doesn't, it is because the papilla has shut up shop—quit the job. Why that happens nobody knows exactly.

Every day some shafts fall; they have served their time. It is only when the falling is excessive, when there are more than the usual number of silky ravelings in the comb, that one need be alarmed. Brushing should not be omitted when that condition is present. The brush gives the growth a house cleaning, removing dead shafts; the sooner they are out the better, so that the new ones can appear. A live hair cannot be removed with brush or comb. Many misguided tress-worriers cease brushing when the hair falls; that is a hygienic error.

Brushing removes surface dust, acts favorably upon the sebaceous glands that give gloss and beauty to the shafts, has a slightly stimulating effect upon the circulatory streams in the scalp. Brush strand by strand, holding the hair away from the head, using the brush with a rolling motion.

The tissues of the scalp are thin, and the network of surface capillaries can easily become impoverished. That is why friction is necessary. It tones the flesh, loosens it from the scalp.

After the nightly brushing, spread fingers and thumbs over the scalp, keeping the fingers stationary, doing heavy, deep circles with the thumbs. Use the first finger at the temples, with a light rotary movement. Go over the entire surface with a pinching treatment. There will follow a glow, showing that the blood streams are attending to business.

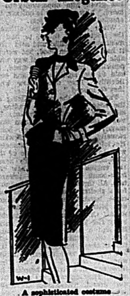
Often a harsh shampoo medium causes the hair to break, spreads a film over the scalp that interferes with the functioning of the glands. Use a mild soap, have it melted. Three latherings are not too many; each one must be followed by a rinsing of fairly hot water. Use a bath spray. Soap scum can take the life out of the healthiest hair.

Healthy hair, like other parts of the body, is dependent upon general vitality. Worry, nervousness, loss of sleep, digestive upsets, may be responsible for a thinned thatch of dull, uninteresting locks.

Sunlight acts favorably upon the growth, though too much may change the color somewhat. Avoid close-fitting felt hats that keep the scalp warm, cause profuse perspiration.

Keep combs and brushes scrupulously clean; that is most important.

Urban Elegance



A sophisticated costume

By VERA WINSTON

TOWN SUITS cut and detailed with an eye to the demands of the smart urbanite who likes sophisticated clothes are much to the fore this season. Here is an example, an elegant suit with jacket of beige wool, its full peplum bordered with black Persian lamb. It has a small collar of the fur. Clever tucking reduces the waistline to a minimum. The pencil slim skirt is of black broadcloth.

Items of Interest

1.—Restore Softness to Leather Gloves.

It's easy to keep your favorite pair of leather gloves soft and pliable if you follow these simple do's and don't in the washing of them. First, never, never wash a glove that has been dry cleaned. Second, wash frequently. When gloves become very soiled, embedded dirt and grease often dull the color permanently and tend to harden the leather. Frequent short washings in gentle, fine-fabric suds are easier on leather gloves. Put pigskin, capeskin and kid gloves on your hands and wash just as if you were washing your hands. But wash doeskin and chamois gloves off the hands, because they're softer when wet and may tear if you keep them on. Fabric gloves of rayon or cotton should be washed off the hands, too. And here's that special tip to restore softness to leather gloves. After washing, rinse first in cool clear water, then give the gloves a final rinse in fresh, light suds. This restores some of the oil lost in washing and helps keep the leather soft and pliable. After this last rinse, gently ease back to shape, then roll the gloves in a towel, starting at the finger tips. Knead out as much water as you can, and unroll right away. Then blow into each glove to puff it back to shape. Dry flat, away from heat. While slightly damp, work the leather between your thumb and forefinger all over the gloves. This is called "finger pressing" and is the final touch that makes for soft, new-looking gloves.

2.—You Can't Have Too Many Facecloths!

Nowadays when it's difficult to get as many soft, Turkish facecloths as you'd like—it's a good idea to look after those you already have. First of all, to get rid of that "slippery" surface film that develops after much use, wash well in rich, grease-dissolving suds. Then boil in water to which you have added a little vinegar and dry in the open air. They'll soon come sweet and fresh again. And next time you're at the point of discarding an old bath towel, remember you can make it into several beautifully soft facecloths, simply by cutting it in squares and machining the edges.

3.—To Protect Bed Covers.

What housewife doesn't bemoan the fact that it's the top edge of blankets and quilts that show soil first—while the rest of the blanket remains fresh-looking and spotless! To protest this vulnerable area, bind the edges with pieces of voile, muslin or cheesecloth about sixteen inches wide. This can be secured to the blanket by basting, sturdy snap fasteners, or—if you want to be really fancy—buttons and buttonholes. The button-on type has buttonholes and fastens to the cover which has buttons sewed to it. A regular dip in extra-soapy suds will keep binding bright and fresh, and is ever so much easier than washing the whole blanket just because the edges are dirty. For special glamor, tint binding to match the blanket.

4.—To Keep Leather Belts Like New.

Now that smart leather sports belts are hard to get—it's a clever girl who knows how to keep last year's favorite leather belt or accessory bright and new-looking. Leather belts, handbags—and luggage, too—can be sponged off with warm water and extra-soapy suds. Then wring out a soft cloth in castor oil or liquid wax and rub well into the surface, with special care on faded or cracked spots. And presto—you've rubbed up a brand-new gloss and gleam to leather articles!

SOMETHING NEW in suit sleeve detail is the shirt-cuff. It is used on a yellow and brown hound's tooth tweed suit and the cuff-links are of dark amber composition to match the jacket buttons. Brown crepe high-necked blouse.

COLLEGE CREDITS go to the kiltie skirt — a big campus favorite. It is finished with a fringed side and fringed brogues usually are worn with it. Another nice touch is a scarf of matching clan plaid. Jacket and sweater usually pick up one of the lighter colors of the plaid.

IT DOES TRICKS, does this long scarf of shocking pink satin finished with three deep borders of mink. It is nice as an ascot scarf, as a dramatically tied sash, or as a hood.

Victor Goggin Resigns Post On Liquor Board

Toronto, Nov. 8 —(CP)— Premier George Drew announced last night that the Ontario Government has accepted the resignation of Victor Goggin as chairman of the Ontario Liquor Control Board, effective Dec. 31. Mr. Goggin will continue as chairman "long enough to continue the direction of the affairs of the Board through the most difficult period of the year."

Mr. Drew's announcement did not name a successor, saying only that Mr. Goggin would be available to assist "whoever will be responsible for the future direction of the affairs of the Board."

The Premier said in a statement that at the time Mr. Goggin took over the job of carrying out the reorganization necessitated by restrictions on sale of alcoholic beverages imposed by the Dominion Government, he explained it might be necessary for him to leave to return to his earlier occupation.

"But he did undertake to carry out the details of reorganization which were so essential. This he has done exceedingly well," Mr. Drew said.

"In keeping with the understanding we had at the time he assumed these duties at my request, he now has asked to be relieved of his public responsibility," the Premier said.

Mr. Goggin, formerly managing director of Wartime Housing Limited, assumed the chairmanship of the Board last February. In his letter of resignation he said he felt the time had come when he could relinquish his duties "and return to the engineering and industrial management field from whence I came."

CABINET MEETS

"Pencillin in Action"

By WILLIAM HOLT
(BBC Press Service)

I believe I was the first to tell you about British production of penicillin. You'd already heard the story of the discovery of this powerful drug, it was going round the world, a most romantic story of how a little spore of mould came in through an open window of St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington, London, and settled on a culture plate on which Professor Alexander Fleming was growing deadly bacteria—staphylococci—and of how, because Fleming was a very observant man, instead of throwing the plate away because it was mouldy, he noticed that something strange was taking place on the plate, and the mound was either killing the deadly bacteria or at any rate preventing its growth—you've heard this story. What I'm going to tell you about now is about a visit I've paid to a hospital where I've seen penicillin in action, saving the lives of soldiers wounded on the battlefield. Among the many deadly diseases, whose own death knell has now been sounded by penicillin, is the dreaded gas gangrene of the battlefield which infects the wounds of soldiers.

In my last broadcast to you on penicillin I told you how it is produced from a mould which is grown in bottles in laboratories. The mould covers the broth on which it is growing with a thick felt and in ten days it is excreting those golden yellow drops from which the priceless drug penicillin is extracted. Well, at that time when I broadcast to you, we were already growing this mould in Britain literally by the acre. But since then, America has outstripped us in producing this drug. Up to quite recently, all the production of this drug, both over here and in America, was from the first master culture grown by Professor Fleming from that first tiny spore which floated in, uninvited, through his laboratory window. Professor Florey of Oxford flew across the Atlantic during the Battle of Britain with some of this mould in his luggage, and appealed to America to help, because at that time there wasn't a firm in the chemical industry here able to undertake large scale production of this drug. We were fighting alone then, with our backs to the wall. Well, America responded in a big way, and, as I've said, has now outstripped us in large scale production. We've pooled our resources and Allied soldiers are benefiting from our mutual enterprise.

It was an Allied Army hospital which I visited and which I'm now going to tell you about. I talked to some of the boys, torn by shells and riddled by machine-gun bullets in Normandy, and now back here in Britain, their lives saved by penicillin.

Let me describe the hospital to you. It's out in the country. The post consists of huts and tents, with concrete paths between them. It's surrounded by golden wheat fields, lined by dark hedgerows, and over the gently undulating countryside comes a scent of hay, wild flowers and the sweet hedgerows. For those war-wracked boys from Normandy there is rest in our English countryside. There's always a peace there, even in war. As you walk into the camp you see some of the boys from Normandy with blue or magenta coloured dressing-gowns over their pyjamas. Some are walking about, some are sitting, some are still lying in those hospital beds made of tubular steel in the Nissen huts. Between the huts is wild grass, going to seed, with here and there a cleared flower bed growing rambler roses.

In one of the Nissen huts, lying on his back in bed, I met an Allied soldier. He was out scouting, ahead of his company, in Normandy, when he was suddenly riddled with Nazi machine-gun bullets. He got one through his leg. The Army doctor who was walking in the hospital ward with me showed me his records of medical particulars. When he was picked up on the battlefield his chest was full of blood and a belly contaminated by a large bowel perforation—a very dangerous thing. Penicillin in his case had acted as a preventive. He was found in the morning; at 2.40 p.m., he was given blood transfusion—for shock; at 00.30—half past midnight—he was given forty thousand units of penicillin; then at 2.00 a.m. ninety thousand units; same morning at 5.00 a.m., more penicillin—twenty thousand units. He was flown across the Channel to England. And he is still getting penicillin. I talked to that soldier. He was very cheerful and talked to me about his home town and his wife. He told me how he was wounded. "You can't see them German machine-guns," he said. "I saw some of my pals hit the ground, dead. Then I got it and I lay on the battlefield until I was found by others who were following up. When I was lifted up and put on a stretcher I lost all memory." He smiled at me and said: "That penicillin's good stuff—keeps all that poison down in your inside. Something's helped me," he said, "and I think it's that penicillin. I'll be well in a couple of months" he said.

I talked to another soldier who was wounded by a shell near St. Lo—he thinks it was an 88 m.m. He got a piece of it in his left leg—in at the thigh and right through the knee joint. While he was telling me about it he reached up and grabbed a wooden handle which was hanging overhead, tried to raise himself up, winced, and then said, "Pass me that bag." It was a little calico bag which had been given to him to keep his personal belongings in. He put his hand in the bag and fished out an ugly-looking, jagged piece of black metal which had been buried in his flesh and bone. A very personal belonging! "That's it," he said. He was lying in a slit trench when he was hit. He got up and hollored to his friends. Soon he was in the evacuation station and flown back to Britain, "being given penicillin all the way." "I feel all right," he said. "Hope nobody's worrying about me. I'm getting good treatment."

The Army doctor took me into his little room. "Without this penicillin," he said, "we'd get more complications. It brings down temperature, cuts down the drainage of the wounds, kills germs."

He spoke of "the surgeon's 'golden hours'"—that's what they called them before penicillin—those first few vital hours after a man was wounded. "If we could get at it within six hours," he said, "we could close it up. Every hour after that the indications change."

"That golden period" he said, "has now been extended by penicillin to two or three days. We can afford to operate, can go ahead without fear. Instead of taking away some of the surgeon's work," he said, "it has given him opportunity to do more." Now recovery is quicker, the amount of disability less.

When I told him that although the soldiers I'd talked to had all mentioned penicillin and said that it had done them good, but weren't able to say in a technical way what penicillin had done for them, he said to me, significantly, and confidently, "They don't know what they've missed."

Further up the ward, sitting on the edge of his bed, reading a magazine, I met a Sergeant. He was a casualty, but not from Normandy. He was a flying bomb casualty, wounded here in Britain. He told me how he was standing with two civilians when one of the buzz-bombs came over. He heard the engine cut out and saw the buzz-bomb diving down towards him. All three of them were running for a shelter doorway when the blast came, bursting both his ear drums and pitting his body with bits of metal. One piece of metal carried away the lobe of one of his ears. He had a lucky escape because both the civilians were killed—although they'd managed to make the doorway and were underneath him when he fell. "I spent the first three days in a civilian hospital" he said. "They operated on me. They were grand. The nurses are really sweet. That was three weeks ago," he said. "I've been up a week—a marvellous cure. They take care of you nowadays." Another flying bomb casualty in the same ward was a soldier of the U.S.A.A.F. His wounds were very severe. Both these flying bomb casualties are getting penicillin treatment. The wheel has made a full turn here—penicillin discovered in London, made in America, helping to save the lives of American soldiers wounded in London!

As regards the soldier the doctor told me after we'd left the ward, in the blood from the wound in his chest they'd found bacteria and because of that he'd been given penicillin by intermuscular injection every three hours and some had been instilled into his chest after the fluid had been drained. Although infection cannot take hold it's too early yet to say positively that he's gotten well. He has received the "sulpha" drugs too, so it would not be true to say that it is to penicillin alone that he owes his life. "All I can say," said the doctor, "is, here is a man with a wound through his chest that had bacteria and blood and fluid and after receiving 'sulpha' drugs and penicillin the infection did not take hold, and now the man is getting well without complications."

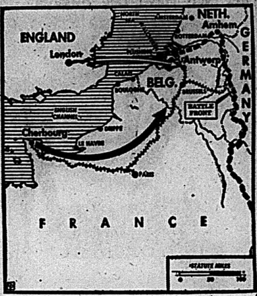
I watched the injection of penicillin. It's quite a simple operation which can be given by the wardmen who help the doctors, or by the nurses. The penicillin comes in little bottles say about the size of your thumb, with a screw stopper and under this another stopper of rubber. The penicillin is a fine bright powder inside. You screw off the metal stopper and inject distilled water through the rubber stopper. You see it has to be mixed with water into a solution before it can be injected into the patient. Well, you inject the water and mix the unit dose. Then you take a glass syringe with a steel needle and draw in the dose—about two to four cubic centimetres—then you jab the needle into one of the patient's muscles and inject. All this is quite safe and simple. But there's a lot of laboratory work goes on behind the scenes. It's necessary first to determine the nature of the infection and the sensitivity to Penicillin of the organisms concerned. Local treatment has then to be controlled by frequent further cultures. Systematic treatment calls for repeated estimation of the penicillin content of the blood in order to verify further dosages.

All the doctors I spoke to were warm in their praise of penicillin. "Our job," they said, "is to save man days to win the war. In wounds in the joints and spine and deep infections from missiles penicillin is a great advantage, returning the soldier to duty in the shortest possible time."

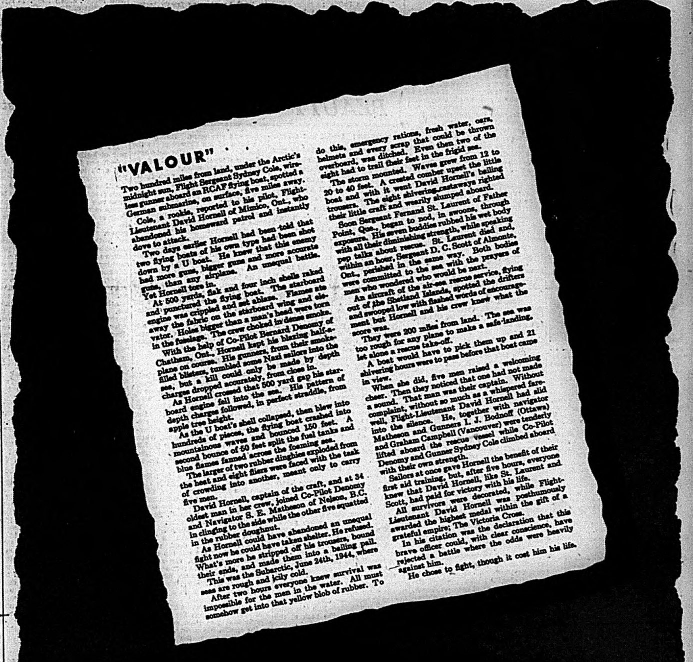
Some of the most amazing results are in cases of venereal disease. Syphilis, which used to take eighteen months or even years to cure, and then was reduced by improved treatment to six months and then to twenty days, can now be dealt with by penicillin treatment in seven and a half days. Gonorrhoea can be cured in one day, by five shots of penicillin. If we'd only enough penicillin in the world we might wipe out venereal disease altogether.

It's wonderful how all this has been made possible by that little spore of mould which came through that hospital window in London.

SUPPLY BASE GETTING CLOSER



Up to now Allied supplies for the battle in Germany have come 400 miles by road and rail from Cherbourg (black arrow) or from prefabricated beach-harbors on the Normandy channel coast. Now, with the opening of the great port of Antwerp, Belgium, the supply base distance will be reduced to only 75 miles away from the front. Recent Nazi reports indicate British "sabotage parachutists" have dropped behind the line at Arnhem.



"VALOUR"

Two hundred miles from land, under the Arctic's midnight sun, Flight Sergeant Sydney Cole, wireless gunner aboard an RCAF flying boat, spotted a German submarine, on surface, five miles away.

Cole, a rookie, reported to his pilot, Flight-Lieutenant David Hornell of Mimico, Ont., who abandoned his homeward patrol and instantly dove to attack.

Two days earlier Hornell had been told that two flying boats of his own type had been shot down by a U boat. He knew that this enemy had more guns, bigger guns and more accurate guns, than any airplane. An unequal battle. Yet Hornell tore in.

At 500 yards, flak and four inch shells raked and punctured the flying boat. The starboard engine was crippled and set ablaze. Flames ate away the fabric on the starboard wing and elevator. Holes bigger than a man's head were torn in the fuselage. The crew choked in dense smoke.

With the help of Co-Pilot Bernard Denomy of Chatham, Ont., Hornell kept his blazing half-a-plane on course. His gunners, from their smoke-filled blisters, tumbled some Nazi sailors into the sea, but a kill could only be made by depth charges dropped accurately, from close in.

As Hornell crossed that 500 yard gap his starboard engine fell into the sea. His pattern of depth charges followed, in perfect straddle, from apple tree height.

As the U boat's shell collapsed, then blew into hundreds of pieces, the flying boat crashed into mountainous waves and bounced 150 feet. A second bounce of 50 feet split the fuel tanks and blue flames fanned across the foaming sea.

The larger of two rubber dinghies exploded from the heat and eight fliers were faced with the task of crowding into another, meant only to carry five men.

David Hornell, captain of the craft, and at 34 oldest man in her crew, joined Co-Pilot Denomy and Navigator S. E. Matheson of Nelson, B.C. in clinging to the side while the other five squatted in the rubber doughnut.

As Hornell could have abandoned an unequal fight now he could have taken shelter. He refused. What's more he stripped off his trousers, bound their ends, and made them into a bailing pail.

This was the Subarctic, June 24th, 1944, where seas are rough and icily cold.

After two hours everyone knew survival was impossible for the men in the water. All must somehow get into that yellow blob of rubber. To do this, emergency rations, fresh water, oars, helmets and every scrap that could be thrown overboard, was ditched. Even then two of the eight had to trail their feet in the frigid sea.

The storm mounted. Waves grew from 12 to 20 to 40 feet. A crested comber upset the little boat and with it went David Hornell's bailing trousers. The eight shivering castaways righted their little craft and wearily slumped aboard.

Soon Sergeant Fernand St. Laurent of Father Point, Que., began to nod, in swoons, through exposure. His seven buddies rubbed his wet body with all their diminishing strength, while speaking pep talks about rescue. St. Laurent died and, within an hour, Sergeant D. C. Scott of Almonte, Ont., perished in the same way. Both bodies were committed to the sea with the prayers of men who wondered who would be next.

An aircraft of the air-sea rescue service, flying out of the Shetland Islands, spotted the drifters and swooped low with flashed words of encouragement but Hornell and his crew knew what the score was.

They were 200 miles from land. The sea was too rough for any plane to make a safe landing, let alone a rescue take-off.

A boat would have to pick them up and 21 shivering hours were to pass before that boat came in view.

When she did, five men raised a welcoming cheer. Then they noticed that one had not made a sound. That man was their captain. Without complaint, without so much as a whispered farewell, Flight-Lieutenant David Hornell had slid into the silence. He, together with navigator Matheson and Gunners I. J. Bodnoff (Ottawa) and Graham Campbell (Vancouver) were tenderly lifted aboard the rescue vessel while Co-Pilot Denomy and Gunner Sydney Cole climbed aboard with their own strength.

Sailors at once gave Hornell the benefit of their first aid training, but, after five hours, everyone knew that David Hornell, like St. Laurent and Scott, had paid for victory with his life.

All survivors were decorated, while Flight-Lieutenant David Hornell was posthumously awarded the highest medal within the gift of a grateful empire; The Victoria Cross.

In his citation was the declaration that this brave officer could, with clear conscience, have rejected a battle where the odds were heavily against him.

He chose to fight, though it cost him his life.

Here is a story to read and remember . . . Here is a record of Canadian valour, fortitude and sacrifice that will fill your heart with pride and gratefulness . . . Here is a stern and stirring reminder that while brave men fight to the limit—we must all of us lend to the limit! Brave deeds must be backed by dollars . . . by INVESTMENT IN VICTORY . . . by BUYING MORE VICTORY BONDS!

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

(By The Canadian Press)

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Nov. 8.— (CP)—In a blazing attack on a German airfield in the Stuttgart area, Flt. Lt. F. A. Johnson, of Belleville, Ont., downed the 100th aircraft to be destroyed in the air by the hard-hitting City of Edmonton night intruder squadron during 1944. His navigator was Flt. Lt. H. J. Gibbons, D.F.C., of (2355 Marine Drive) Vancouver.

Streaking across Europe at tree-top height, and in poor visibility their Mosquito arrived over the Stuttgart area to take the Germans completely by surprise.

"The cloud was almost on the deck and we stooged around for 35 minutes before we spotted a kite and they obviously didn't suspect we were in the district because this fellow came in with his navigation lights on", said Johnson. "He flew around with us tailing him for five minutes as he broke into the circuit".

"Finally when we were about 100 yards behind him I let blast with eveything I had. Both his motors caught fire and he exploded before he hit the deck. It was a three second burst but that was enough".

"When he exploded", added Gibbons, "the whole sky was lighted like day. Johnny pulled up in a hurry and we passed through the top of the debris as he disintegrated. There wasn't a piece of his aircraft left to hurt us though".

Both agreed the aircraft destroyed was a Ju. 88 as it exploded they saw eight or nine similar craft on the ground but none would come up to challenge.

Pilots of a Canadian typhoon fighter-bomber wing operating from this front line airfield, view with jaundiced eyes any long, level-looking pasture with cattle and horses grazing, inside enemy territory.

Upon arriving at the airfield, hastily evacuated but nevertheless demolished by retreating Germans, they found numerous cattle, horses and even colts made of plywood, which could be dragged out onto the runway to lend an air of peace to the airfield whenever Allied aircraft were in the vicinity.

So adept has the enemy become at camouflaging his landing strips, that the City of Westmount squadron found themselves over a German airfield near the border when they swept in low to attack a train.

"We had just opened up on the train when we noticed the four 109's in camouflage below us, on a runway", said FO. Royce Johns, of Saskatoon, and North Battleford, Sask. "By that time their flak had opened up on us, so we didn't go back after blowing up the locomotive".

Zealous for the reputation of their diminishing Luftwaffe, the Germans used this stunt repeatedly in Holland: Whenever Nazi aircraft were shot down in air battles with British or American planes, they would send out a "brush-and-bucket" squad.

Next morning Dutchmen would find the charred hulks of Me 109's Ju 88's wearing the blue-white-red roundel of the R.A.F.

LONDON LETTER

By RONALD BARRY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 8. (CP)—Christmas in the "Victory Year" is going to be much the same as any other since 1940 for British children, for although the Board of Trade has announced the trebling of the season's quota of toys, manufacturers say that there will be fewer than ever.

The reason given by manufacturers is that although the treble quota lasts until Jan. 31, few people require toys after Christmas Eve and the Board has not given them enough time to supply retailers with as many toys and games as they need.

"The quality also will be poor, as, although the maximum price of a finished toy is set at $6, the prices of raw materials is not, and such things as wooden toys, "cuddly" and stuffed dolls will be manufactured from odd pieces of timber collected from war factories and waste dumps, card-board, paper and rag scraps.

This year, with the European front demanding all priority supply lines, toys are held up still more. That is why Black Market goods are finding a ready market from retailers who cannot get enough to fill their windows at Christmas. Any flags and Christmas bunting to be had is old stock labelled, "Made in Japan".

But even with prospect of few presents this year, the children are slightly appeased with the increase in their holiday week rations by four ounces. It means they will have a pound of sweets this year, plus a pound of oranges, if they arrive in time from North Africa.

Many toy firms say shortage of supplies and labor are other reasons for the production holdup.

"Had the Board made up its mind to increase the quota three months ago, we could have got enough material and labor to make sufficient toys to go round", one manufacturer said.

"In our trade we work six months ahead. It takes that time to get the toys made, distributed to the wholesalers and from there get them to the shops".

India Protects Eastern Frontiers

New Delhi, India, Nov. 8. (CP)—A vast network of airfields has been built along India's eastern frontiers for operations against Japan and for maintaining a supply route to China.

More than 600,000 laborers from all parts of India were moved into the area, previously almost undefended, by the government of India's central public works department.

The jungle in South India was turned into runways in about 60 working days with no mechanical plant except steam rollers and concrete mixers. Everything else was done by hand and the speed of construction was about one-tenth the time previously considered necessary for such jobs.

The airfields construction organization now controls 23 airfield construction divisions and electrical divisions in eastern India; six construction divisions and an independent electrical sub-division in South India; and four construction and one electrical divisions in western India.

Kingston Soldier Given Life Term For Shooting Sgt.

Ottawa, Nov. 8 — (CP) — Gnr. Leslie Joseph Doyle, 36, of Kingston, Ont., sentenced to be shot to death when found guilty on a charge of murder by a field court-martial in Italy, had his sentence commuted to life imprisonment and now is in a Canadian penitentiary, it was learned today from defence headquarters.

Evidence at the court-martial established that Doyle shot and killed a sergeant of his unit, later killed another sergeant and a gunner and wounded a bombardier so severely that he subsequently died of his wounds. Doyle then attempted to commit suicide by shooting himself through the head but recovered from the wounds, headquarters said.

The shooting occurred Nov. 6, 1943, while Doyle's artillery unit was serving near the town of Campobasso.

Testimony revealed that on the afternoon of the shooting, Doyle had been drinking Italian wine at a farmhouse in the vicinity. He came back to camp about eight o'clock in the evening, sat down at the entrance of an improvised tent before a campfire and dosed off, his loaded rifle in his hand.

One of the sergeants of his unit, just coming in from duty, attempted to awaken the sleeping gunner, headquarters said. After a few words Doyle shot and killed the sergeant. The evidence indicated that Doyle then left the tent. As he was going out he shot and killed another sergeant and a gunner and wounded the bombardier. The attempted suicide followed, headquarters said.

No provocation was established at the court-martial held in the field in Italy last June. The hearing was on a charge of murder and related only to the first shooting. Doyle was convicted and sentenced to be shot to death. The sentence was subsequently commuted to life imprisonment, and Doyle was returned to Canada to serve the sentence in a Canadian penitentiary.

The next-of-kin of all the soldiers shot by Doyle have been fully informed of all details.

Married Members Of RCAF (W.D.) To Be Discharged

Ottawa, Nov. 8 — (CP) — Married members of the Royal Canadian Air Force (Women's Division) will be released to civilian life under a discharge plan now being initiated, Air Force headquarters said.

With the end of recruiting for the R.C.A.F. and closing of many training schools of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan many of the jobs done by WD's have ended and there now is need to cut down the number of personnel.

An estimated 10 per cent of the WD's are married, mostly to servicemen many of whom are or will be returning from overseas, and it is felt these girls should have the chance to set up housekeeping.

Up to now marriage has not been a reason for discharge.

Exception to the discharge plan will be made for widows, who have been reclassified as "single," and on compassionate grounds for girls who have special reasons for remaining in the service.

Oldest of the three Canadian women's services, the R.C.A.F. (W.D.) was formed in July 1941, and stopped recruiting last June when its numbers reached 16,800.

HOME-AND-HOME POINTS-TO-COUNT SERIES SATURDAY

Balmy Beach and Hamilton Wildcats to Play for the O.R.F.U. Title

By The Canadian Press

The keen rivalry this football season between the 1943 Dominion Champion Hamilton Wildcats and the Toronto Balmy Beach team enters its final stage Saturday as the two clubs meet in Hamilton in the first of a home-and-home points-to-count series for the Ontario Rugby Football Union title.

The game is one of two play-off encounters this week, the other being a sudden-death game in Toronto for the Ontario Armed Service Football League championship between the Hagersville R. C. A. F. team and the Toronto Navy Bulldogs.

An exhibition game at Kingston between the Queen's University team, unbeaten in Kingston City League play this season, and the Ottawa Trojans, who wound up third in the O. R. F. U. standings, completes the Saturday gridiron program.

Halfback Joe Krol has been the chief factor this season in carrying Wildcats to five wins in their six scheduled games. He scored 49 of their 102 points and had a major share in paving the way to the others. He is an important cog in the stout Hamilton defensive play. Only 28 points have been scored against the team this season.

Veterans Earl Selkirk and Sam Sward are the chief Beach scorers with 30 and 22 points respectively but young Billy Myers and Ross (Red) McKelvey provide much of the spark in the team's play. Beaches, who have scored 105 points while winning four games and lost two, have had 33 points scored against them. Dean Griffing from Regina, Harry Sonshine and Bill Zock have been among the veteran linemen who have presented a strong barrier to opposition attacks.

Hagersville won four games, lost one and tied one in its six-game schedule. LAC. Doug Smylie and Sgt. Hoe Richman have provided much of the offensive strength during the season but additional strength will be added for the game Saturday with the appearance of FO. Bobby Coulter, out most of the season with an injury. Hagersville has scored 74 points — 20 by Smylie and 15 by Richman — and have had 46 scored against them.

LS. Annis Stukus, veteran quarterback, has been the chief threat for Navy all season. Of the team's 80 points, he scored 44 — more than half. Bulldogs have had 54 points scored against them. They won four games and lost two.

TORONTO GOALIE, FRANK McCOOL SHOWING CLASS

Calgary Sports Writer Gradually Making Fans Forget Bibeault

By FRASER MacDOUGALL

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Nov. 8 — (CP) — Frank McCool of the Toronto Maple Leafs is the only sports writer playing in the National Hockey League but if he were assigned to write a story about himself the modest native of Calgary would probably leave out anything boosting his hockey play.

"I've been pretty lucky so far," was the way the soft-spoken McCool today described his showing in the first four games in the N.H.L. in which nine goals have been scored against him in four games for an average of 2.250 a game. "None of our games yet have been tough."

But his goaltending is gradually winning a warm place in the hearts of Toronto fans, quite ready to be critical of the successor to Paul Bibeault who became a favorite last season through his sensational play.

They like the careful way the 26-year-old Irish-Canadian covers up the nets and the care he uses in clearing the puck. They first took to him when he held New York Rangers to one goal in the opening game of the season. Their confidence wavered somewhat when the Black Hawks scored five against him in a free-scoring game at Chicago. But he cancelled their doubts completely by holding Canadiens to one goal at Montreal last Thursday on the eve of his 26th birthday.

McCool worked eight months as a sports writer, joining the staff of the Calgary Albertan about a year ago after stomach ulcer trouble kept him from catching a place with the New York Rangers last season. It was the same trouble that brought his discharge from the Canadian Army with which he served for about a year. However, he now is having little trouble with them and has to be careful.

He's as Irish as his name "But I don't think I'm any relation to Finn McCool," the legendary figure who built Giants' Causeway and spread the fame of the name through the length and breadth of Ireland.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 8. (CP)—In the North Country of Ontario there's a spirited debate going on now over woman's place in the sporting scene. Ralph (North Bay Nugget) Adams tried to promote the idea of a girls' hockey loop, but drew the heated opposition of Vic Copps of the Timmins Free Press. . . Copps suggested there would be a near-riot among the ardent male fans if the girls were let loose. Whereupon Adams countered by saying the only riot would be that caused by the aforesaid males scrambling and fighting to hang over the boards and ogle the fair ones on the blades. . . That's the way it has worked out anywhere else the idea was tried, at any rate.

All in the Family:

Bill Dunlop of Guelph, Ont., isn't a retired athlete father who sits back and tells his young hopeful how pop used to do it—he gets out there and does it himself. Bill Senior and Bill Junior both play on the Guelph Soccer team, so pop has to produce ,or else. He has played every year since 1922 ,but still can give the youngsters pointers.

Al Last Returns—Home:

The pride of Medicine Hat, Alta., scrappy Al Last who won the Western Canada professional, welterweight title before joining the army, has returned to civvie street—but not to fight. Al stopped a near-knockout punch from a sniper's bullet on the point of the jaw while going to the aid of a comrade in Italy, and has been honorably discharged from the army. His fighting days, as soldier and boxer, are over.

Incidentally:

Henry Martell, Edmonton golf product who ranks with the best in Canada, will compete in the big tournament at Portland, Ore., late this month. Rena O'Callaghan, Vancouver's Ladies' Champion, also is toying with the idea of taking in the tourney. . . Nova Scotia horsemen evidently are starting a building-from-the-bottom campaign. Instead of buying ready-to-race harness horses, they now are concentrating on getting promising colts and training them at home. They went in strong for youngsters at the auction sales in York, Pennsylvania, recently.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

President Peter Campbell of the Toronto baseball Maple Leafs announced yesterday he had obtained Charley (Greek) George, hard-hitting catcher, on draft from Nashville Vols of the Southern Association. If George lives up to his 1944 statistics, he will replace Herb Crompton, Leaf regular catcher in 1944 who was drafted by the New York Yankees. He batted .345 for Nashville in 94 games and drove in 79 runs.

Ottawa Board of Control gave its approval for the use of Lansdowne Park here Nov. 18 by the Interscholastic Football League, assuring an inter-city grid play-off between the Ottawa champions and Montreal Westhill high school. The Ottawa titleholders will be named Friday when Glebe Collegiate and Ottawa Technical high school meet in a sudden-death senior circuit play-off.

The inter-city clash will be a two-game, home-and-home affair, with the second game at Montreal Nov. 25.

STRAHAN SCORES TOUCHES TO BEAT P.C.I. BY 21 TO 5

Feelings Run High as Three B. C. I. Players Given Match Penalties

With the quarterback Bob Strachan, either pitching or lugging the pigskin for three of their four touchdowns, Coach Red Townsend's Belleville Collegiate juniors virtually cinched first place in the Bay of Quinte six-man football conference at Picton yesterday by whipping the Picton Collegiate kids 21 to 5. The halftime count was 11 to 5 for the winners.

The game wasn't without its moments however, as feelings ran high with a trio of match penalties being meted out by the officials of the day as strong contact play featured and near fisticuffs were seen. The three match penalties went to Belleville players—McCarthy, Neil and Carefoot, who just weren't taking any too much roughness although the locals dominated the zone play throughout.

With Diamond and Marcus moving the oval into scoring position B.C.I. opened the scoring when McCarthy drove through right end on a straight line buck for the game's first touchdown, that Strachan converted by pitching to Stewart. With the count standing at 6-0 in their favor the "tri-color clad" students from Belleville moved to an aerial attack that was good for a second touchdown when Strachan fired perfectly into the open arms of Marcus in the end zone. After an exchange of kicks Holt and Hepburn combined to drive far into the B.C.I. territory from where Rudder carried over the Belleville goal line for Picton's lone unconverted touchdown as the halftime gong found B.C.I. out in front 11 to 5.

In the second it was all B.C.I. headed by Bobby Strachan who thrilled the gallery by running back a kick off some 45 yds. for a touchdown and later he pitched another pass to Locke, who skirted a lone Picton safety man for the final score of the game.

The line-ups — Picton Collegiate: quarter, Hepburn; halves, Holt and Rudder; centre, Wright; ends, McDonald and Wright; subs, Hogle, Foster, Scott and Kleinsteuber.

Belleville Collegiate Institute: — quarter, Strachan; halves, Diamond and Locke; centre, Carefoot; ends, Denton and Marcus; subs, McCarthy, Rollins, Neil and Stewart.

MINOR BASEBALL HEADING TOWARD STORMY SESSION

Double-A Bloc May be Organised and Governed by Judge Landis

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Nov. 8. (AP)— Minor League baseball appears to be heading toward another stormy session at its Dec. 6-8 annual conclave in Buffalo, N.Y., where a revolt of the higher classification circuits may develop into an open split with the National Association.

If President Frank Shaughnessy of the International League can attract the support of the American Association and the Pacific Coast League, which had major league ambitions, a new double-A bloc will be organised, acting independently of but in co-operation with the big leagues and other minor circuits.

The most important result of such a revolt would be to make the three circuits directly accountable to Commissioner K. M. Landis instead of President W. G. Bramham of the National Association.

American Association support appears unlikely although President George M. Trautman has reserved an opinion until after the meeting of his league's board of directors Dec. 3. Trautman has been mentioned as a possible successor to Bramham along with Presidents Thomas H. Richardson of the Eastern League, William G. (Billy) Evans of the Southern Association, Clarence Rowland of the Pacific Coast League and Shaughnessy.

Pacific Coast League directors insist upon major league status, a stand that has not drawn the support of the International or Association. A key plank in the platform President Rowland will put before the convention is an increase in the major league draft prices from $7,500 to $15,000. Nailing in this, the prosperous circuit has threatened to refuse to give up players selected in the annual fall draft drab bag. Such a stand would involve breaking away from all organized ball.

In the final estimate the physical condition of Bramham may be the key factor. The Durham, N.C., executive was re-elected for a five-year term at $25,000 per last December at New York's highly controversial "battle of the Proxies". Although he recently was confined to a hospital, Bramham has resumed his work and is reported ready to take charge of the Buffalo convention.

Sport Shorts From Britain

London, Nov. 8. (CP)— Ocean Swell, this year's Derby winner, disproved a belief he was a plodder with a remarkable burst of speed that won him the important Jockey Cub Cup at Newmarket's closing meet of the season.

Pounding up the hill in the last furlong of the severe 2 1-4 miles course, Lord Rosebery's great stayer passed Sir Malcolm McAlpine's Historic to win by three lengths going away. The horse didn't need a whip. Crack jockey Eph Smith used only his hands in guiding Ocean Swell past three horses in the final push.

"I think he is a better horse now than when he won the Derby", Lord Rosebery said after the race. "I'm keeping him in training for next year's Gold Cup.

Historic, an eccentric animal, also will be kept in training next season. He caused amusement in the unsaddling enclosure when, after his saddle had been removed, he sank to the ground and rolled over twice.

"He does that after all his races", trainer Vic Smyth said. "And also after his exercising. It doesn't matter whether it's on the turf, clinkers or stones. He must have his roll and he thoroughly enjoys it —even if it isn't a victory roll".

Fifty-one-year-old David Lederman of Birmingham won $33,750 from bookmakers during a day's racing at Newmarket. While still on the course he was taken ill and died in hospital.

Now it is doubtful whether his winnings will be paid to his widow by the "bookies", because, as one expert put it, "If Lederman had lost that money to the bookmakers before dying, they would have had no legal claim on his estate for money due to betting transactions, even though track bookmaking is legal in Britain". Tattersalls Committee, which decides betting disputes, may be asked for a ruling.

A jockey's patience reformed the most handsome horse at Newmarket from a rouge who didn't care much for a race-track into a hard-trying finisher.

Hunsingore, owned by Maj. David Holliday, had shown winning form in all the home gallops and had looked good enough for a Derby, but he performed in public as though a selling plate would have been much too much for him.

Then Jockey Harry Wragg took him over, spoke softly to him and was gentle at all times.

Hunsingore responded by winning a small race. Then, to wind up the season, he surprised almost everyone by winning the important Newmarket Cambridgeshire with Wragg up. Carrying a stiff weight burden, the three-year-old made his challenge a furlong from home and went on to win easily by three lengths.

TACKLES SEXTON

When Promoter Frank Tunney replaced Frank Sexton for Babe Zaharias to meet Al Dunlop in tonight's semi-final wrestling bout at the Hume Arena, Marse Tunney didn't do "The Bunny" any noticeable favor. Sexton, who claims to be Pacific Coast wrestling champion, is one of the speediest and most scientific rasslers in the business, so it looks like a busy night for pudgy Bunny tonight. Featuring the show, however, is the British Empire championship bout between John Katan, the challenger from Palermo and "Whipper Billie" Watson, the champion. There's a high class preliminary also.

Dual championships were also declared in Juvenile A. Congratulations have been extended to the championship teams as follows: Senior A, Hamilton H. P. A. A. A. Around the Town.

Last week Bill Bell won the Kinsmen draw for the weekly quartette of tickets given each week for the N. H. L. home games of the Toronto Maple Leafs . . . For this Saturday's Les Canadiens at Toronto game Carl R. Green was lucky winner . . . Each week the Kinsmen are holding a draw of four box seats for the Leafs' home games with all profits going to the club's "fag fund" . . . At a quarter a draw the tickets are available at all local news stands . . . Although pretty well done out as the result of Monday night's jail break, President Joe Samain has called a semi-annual meeting of the Belleville Men's Softball League to be held at the Court House tomorrow night . . . Judging from the physical going over Prexy Samain received at the hands of five jail-breaking desperadoes he'll have to let Secretary Don Lee do most of the talking . . . It's too bad Promoter Frank Tunney couldn't have let some of his ring pachyderms loose with those jailbird hoodlums, but he's got something just as good at the Hume Arena tonight when he sends Frank Sexton against Bunny Dunlop in the semi-final . . . But what the patrons are paramountly interested in is the Katan-Watson title bout, even though Watson seems to be the perennial champ. . . . There's always the cance the champ. might have consumed too much steak.

Long Time, No See.

Now that the St. Louis Browns have won their first pennant, the new record stretch for non-championship years is held by the Boston Braves, whose last flag winner was the 1914 miracle team. Following the Braves for this dubious distinction are the Phillies, who have experienced 29 straight non-pennant years, only one less than Boston. The longest wait in the American League has now been made by the Red Sox, who have not registered a winner since 1918. Non-championship stretches of major league teams follow:

National League		American League

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 336

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

There are bridge players who jump all over the place. Like fleas with ants in the pants. They get the bidding higher than a kite and lose chances for swapping advice.

Others go to the other extreme. They keep the bidding lower than a snake's underbutton. Even at the expense of hiding valuable stuff from partner.

Good bidding calls for the happy medium. Keep the bidding low if you can do so without holding back dope needed by partner. Jump the bidding when it reveals what partner needs to know.

There is a jump bid to fit any bridge situation. A one-jump shows strength. A double-jump shows length and strength. A triple jump shows length only.

Take opening bids. A two-bid shows strength enough for a game. A three-bid shows a long-strong trump suit and outside strength. A four bid shows a long suit and no outside strength.

Present yourself with this hand:

♠ K Q J 9 8 7 5 2
♥ 7
♦ K J 4

Is it an opening bid of one spade? No. That would show four high cards, two sure tricks, five tricks. There are not enough high cards and sure tricks.

Is it an opening of two spades, a one-jump? No. That would show a hand strong enough to guarantee a game, or nearly so; nine tricks. This hand counts only seven tricks.

Is it an opening of three spades, a double jump? No. That would show the strength of a sure trick in some outside suit. This hand has no such outside strength.

Is it an opening of four spades, a triple-jump? Could be. That merely shows a long trump suit and nothing else. Such a bid should show eight tricks. But some players do it with less.

Generally an opening four spade or four heart bid is defeated. If it is, the loss is usually less than opponents could have made at their own bid.

What's one man's pizen is another man's meat.

N.H.L. Managers Satisfied With Their Goalies

By ERIC SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Before the 1944-45 race for the National Hockey League championship got under way club officials were reluctant to reveal the names of their goaltenders. But so far there have been no reports of dissatisfaction.

Coach Hap Day of the league-leading Toronto Maple Leafs, who had hoped to acquire goalie Paul Bibeault from Montreal Canadiens but was unable to come to terms with Coach Dick Irvin, appears to have selected a worthy successor. The new Leaf custodian, 26-year-old Frank McCool, a former Calgary sportswriter, at present leads the league with only nine goals scored against him in four games.

Bill Durnan, regular custodian for the 1943-44 champions, Montreal Canadiens, and runner-up last season to Gus Bodnar, Toronto forward, for the rookie of the year award, and Connie Dion of Detroit Red Wings each has been beaten once more than McCool in the same number of games.

Harvey Bennett, goalie with Oshawa Generals now tending the nets for Boston Bruins, Ken McAuley, playing his second year with New York Rangers, and Mike Karakas of Chicago have each had 20 goals deposited into their cages.

Coach Day's selection of McCool came after a hard training session at Owen Sound, where he picked his new custodian in preference to two other aspirants for the job—Pat Boehmer of Kitchener, and Leo Sargent of St. Catharines.

Play in the N.H.L. resumes tomorrow night when Leafs play Rangers at New York and Black Hawks clash with Canadiens at Montreal.

New York, Nov 8. (AP)—Consider the plight of the Army football team. . . The cadets have scored at better than a point a minute clip so far (some periods have been shortened), but if they don't beat 32 points against a still good Notre Dame outfit Saturday they'll be tabbed as "Bums" by comparison with their leading rival, Navy . . . Judge Landis' official baseball book, which didn't come out this year because of paper shortage, will be published again next summer.

SEVEN SPLENDID BOUTS GIVEN AT AIR STATION

Mountain View Station Brings Boxers From Toronto to Entertain Personnel

Seven splendid boxing bouts were presented for the entertainment of the officers and personnel of the Mountain View R. C. A. F. station Tuesday evening when civilian boxers from Toronto added color to the rings proceedings.

The show was under the direction of F/O. James McCaa, chief sports officer, and directed by Cpl. Vic Bagnato, former Golden Gloves champion, who arranged for the Toronto fighters to appear on the show even at their own expense. At the conclusion of the night's bouts, which were received by over 700 of the station personnel, Group Captain Gibb, commanding officer of the station, presented enscribed bracelets to the visiting civilian boxers as a token of the appreciation of the station.

In the initial bout "Nipper" White, R. A. F., staged something of a comedy scrap with "Windmill" Lockard of Hamilton with the latter being given the nod. LAC. George Carr, R. A. F., and LAC. Jim Rowell, R. A. F., proved willing boxers and battled to a three round even match.

In a grudge fight LAC. Bert Pearson carried too much punching power for LAC. George Richardson to win the favor and decision of the judges. However, both boys showed plenty of punching ability to please the patrons. Cpl. Eddie Morton, who hails from London, England, and is with the R. A. F., fought an interesting draw with LAC. Lee Dowswell of Sarnia. This bout was productive of some hard punching and good boxing timing. F/Sergt. Bob Cairns of Toronto, punched out a scientific win over LAC. Fred Orrin, of the R. A. F. and also of London.

In the semi-final go Kid Gregory and Frankie Brancetti, both of Toronto, staged a strong boxing show by mixing matters well, Gregory substituting for Frank Pucci. The main bout, between Joey Bagnato, Canada's leading lightweight, and Mel Glionia, also of Toronto, was productive of boxing that showed the finer arts of the pastime and the boys' efforts were highly received. Steve Rocco, former world's featherweight boxing champion, acted as referee. The boxers, including Pte. Charlie Bagnato, were thanked by F/O. McCaa.

NO CLAIMANTS FOR TIRES

Montreal, Nov. 8 — (CP) — Tire-seeking motorists could hardly believe it when police yesterday said that 280 of 800 stolen tires recovered during the last three months had not yet been returned to their owners — because there were no claimants.

PICTON

Prince Edward Boys Included In Casualty List

Picton, Nov. 8—More Prince Edward County boys are included in the latest casualties. Flight Sgt. Jack Griffin, R.C.A.F., is missing after air operations over Germany, Pte. Howard Hyderman was killed in action in Belgium, Lieut. Lloyd Minaker has been wounded in action in Holland, Pte. Reg. Young has been killed in action in Belgium. A former Cherry Valley boy, Pilot Officer Lindsay Smith, R.C.A.F. is reported killed.

Jack Griffin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Griffin Picton. He graduated as an air gunner at Three Rivers, Quebec, going overseas last June. He arrived in England just too late to see his brother, Gunner Lawrence Griffin, who had left to take part in the invasion of Normandy. He was reported missing following the 1000-plane raid last Thursday over Dusseldorf, Germany. His parents received official notice yesterday.

Pte. Hyderman is one of five sons of George Hyderman, Picton, in the army, four of them in action overseas. He was just 18 years of age and was born in Picton. He went overseas in July, as a member of the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa. His twin brother, Arthur, resides with his father here. Those serving overseas are Fred, Danny and Robert, while Ben is stationed at Dunnville. Another brother, Bernard (twin of Ben) resides in Belleville. Mrs. E. M. Ingles of Westboro is a sister.

Lieut. Minaker, former school teacher, at Cherry Valley and Salmon Point, was wounded in Holland. His wife and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Minaker, reside in Toronto. He served in France, Belgium and Holland with the Manitoba Dragoons. The official report stated he had received burns on the hand, arm and side. While here, he played hockey and softball and was active in young people's work.

Pte. R. Young is the son of Mrs. Frank Young, Sr., of Consecon. He died of wounds received Oct. 20. He enlisted Sept. 23, 1940, with the Midland Regiment and went overseas April 1st, 1943, transferring later to the Highland Light Infantry. Born at Sturgeon Falls, 29 years ago, he moved to Consecon at the age of seven and resided there until enlistment. Survivors are his mother two sisters, Mrs. Arthur Hewton and Mrs. Harold Radway, Consecon; twin brothers, Frank and James, the former serving overseas, and the latter stationed at Kingston after service in Sicily.

Pilot Officer Lindsay Smith, only son of Rev. and Mrs. L. B. Smith of Addison, formerly of Cherry Valley, who was reported missing, is now reported to have been killed. All members of the crew lost their lives. He was buried at Velno, Holland. His father was a prisoner-of-war in the last conflict. PO. Smith enlisted in March 1942, and trained at Belleville, Fort William and received his commission at St. John's, Quebec, in April 1943 and went overseas the following July. He was born at Cherry Valley 21 years ago and attended school there.

Bata Shoe Co. Acquires New, Larger Building

Picton, Nov. 8 — Picton's newest industry, the Bata Shoe Co., is expanding. It was announced yesterday that the firm has rented the spacious building erected a few years ago by Dumo Textiles, and will take possession in two weeks' time. Present premises in the market building will be vacated. The transfer will permit doubling the present staff of 60 employees. In recent weeks the local plant has turned out 800 pairs of sport shoes daily.

Town Council

Due to the fact that advice had not been received from a Toronto solicitor, town council at its meeting took no further action regarding the purchase of the Owen's estate, which was offered at a nominal sum in the will of the late Mrs. A. Owens. Delay is due to the fact that the house was damaged by fire and it is to be decided if the insurance paid affects the price to be paid.

Miss Margaret Cahoon, Reg. N., Picton, was engaged to act as Public Health Nurse until another can be secured. Mrs. Elizabeth Haggart's resignation was effective Nov. 1st as she plans to go overseas.

A bill from a Toronto firm, for $500. for sewage survey here, was received and ordered paid. The firm's representatives will visit the town soon to explain the survey.

Merchants are requested to close stores from 10.30 to 12.30 Saturday morning during the Remembrance Day service.

Shipping Record

During October, a record for canned goods shipped from Picton harbor, to Canadian markets, was set. This amount has been exceeded only when there were heavy exports. Total for October was 62,000 tons. The rush continues.

Overseas since 1940, F.O. Jack Martin has arrived home to spend leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Martin. He served in England, Ceylon and India. He was mentioned in dispatches for bringing home a badly-riddled plane.

Three Over Quota

The villages of Bloomfield and Wellington and the township of S. Marysburg have exceeded their quotas in the Victory Loan drive of the million dollars to be secured by civilian canvass; $829,350 was reported at noon yesterday. In addition, Mountain View RCAF has raised $232,700 or 146 per cent of their quota.

Mme. De Gaulle Shuns Limelight

By BARBARA WACE
(Associated Press Writer)

Paris, Nov. 8. (AP)— Among the least known of the world's first ladies is Mme. Therese de Gaulle, wife of the president of the French provisional government.

Because Mme. de Gaulle lives the purely domestic life of any good provincial wife in France, and because she puts the comfort of her husband and three children before everything else, you hardly ever read about her in the newspapers.

Slight, dark-haired, grey-eyed Mme. de Gaulle arrived in France by plane from Algiers Sept. 21 with her daughters, Elizabeth and Marie. A son, Philippe, is a naval lieutenant.

Since her arrival, she has been too busy to step into the limelight. There is the unassuming, modern House outside Paris to be put in order, her own furniture to be arranged, shopping to be done. There are meals which must be planned carefully in these days of short rations—the general eats both lunch and dinner at home. At all costs, good French wives see that their husbands are made comfortable.

Behind her diffident, reserved manner, Mme. de Gaulle hides strength derived from a deep spiritual life, and with her in their home the general finds peace from state troubles. Together they attend Mass, take long walks in the country.

Together they follow the career of their son, attached to the LeClerc division. Young de Gaulle was one of the guard of honor when his father entered Paris

Their elder daughter, Elizabeth, finished school in England with a brilliant record this summer and then worked a short time in her father's office at Algiers.

An example of Mme. de Gaulle's desire of remaining out of the limelight was her refusal of a seat of honor at the Fourteenth of July ceremonies in London. Instead, she watched French soldiers from the crowd, travelling to the celebration by bus instead of official car.

Little Benny's Note Book

We had fish instead of meat for supper, and I was eating my 2nd helping more because I was still hungry than because I like fish, and Nora brought in the dizzert, being rice pudding, and ma gave me some in a saucer, and I said, Aw heck, good night, ma, there's no raisins in it. G winnickers, that's worse news than the fish, I said.

Now mind what you're saying, young man, ma said. With the whole world in the throws of turmoil you ought to consider yourself a very lucky boy to have any pudding at all, not to mention a roof over your head to eat it under, she said, and I said, Well aw G, ma, what's the idea of rice pudding without raisins?

I suppose Nora thought it would be more economical, and I'm glad she takes that much intrist, ma said, and I said, But jimminy, ma, I mean gosh, I dont want to eat rice pudding without raisins, and if I dont eat it it'll just be waisted, so what's so economical about that?

If you dont eat it today you'll have it promptly set in front of you again tomorrow, that's my answer to that, ma said, and pop said, And by gollies if you dont eat it for a week you'll have it set in front of you every day for a week, which would make it one of the most economical dizzerts ever invented. It would even be going a step further than the Japs, because the Japs are said to be able to live on a handfull of rice a day and yet they've never found a way to live on the same handfull for a week, he said.

Me thinking, Good night, heck, I better get it over with and be done with it.

The result being I ate 3 helpings, being one more than I usually eat even when it has raisins in it.

GYPSY BLOOD

By MARGARET NORRIS

CHAPTER THREE

Anna pictured her father's wrath when he opened the door on the empty squalor of their room to find her not at the accustomed place, preparing the evening meal over the rusty gas plate in the corner. He would be angry indeed! In her imagination she could hear him shouting for her, cursing the silence of the walls, then clattering heavily down the stairs to call her again from below. Above the trams and the jangling sounds of the street, above the babble of humanity, the girl fancied she could hear her father's voice:

"Anna! Anna! I want you!"

Years of patient drudgery had so schooled Anna to obey that voice that she doubted her ability to hear it without involuntarily turning back. She stuffed her fingers in her ears and ran faster.

It was mid-August and therefore still daylight and the heat lay over the city like a blanket tucked in at the corners, leaving no crevice for air. The terrible heat settled down from above, and it rolled up from below,—rolled up on her from the sun soaked steets like successive waves of the ocean, hitting her body with oppressive force, making her faintly sea sick. Anna opened the coarse blue shirt at the throat and rolled the sleeves to the elbow and wondered which of the maze of streets would lead her to the country.

In a shop window she caught a glimpse of herself and involuntarily halted, shocked by the reflection she caught there. Could this be herself, this strange, hydrid creature, neither man, woman nor child, in the clumsy overalls so much too big two of her might might easily have been stuffed therein?

A telltale strand of yellow hair that had escaped the massacre of the pen-knife blew over one ear like a corn tassle that ripened in the sun. Furtively Anna jabbed it under her cap, gave a hitch to the mammoth trousers and prayed that the night might speedily fall to cover her incongruities.

But when night came, where would she sleep? Under what roof find shelter? For just a moment despair tugged at the girl's heart,—then she put her hand in her pocket and her fingers closed tenderly on the 12, beautiful sea-green dollar bills. Their crackle was music to her ears. It gave her such comfort she laughed. What difference did anything make? She was free, Free, FREE in the promised land, and already she was rich!

Anna passed a barber shop, which reminded her that a hair cut might be helpful in her masquerade. The sight of girls in there as well as men gave her courage to enter—to slip inside unostentatiously into the nearest chair. In the full length mirror opposite she had another terrible glimpse of herself in the grotesque man's attire, before the barber came to tie round her a long white apron that mercifully covered her to the knees.

But Anna knew by the way he smiled that he himself had missed none of the picture—had taken the situation in as fully as though she had explained it. He was a slim young man very sleek and blond. Anna studied his face in the mirror. He looked like the dudes she had known at home—the ones who had come out from the city to see the country on holidays. His type was so perfectly familiar that she was not at all surprised when he started speaking to her in Polish.

"You cut it yourself?" he asked, shears poised in mid air, gazing scornfully at her mangled tresses.

Anna nodded sheepishly.

"And what did you use? A saw?"

Anna blushed in confusion. "Cut it short, please, just like a boy." She answered him in her native tongue. It was pleasant to find one of her countrymen, but too bad he was such a pill.

"Oh ho! So you want to be a boy! Is that why you dress like one? But it is not permitted in America for a girl to wear men's clothes."

Hot shame flooded Anna's face. Cold fear tugged at her heart. "Wh-wh-why is it not permitted?"

"Because it is against the law. You are not in Poland now and running around New York like this —". The young barber winked at Anna insolently.

Anna wanted to slap his face, but she was too frightened to speak. She concentrated on the shears cutting her hair. It fell on her shoulders like yellow silk. Her ears stood out naked and exposed like a boy. They were very pretty ears like delicate shells placed close to her head. The effect was entirely becoming. But Anna was too frightened to notice that—which meant she was frightened indeed.

"Wh-wh-what would they do if they found I was a girl?"

"They would turn you over to the police."

"And the police?"

"Oh they would run you in." The young barber snipped the air with his shears.

"What do you mean, they would 'run me in' if they found me dressed like a boy?" Anna addressing the flippant barber who had just shorn her golden locks, tried to look nonchalant and to keep her voice from faltering.

"Chuck you in the brig—lock you up—find out why you are doing it and then send you home like any runaway."

Anna caught her breath. What an uncanny person this barber was, this sleek young man from Poland, who spoke to her in her own language and seemed to read her mind. He had finished with his shears and was dusting her off, brushing the yellow hairs from her shoulders, untying the protecting apron that hid her telltale garb. As she saw her reflection in the mirror in her father's uncouth clothes Anna, who never before had given more thought to her appearance than a flower in the field, was suddenly embarrassed as though she were nude.

She bolted for the door. The barber blocked her way. "Fifty cents, please," he said. Anna blushed guiltier than ever. "I meant to pay, really I did." She handed him the first of her beloved dollar bills; he rang up his fee and gave her the change.

"A little frightened? Well, I don't wonder. If you have no place to spend the night, we stay open until late." He scribbled his name and address on a card.

Anna's black eyes flashed lightning bolts. "Pig!" she shouted in Polish. With hands which itched to knock him down she tore the card in shreds, stamped it under her feet and strode out the door.

The heat was more oppressive than ever, but she did not notice it. The element of danger had cleared her mind. She could not spend the night in New York in these clothes, and the night would soon be upon her. She must get out of the city into the country—the blessed fields like those in Poland where there was work for her hands, and air for her lungs, and boad horizons to ease her aching eyes.

Which one of the streets would lead her there? Of whom dared she inquire? Was this city interminable? Had it no end? Did the streets go round and round in circles, each one dirtier and more unkempt than the other, more crowded and therefore more terrifying?

Anna had no idea how far she had walked but it must have been miles and miles for the clock on the corner read half past eight and her feet ached with fatigue when suddenly she emerged on a broad thoroughfare, lighted more brightly than day and packed with jabbering humanity. There were crowds of people everywhere—men and women, white from exhaustion, seeking relief from the heat on the pavement, fanning themselves and chattering; children, hundreds of them, dancing, playing ball, skipping rope, quite oblivious of the heat.

An old man, grizzled and dirty, was playing a hurdy gurdy, while a wizened wee monkey in a little red coat was passing the hat for pennies. An old woman was selling pretzels on a stick; a young man was hawking ice cream cones; another was calling ice cold drinks. Young lovers were strolling arm in arm, casting shy glances at each other; everywhere was music, gaiety, life—the whole thing was so much like a fete day that Anna forgot she was alone and frightened. Lost in the whirling maelstrom of people, flung together in a mad mosaic, floating aimlessly about, a bit of jetsam on the endless human stream, Anna felt quite safe. No one would notice her here, since she had no identity of her own.

Just then some one chucked her under the chin. "Hello, girlie! Busy?"

The interloper was a young man about 20 with black curly hair, handsome in a dark florid way. He winked at Anna and took her arm; then his eye fell on her clothes.

"I say, where did you steal those pants? Why not take a pair that fit?" He nudged his companion and they both laughed. "Come on, kid, we'll dress you up!"

The remarks shocked Anna from her momentary peace like cold water poured on one while asleep. Her heart lost a beat and fear choked her. She turned and started to run. She ran as fast as her legs would let her, pushing aside all obstacles in her path, the dancing children, the strolling lovers, the old woman with the pretzel cart, jostled the hurdy gurdy man, almost stepped on the monkey, ran in spite of the heat and the curious stares, ran like a creature pursued.

Ahead of her was a familiar structure which said in white letters, "SUBWAY". Anna knew the subway because she took it to work. It was a breathless, roaring monster that carried her underground to the fur factory. Its destination she did not know. She had often wondered where it would take her if she did not get off at the appointed station. She had never dared investigate. Anyhow it would take her somewhere.

Like a rabbit darting into its hole, Anna disappeared down the subway entrance, plugged a nickel into the slot and flung herself on the first train that roared by.

When Anna found herself in a subway car with plenty of vacant seats she thought she must have made a mistake and started to get off. It was the first time she had ever ridden on one except at morning and evening rush hours, a time when the struggling, breathless mass were hurled to and from their working places like cattle packed in an underground car. Anna didn't know it was possible to sit down in the subway. The best she had known in those death throttling rides was to hang by a strap from the ceiling, or to lurch perilously along supported only by the perspiring bodies of the other human cattle who held her upright as in a vise, lunging with them in one body, now forward, now backward with the motion of the car, like a monster whose multitudinous heads upset its equilibrium.

Now, confronted with a half empty car, Anna thought she must have strayed into some de luxe carriage, to ride in which she must pay an extra fee. She clutched her precious money and looked around for an irate official who would try to separate her from it. None being visible, she sat down timidly in the nearest corner seat— and sighed aloud with the relief of it. The last few hours had exhausted her. The excitement of her flight from her father, her fear of the police, the long miles she had walked in the gruelling heat had drained her, physically and emotionally. She was too tired even to think.

Forgetful of everything, even of her clothes, Anna stretched out her aching legs, leaned her head against the back of the seat and dully regarded her companions. Beside her sat a man with a dirty beard from whom she moved away, instinctively. Across the aisle was a pretty girl who reminded her of Rose, with a lad who looked like the sailor—of the same ruddy color, and straight and tall as Anna remembered the sailor on the boat had been. But the resemblance stirred no longing in her heart. Too much had happened since ship board. There were other nondescript passengers, but the girl saw them all vaguely and through a blur, half unconscious with lassitude.

The train roared on with intermittent stops. Anna wondered where it would take her. She wondered dimly if she ought to get off. Btu she knew she couldn't if she wanted to. Were it headed straight for destruction she knew she could not get off at the next station. Fatigue lay upon the girl like a mighty weight. She made no effort to throw it off. The roar of the train became the roar of the sea; the hard seat, her cabin berth. Anna's fatigue was like the nausea of seasickness. Gradually she yielded to it. Her head dropped lower, her limbs grew heavier, she sank into the oblivion of slumber.

Anna was wakened (she had no idea how much later) by someone shaking her shoulder. Her eyes flew wide open with terror and involuntarily she leaped to her feet. A man in uniform was bending over her. "Of course", she thought, "it is a policeman". The worst had happened—but what of it? By this time she scarcely cared.

"Wake up, little girl, you'll have to get o..". (The guard's voice was very kind.) "We run into the barns at the end of this trip. You'd better be going home".

"Wh-wh-where are we?"

"Next stop is Union Square and it's midnight. Where do you want to go?"

"To the country. Will your train take me there?"

"Well, hardly. Not on this trip".

The conductor was observing his strange, midnight passenger. He was accustomed to all sorts and kinds but this was one of the strangest whom he had carried for many a night. He observed that she was wearing man's clothes which did not conceal the fact that she was young and pretty, very much alone and, patently, very much afraid. But if one is a subway conductor one cannot be too soft hearted, nor play the role of rescuer to ladies in distress.

"Where do you live? Haven't you a home?"

Anna's first impulse was to tell the conductor her story. There was something about this man she liked. He had spoken to her kindly and few had done that since she came to New York. Should she not confide in him and beg him to advise her what to do? But something warned her not to. Anna remembered what the barber had said—how they turned runaways over to the police. She must be on her guard.

"Of course I have a home", she said haughtily.

The train jerked to a stop. The doors opened as though by an unseen hand. Anna saw her last refuge vanishing. With head held high she sauntered off into the gloomy, deserted station as nonchalantly as thought it were her usual stop.

"I'm all right", she assured herself, talking out loud for company. "One is always safe if one has money". And she stuffed her hand in her pocket for the comforting feel of the bills.

But if a steel trap had bitten Anna's hand the shock could not have been greater. Her pocket was empty as a vacuum. Everyone of the bills was gone!

Anna could not believe her money was gone. It was too incredible. She felt first in one pocket, then in the other, then turned them both inside out. They were bare as Mother Hubbard's cupboard. Not a single cent remained.

What had happened? Had her roll fallen out as she lay asleep in her subway seat? Or had someone stolen it from her? The man with the dirty beard? The pretty girl that looked like Rose? The lad who reminded her of the sailor? She must have slept there for hours, unconscious as though she were dead, her pockets yawning in invitation, while dozens of passengers came and went. Almost anyone might have taken it.

But the outstanding fact with Anna was that the money was gone —where or how mattered little; and here she was at midnight, penniless in the subway station with no one to whom to turn for help and no place to spend the night. She hadn't even a nickel to click her way through the gate to the platform where the trains roared by, should she wish to board another and so ride on until dawn.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Nov. 8 (AP)-Post-election financial markets generally maintained a fair amount of equilibrium today and, while stocks negotiated a mild average retreat, exceptions were in evidence and selling never was urgent.

Wall Street, on the whole, was far from surprised at the results of Tuesday's balloting. There was some pessimistic liquidation, however, by those who desired to await further light on congressional shifts.

Backward most of the time were Great Northern, Chrysler, Goodyear, Electric Power & Light, Commonwealth & Southern, American Water Works, Westinghouse, Douglas Aircraft and Du Pont. Boeing exhibited strength and occasional advancers were Santa Fe, J. I. Case, United Aircraft, Anaconda and Southern Pacific. N. Y. Central was given a lift by the $1 dividend.

ROYAL MARINE COMMANDOS MAKE BLOODY LANDING ON WALCHEREN ISLAND

Royal Marine commandos land on the beachhead at Westrapelle, Walcheren from LCT (Landing Craft, Tank). Supreme Headquarters disclosed that the British landing at Walcheren Island was one of the costliest attacks on the western front. In one spot 20 out of 25 invasion craft were sunk. Indications are that Walcheren cost more lives than Dieppe.

This photo just released shows three members of the crew of an LCT swimming for shore as their craft keels over under the heavy Nazi bombardment that greeted British Commandos and Royal Marines when they secured their bloody beachhead on the Dutch island of Walcheren, Holland. Stories just released tell of hidden German batteries that poured heavy fire into the ranks of the invaders.

A long line of Allied vehicles pauses to cross a canal in a flooded section of southern Beveland during an advance across the peninsula toward Walcheren in Holland.

When the first Canadian soldiers arrived in Australia, they were welcomed by Mr. Justice T. C. Davis, Canadian high commissioner to Australia, who is shown having an informal talk with the troops at Angleburn Camp, New South Wales. At extreme right is Major-General E. C. P. Plant, general officer commanding New South Wales lines of communication.

The War Today—

Stalin's Characterization of Japan As Aggressor Nation Significant

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst.)

Premier Stalin's blunt characterization of Japan as an aggressor nation is of prime significance.

This is the first time the Soviet chief personally has spoken so sharply—at least publicly—to the country with which Russia has a non-aggression pact—a treaty which the Japs no longer are likely to challenge. The marshal's charge certainly invites renewed speculation whether Russia may eventually join her Allies against the Mikado's militarists.

However, as I see it, there are a lot of "ifs" to be hurled before we arrive at a Russo-Japanese conflict.

Russia Among Main Powers

The world is about to see an epochal readjustment of the spheres of influence among the major powers in Europe and Asia. Russia is emerging as the dominant nation on both continents.

If this readjustment is to be achieved peacefully there's bound to be much bargaining. Therefore it's not far-fetched to assume that Russia's attitude toward Japan might figure largely.

It's a fair bet that this question was discussed by Marshal Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill at their recent conference in Moscow. It's an equaly good gamble that it will be near the top of the agenda at the next parley among the big three. It's hard to escape the thought that there may be considerable bartering.

Moscow would seem to be in rather an enviable position. Her interests in the Orient are vast, but as things stand she could remain passive and let Britain and the United State whip Japan. They're committed to the task anyway.

Need Co-operation From Atlantic to Pacific

However, that's not the complete picture. The readjustment of spheres in the eastern hemisphere must be considered as a whole—for both Europe and Asia. Co-operation must extend from the English channel to the Pacific if there is to be a partnership which will permit of a workable organization to maintain peace.

It's vital that the big three stand together. This is particularly true because, as Mr. Stalin says, Germany already is planning a new war, and it is believed the Japanese military clique also is preparing for another attempt 25 years hence.

New York State Goes to President

New York, Nov. 8—(AP)—President Roosevelt's New York plurality climbed past 325,000 today, clinching for the victorious fourth-term candidate his home state's 47 electoral votes.

Mr. Roosevelt forged ahead today when tabulation of New York city's crushing Democratic vote finally erased Gov. Dewey's tenuous lead in Republican Upstate and Long Island counties.

Senator Robert F. Wagner made the grade for the fourth time by thumping Secretary of State Thomas J. Curran, Republican nominee.

With only 290 of the state's 9,121 districts missing, Mr. Roosevelt had rolled up a plurality of 325,849 on the basis of unofficial returns. The vote Roosevelt 3,233,467; Dewey 2,970,618.

Complete returns from New York City's 3,700 districts gave Mr. Roosevelt a plurality of 769,849. The final count: Roosevelt 2,039,932; Dewey 1,270,083.

In 5,131 of the 5,421 districts outside New York City, Mr. Dewey's lead aggregated 444,000. The vote: Dewey 1,637,535; Roosevelt 1,193,535.

Not even the veteran Republican representative Hamilton Fish survived the Democratic onslaught. Fish, whose now defunct 26th district kept him in congress for 24 years, fell before Augustus Bennet, in the new 29th congressional district.

VOTED FOR PRESIDENT

West Palm Beach, Fla., Nov. 8 — (AP)—Palm Beach county's oldest voter, Mrs. Lucertia Hanong, 103, cast a ballot for President Roosevelt yesterday then remarked: "I'll vote for him again four years from now if he runs."

Germans Cooped Inside Dunkerque Can Stay 3 Months

By DON CAMPBELL
(Reuter War Correspondent)

Outside Dunkirk, Nov. 8 — (CP-Reuter)—The 10,000 to 12,000 German troops cooped up inside the 25-mile perimeter of Dunkirk are reported to have enough "cattle, cabbage and champagne" for at least three months.

Besieged by Czech troops of the 1st Canadian Army in one of Europe's most depressing battlefields, they are receiving special attention from the German high command's "morale" section. Planes fly over at night and drop them magazines, letters, messages from relatives, pep talks and picture postcards depicting Nazi heroics. One booklet contained a special message from the Fuehrer himself.

The Arctic blast of a 60-mile-per-hour gale was blowing the leaves off the trees in the flooded farmland around the besieged port when I drove to it today from Belgium.

It struck me as the dreariest, most detached and waterlogged field imaginable. The roads over which the British Expeditionary Force retreated in 1940 now are under anything from 18 inches to 15 feet of water.

Minor Naval Action

Every couple of Germans have a boat, and with many of the Czech troops waterborne too, minor naval actions are being played out around the perimeter.

At 10 p. m. last Saturday the Czechs attacked towards the town from the point below the Dunkirk-Furnes canal.

They used three narrow lumpy lanes parallel to and about 3,000 yards south of the Dunnes where Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, now commanding the Allied forces in Italy, and his Tommies waited on the beaches more than four years ago.

The Czechs punched forward two miles, captured 165 prisoners and killed and wounded more than 250—the equivalent of a battalion of German infantry.

Small pockets of Germans, usually under cover of night, cross the swampy flood to give themselves up. They say there is quite strong feeling to give up among the men but the officers still are determined to hold out.

The Germans have plenty of fire power left in Dunkirk. They have in addition mortars and rocket incendiaries, both phosphorous and oil. Sniper warfare is also well organized.

Michigan Swings To Roosevelt

Detroit, Nov. 8 —(AP)— The Detroit News said at 8 a.m. today that a Michigan victory for President Roosevelt was indicated on the basis of the incomplete unofficial count of Wayne (Detroit) County's bulging ballot boxes.

The News said a plurality of upwards of 50,000 votes for Roosevelt was indicated by the returns.

Returns from 2,146 of Michigan's 3,841 precincts, including 557 of the 1,386 in Wayne (Detroit, the democratic stronghold) showed President Roosevelt gaining on Thomas E. Dewey. The vote was Dewey 686,539, Roosevelt 596,991.

Governor Harry F. Kelly, republican incumbent, led Edward J. Fry, democrat, 407,963 to 230,844 on returns from 1,323 precincts.

Plans for a celebration were abandoned at Owosso, Gov. Dewey's birthplace. The complete vote in the prosperous central Michigan city showed Mr. Dewey the winner 3,787 to 1,947. In 1940 Willkie carried Owosso 3,040 to 2,179.

There were no senatorial seats at stake in Michigan.

CHURCHILL WANTS CONFERENCE OF "BIG THREE"

U.S. DRIVE AT METZ INCREASES IN VIOLENCE

Expresses Hope Plans Can Be Made To End War Soon

Full Exertions of All Needed To Defeat Nazis

London, Nov. 9 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill warned today that the "full exertions" of Britain, the United States and Russia will be needed to defeat Germany, "this military antagonist at last beaten back to his own lair."

Britain's dominant thought was to end the "frightful slaughter and devastation" in Europe within the shortest possible time," he said at the Lord Mayor's luncheon at the Mansion House.

"It is high time we had another triple conference" of himself, President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin, the Prime Minister told a distinguished audience.

Schelde Operation Costly.

He hailed the operation to clear the Schelde Estuary, carried out by armies under Field Marshal Montgomery's command, but added that the hard-fought battle which opened the port of Antwerp for Allied use cost heavy British and Canadian casualties.

He said the victory in the Netherlands opened the Schelde river and "will very shortly place the great port of Antwerp at the disposal of the northern flank which will presently move into Germany for the final struggle."

"Now we stand on the threshold of Germany and it will take the full exertions of the three great powers, every scrap of strength they can give, to crush down the desperate resistance which we must expect from this military antagonist at last beaten back to his own lair."

At another point he said:

"Although it is our duty to work hard—and we have worked hard—to produce large schemes of social improvement and advance, although it is our duty to make preparations for the change-over from war to peace, or from war in Europe to war in Japan, in far distant Asia, although we are bound to work as hard as we can, nothing shall stand in the way of the prosecution of the war to its ultimate conclusion," he declared.

He said a Churchill - Roosevelt - Stalin meeting "might easily bridge the sufferings of mankind and stop the fearful process of destruction which is now ravaging the earth."

Praises Dewey.

Mr. Churchill praised Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for sportsmanship in defeat, saying: "What a model this would be to those states where political differences are not solvable by word or vote, where the question of who is to be in and who is to be out may be one of life and death, to be settled by violence and intrigue and where there may be but a short gap between being the ruler and being the victim."

Describing air attacks upon Germany, the Prime Minister asserted: "We have not suffered one-tenth, and we shall not suffer one-tenth, of what is being meted out to those who first started and developed this cruel and merciless form of attack".

He said no one could be blamed for hoping that victory would come to the Allies and peace to Europe in 1945, provided "he does not slacken his or her efforts for a moment"

Mr. Churchill expressed "great joy" that his co-operation with President Roosevelt would be continued.

"These are months profoundly interwoven with the future of both our countries," he said, "and also we trust that the future association of our two countries will be interwoven with the peace and progress of the whole world."

The Prime Minister said it seemed almost certain Britain would have a general election in 1945. He expressed belief it would be conducted "with all the liveliness and robust vigor which will gratify the political emotions of our public, without destroying that marvelous underlying unity and sense of brotherhood which has long existed in this country and has reached its highest degree among the perils from which we have been delivered."

Jap Stronghold Taken by British

Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 9 —(CP)— British troops have captured the Japanese stronghold of Fort White on the Tiddim-Kalemyo Road in northwestern Burma after two days of heavy fighting, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten announced today.

Fort White is eight miles southeast of Kennedy Peak, the fall of which was announced by Allied headquarters Tuesday, and about 15 miles southeast of Tiddim—main base from which the Japanese launched their abortive invasion of India last year.

Kalemyo lies about 15 miles beyond Fort White.

Pres. Roosevelt's Re-election Seen As Victory for Internationalism

By the Associated Press

Foreign comment, both enemy and Allied, yesterday treated the re-election of President Roosevelt as a victory for internationalism in the United States.

The British Press, anticipating a conference in the near future among Mr. Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin, said the election results should strengthen Mr. Roosevelt's hand in such deliberations.

The German Foreign Office, quoted in a Berlin broadcast, said the election results showed "a tendency to depart from isolationist principles and a stronger tendency to interventionism in European affairs. We shall have to take this fact into future considerations."

Tokyo propagandists, in broadcasts recorded in New York by the Federal Communications Commission, declared it made no difference to the Japanese which candidate won and implied surprise that Americans should take time out in the midst of a "decisive war" to select a new President.

Russia, frankly favoring Mr. Roosevelt's re-election, greeted the result with elation, the Soviets having been chilly toward campaign discussion of the "communist danger" within the United States and fearful that a change of presidents would have temporarily weakened Allied co-operation.

Other reactions in summary:

France: Assembly members interpreted the outcome as a guarantee of American participation in a world peace organization.

Italy: Rome Press greeted the election as endorsement of the President's international policies.

China: Chungking was described as happy at Mr. Roosevelt's success.

Australia: Press expresses satisfaction at Mr. Roosevelt's victory.

United States troops on the western front: Relaxation of previous strict prohibition against questioning troops on the election brought generally favorable comment on Mr. Roosevelt's victory although front-line troops still showed no great interest.

ALLIED TROOPS EMBARKING FOR WALCHEREN LANDINGS

Voluntary Enlistment System To Continue Says Prime Minister King in Radio Talk; Cabinet Rejects Plea To Send Draftees Over

Ottawa, Nov. 9 (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King last night set forth his continued belief in conscription if necessary but not necessarily conscription when he reviewed the overseas reinforcements situation in a half-hour broadcast address.

In support of his policy he said that the voluntary service system has not broken down; that only 68,000 of the 750,000 in the armed forces are not volunteers; that the achievements of the Canadian army have demonstrated the efficiency of its training; that infantry reinforcements have been sufficient to date and that a special appeal can bring more general service enlistments from those called for compulsory military service.

In short, brisk sentences, laden with figures of Canadian strength in manpower, he reviewed the recommendation of Col. J. L. Ralston that conscription for overseas was necessary to keep flowing the reinforcements to be needed overseas.

Faced with Col. Ralston's recommendation as Defence Minister, Mr. King said he had turned to Gen. McNaughton to seek his advice. Gen. McNaughton said he thought the possibilities of voluntary service had not been exhausted.

Col. Ralston resigned last week and Gen. McNaughton became Defence Minister.

The Prime Minister retained the position he has held on overseas service during the war. While the 60,000 effectives in the home defence army will not be sent overseas unless war developments demand, they will not "be maintained in idleness," Compulsion where necessary will continue to be used to ensure fit men of military age perform national service required by the war effort.

Fit draftees "will continue to be a potential ultimate reserve of reinforcements whose compulsory employment in any theatre may, in the light of developing circumstances, have to be reconsidered.

It had always been believed that Canadian forces, having begun as voluntary forces, would be more effective and the country more united if they continued on this basis.

Not Sufficiently Trained.

Only about 8,000 of the less than 60,000 home defence army troops were sufficiently trained as infantry reinforcements to be ready for combat at an early date.

While a detailed plan of demobilization could not be announced, it had been decided to follow the principle that those with the longest and hardest service would be given the first opportunity of leaving the services.

After a warm appeal to home defence men to make themselves available for duty overseas, the Prime Minister said that partisan controversy and division at this time would weaken, not strengthen the war effort.

Casualties Less Than Expected.

The Prime Minister spoke over a Canadian Broadcasting Corporation National Network two days after Gen. McNaughton appealed for support of the voluntary service policy before an Ottawa Canadian Legion meeting and heard members of his audience indicate they were in favor conscription for overseas.

Mr. King said that in actual fighting the army casualties had not been as great as the number estimated and provided for. Infantry casualties were lower than expected in the invasion landings and higher than estimated in the heavy fighting since the beachheads were established in June.

The army had been obliged to transfer some men originally trained for other arms into the pool of infantry reinforcements and all such "re-mustered" troops had received basic infantry training.

No Over-All Shortage.

"In the opinion of the military authorities, no difficulty is likely to arise except in relation to reinforcements for the infantry," Mr. King said.

"Infantry reinforcements have been adequate to meet requirements to date. But, during his recent visit to the army overseas, Col. Ralston learned that to provide replacements for future casualties at present rates, the flow of infantry reinforcements from Canada should be accelerated."

Nazis Evacuate Strumica Valley

London, Nov. 9 — (CP) — The German high command said today German forces had evacuated the Strumica Valley in southern Yugoslavia "according to plan."

The withdrawal apparently was a continuation of the retreat from Greece. The Strumica is a passageway through the mountains between Yugoslavia and Bulgaria.

The Germans declared in the broadcast communique that they had repulsed Allied forces which landed on Melos Island off the Greek southeast coast "after many days of hard fighting." The Germans reported the landing several days ago.

May Not Renew Training Plan

Ottawa, Nov. 9 —(CP)— Possibility that the British Air Training Plan agreement will not be renewed when it expires March 31 was reported today following information Monday that the R.C.A.F. will undergo further curtailment Jan. 1 when the strength will be cut by a third with personnel mustered out on the previously announced "first-in, first-out" basis.

In the absence of Air Minister Power — recovering from an appendectomy at Quebec—air officials said they had nothing official to say on either of the reports.

$20,000 IN SAFE STOLEN

Toronto, Nov. 9 —(CP)— A safe containing $20,000 in cash and bonds as well as a large quantity of valuable jewelry was stolen early today from a downtown butcher shop. Same Lee, Chinese owner of the store, said a number of his family heirlooms were in the stolen safe.

ELECTION OVER, UNITED STATES GETS ON WITH WAR

Roosevelt Controls Both House and Senate With a Solid Working Majority

Washington, Nov. 9. (AP)—President Roosevelt's fourth term victory, sweeping in the electoral vote, was won by the smallest popular vote margin since 1916, the nearly complete returns indicated today.

With 44,353,855 vote reported, the President's edge over Gov. Dewey stood at 2,867,319: Roosevelt, 23,610,587 and Dewey, 20,743,268.

The President was leading in States with 413 electoral votes and Gov. Dewey in States with 118, but where Michigan's 19 votes eventually would wind up was in doubt although Gov. Dewey held a slight lead.

Four years ago the President won by 4,938,711 over Wendell L. Willkie in a total popular vote of 49,815,312.

Woodrow Wilson's margin over Charles E. Hughes in 1916 was only 591,385.

Strengthened Majority.

Swept into office along with the President was a strengthened Democratic majority in the House of Representatives. On the basis of late returns, the Democrats held a plurality of at least 49 seats with 13 contests still undecided.

In the Senate the Democrats seemed assured of maintaining at least their present strength.

Mr. Roosevelt thus carries a strength that Mr. Wilson had lacked when, with a war won, he fell into endless arguments with an unfriendly Congress about the Peace.

Meantime, the country bound up its election wounds and settled down to a let's-get-on-with-the-war attitude.

"Let us unite to win the war and to achieve a lasting Peace" was the solemn request of Mr. Roosevelt as he prepared to return to Washington from Hyde Park. This was the attitude, too, of Gov. Dewey.

Mr. Roosevelt's vote of confidence will still be fresh as he heads into an expected talk before Christmas with Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin.

Democrats elected 19 Senators to give them 55 seats in the 96-man Senate which must approve peace treaties by a two-thirds vote. The Republicans added 11 to their 24 holdovers. Five contests remain for later counts to settle. One seat is held by a Progressive.

Late returns showed that Democrats unseated Republican Governors in Ohio, Massachusetts Missouri, Idaho and Washington, while the Republicans captured Governors' chairs from their opposition in Indiana and North Dakota.

Left in doubt, possibly until next week by when all the state's service vote will be counted, was the Utah governorship. It was a neck-and-neck race between Democrat incumbent Herbert Maw and Republican J. Bracken Lee.

Gov. Dewey could take pride in the fact that the indicted popular vote margin by which he lost is the smallest in 28 years.

May Be Prelude To Big Offensive For the Rhineland

Three More American Divisions Thrown In

By WILLIAM FRYE
(AP Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 9 —(AP)— The United States 3rd Army's attack toward the Rhine was doubled today as Lt.-Gen. Patton threw in three more American divisions and extended the drive to both sides of Metz.

German radio commentators said the U. S. 3rd Army commander signalled the prelude to "the big offensive" with an earth-shaking barrage in an effort "to burst open the historical gate to the palatinate which was chosen by Napoleon as the marching route for his battalions and regiments."

Meanwhile Polish forces of the 1st Canadian Army fought savagely inside breached defences against a suicide German garrison holding the southern approaches to the Moerdike bridges across the Hollandsche Diep.

(A Reuter Field dispatch said German resistance collapsed after the concrete defences were breached.)

"There has been bitter fighting for the Moerdike bridge approaches," said the communique. "We penetrated the concrete defences and made some advance in the face of fierce opposition."

Ned Nordness, Associated Press War Correspondent in Holland, reported almost complete lack of activity on the Netherlands front.

Mopping up by British troops of the 1st Canadian Army continued on Walcheren Island with the Germans reported pocketed on two villages north of fallen Middelburg.

Front line dispatches said Gen. Patton sent two divisions into action north of fort-ringed Metz and another to join the three which attacked south of the city on a 25-mile front yesterday and gained up to three miles.

16 Villages Captured.

At least 16 villages were captured in the combined advance of the 3rd and 7th Armies. Several of the villages had been previosly captured however, and relinquished in the face of counter-attacks.

South of Metz the attack spread all the way from Cheminot, 10 miles south of Metz and four miles east of the Moselle, to the Chateau-Salins area where infantry hammered a mile-deep wedge north of the Rhine-Marne canal at a point 20 miles east of Nancy and an equal distance west of Sarrebourg.

The Germans said the "Americans are making feverish preparations for a new offensive in the Aachen region" also and were seeking to eliminate German artillery observation posts by dropping smoke canisters on them. Artillery fire was intensified on both sides, the Germans said.

In Holland where the first snow of the season fell last night, Field Marshal Montgomery's 21st Army group had seized all of Walcheren Island at the mouth of the Schelde except a tiny pocket around the villages of Buttinge and St. Laurens, two miles northwest of Middelburg. This pocket was isolated from the coast.

The U.S. 1st Army was slowly regaining some of the ground lost this week southeast of Aachen to strong German counter-attacks.

Says Regional Pact In West Europe To Be Discussed

Paris, Nov. 9 —(AP)— The semi-official Agence France Presse indicated today formation of a regional pact among Western European nations will be discussed at the coming Paris meeting of Prime Minister Churchill, Gen. De Gaulle and Foreign Secretary Eden of Britain.

A.F.P.'s diplomatic editor, discussing a world organization for peace, said Gen. De Gaulle had stressed recently France's unwillingness to join any "bloc."

The statement said French policy aims at co-operation between Britain, United States, Russia and France within a world organization, but added:

"However, past experience has shown that a universal formula cannot be workable without regional agreements among nations interested in the same geographic, economic or political problems.

"In this sense and to the exclusion of any other more particular objective, official French circles would view with satisfaction closer unity of these Western European nations—Belgium, Holland, Great Britain and France."

London, Nov. 9 —(CP)— A Foreign Office spokesman, when asked today whether Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Eden would be accompanied to Paris by any other officials, replied: "No, unless President Roosevelt goes along."

Canadians Man and Service Trains Carrying Vital Supplies Across France

By MAURICE DESJARDINS
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in France, Nov. 9—(CP)—Canada's railway troops are making things hum in France. There was a time not so long ago when you nonchalantly whizzed past railroad crossings, but today "stop, look and listen" is the watchword, because trains manned and serviced by Canadians are roaring past carrying vital war supplies.

A company of the 1st Canadian Army railway operating group, under Maj. H. T. Alcorn of Melville, Sask., has worked with railway troops of Britain and the U.S.A. to get things under way.

At a main round-house, locomotives are overhauled and serviced by Canadians who formerly worked for the C.N.R. and C.P.R. in Canada. Strewn along the routes are block-houses from where expert railwaymen watch the trains as they go by and report ahead any visible trouble.

R.C.C.S. men attached to the railway group handle the communication end of it with telephone and teletype.

Supplies of all description are carried on imported as well as captured enemy trains.

Some of the Canadians like Sgt. John James of Vancouver and Sgt. Ted Barnett, Lindsay, Ont., live in old boxcars where they claim to have all or—practically all—the comforts of home.

The company includes fitters like Spr. Jimmy Douglas, of Stratford, Ont. Engineers like Spr. Bill Adams of Ignace, Ont., Spr. Ed Shell of Uxbridge, Ont., Sgt. Wally Wallace St. Thomas, Ont., Spr. Garnet Oulds of Chatham, Ont., and Spr. Johnny Layman of Fort William.

The Canadians realize the importance of the work they are doing and do not shirk at long hours. "It's just like working in a railway yard back home," said battle dressed former C.N.R. man Cpl. Joe Sigouin of Cornwall, Ont., adding "but we feel much nearer to the front line."

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

M. D. 3 IN SECOND PLACE OF ARMY DISTRICTS IN CANADA

Still in second place among other army districts in Canada, Military District No. 3 with headquarters at Kingston has now purchased 148 per cent of its objective in the Seventh Victory Loan with bond sales totalling $1,327,000.

Only four units and establishments of the 36 in the district have yet to reach their objectives. Each is only a small percentage off the 100 per cent mark.

Sixteen units have reached 150 per cent while one had gone over 300 per cent of its quota.

MOTORIZED EQUIPMENT OF ARGYLL REGIMENT GIVEN MINOR REPAIRS

Motorized equipment of the local Argyll Light Infantry is receiving the once-over these past few days with two members of the light aid detachment of the Ordnance Corps from Ottawa visiting in the city to do the checking up. The check-up is a periodical one with all but major repairs being done on the spot by the two visiting mechanics. The two soldier mechanics, Sgt. Gay and Pte. Johnston, were guests of the local Garage Operators at their Wednesday evening meeting at the "Y".

25 TONS WASTE PAPER COLLECTED IN DRIVE

Twenty-five tons of used paper were collected in the city during the Emergency Waste Paper Campaign held here two weeks ago. Collection Campaign Chairman Ald. C.R. Clapp announced today. The official figures were received from campaign headquarters in Toronto.

While this amount would appear to be well below that expected, it must be remembered that the city had been rather well "drained" of its waste paper by regular collections by school children.

In view of this fact, Chairman Clapp stated, this city did very well in its donation of twenty-five tons during the one-day collection campaign.

PRIVATE L. W. REID PRISONER OF WAR

Fluttering earthward with the airborne infantry from huge transport planes the day before D-Day, Private Laurence Wilson Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Reid, 25 Grier Street, landed with his comrades to assist in clearing the way for the great invasion of Normandy.

From that day, June 5, Private Wilson had not been heard from by his parents until yesterday, when his mother received a letter and a postcard from a German prison camp. It is not known when he was taken prisoner.

In his communications to his parents, Private Reid states he is "feeling fine. I am going to school here and studying geology."

VEHICLE CRASHES INTO ROYAL BANK

Attempting to negotiate a left-hand turn from Front Street into Campbell Street, on Wednesday afternoon proved rather costly for James H. Rowley of the R.A.F. stationed in Moncton, N.B. The motor car driven by Rowley is said by city police to have been travelling at an excessive rate of speed with the result, when the driver attempted the turn the car continued until it crashed into the south wall of the Royal Bank, that did little damage to the bank, but resulted in considerable damage to the motor car. Police say Rowley was driving a borrowed car and had no driver's licence. Naturally the impact didn't do the front of the automobile any good, on the contrary the fenders, headlight and bumper were all badly damaged.

Four Escapees Brought to City By Police Officers

Heavily shackled and handcuffed four escapees of the recent Hastings County jail-break, David Quigley, Bert Hawkins, Arnold Bell and Martin Green were brought back to this city from Toronto on Wednesday evening by Chief Walter Probert, Sergeant C. Arnott, Inspector Clair Hayes and Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn and lodged in the jail cells. Governor J. E. Samain, Turnkey Archie Winter and Assistant Turnkey Herbert Urch, two of whom were injured when the youths made their break, were on hand as a welcoming committee.

The prisoners were marched into the Governor's office and quickly "frisked" by the jail officials. The heavy shackles around their legs were removed but with handcuffs still on they were marched to separate corridors and placed in separate cells there to await trial. Much of the bravado which they exhibited when they made their escape on Monday evening was missing, when they arrived in the city. The boys looked very tired and as one remarked when he was placed in the cell, "It will be good to sleep because I have not slept since I left the jail Monday night." They were not questioned nor were they treated roughly by the prison officials.

Today Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., stated that charges had already been preferred against the quintet, although they had not been arraigned. It is believed the charges will be that of breaking prison by force and violence with intent of liberation. Subsequent charges are also being contemplated, officials intimated. In all probability the five recaptured prisoners will be arraigned on the proposed charges some time Friday at which time they will elect trial.

District Gasoline Retailers Sell Gas at Old Rate

Belleville district retailers of gasoline will continue to charge 36½ cents per gallon for first grade gasoline and two cents less for second grade fuel despite the fact that the price to the retailer was recently reduced one cent per gallon by gasoline wholesalers.

This was the decision arrived at Wednesday evening by members of the Hastings and Prince Edward branch of the Garage Operators when they met at their regular monthly meeting at the Y.M.C.A. All operators attending the meeting, with one exception, voted to continue present retail gasoline prices.

Reasons for retailers' decision to retain the extra cent per gallon on gasoline instead of passing the saving on to the consumer was given as the result of increased overhead caused as result of the inauguration of the 48-hour week for employees and because of reduced sales through tightened gasoline rationing. This combination of conditions meant that a higher margin was necessary if they were to stay in business, it was held.

One Giving Reduction.

Following reduction of gasoline prices to the retailer approximately one month ago, several Belleville service station operators had reduced their prices but with one exception had later gone back to the former price, it was brought out. One Belleville retailer still is passing the one cent per gallon saving on to the motorist.

Discussion of gasoline prices was the only matter of importance brought out at the meeting which was presided over by the president, Mr. Don Brown. As chairman of the program Mr. Harry Moorman introduced Mr. and Mrs. William Grant and Mr. Harold Barrett. Mr. Grant favored with several selections on the xylophone, while Mr. Barrett rendered two fine solos with Mrs. Grant acting as accompanist.

The Auto-Lite Company showed pictures on ignition and motor care as part of the evening's program. The door prize was won by Mr. Robt. Boyce.

Two Belleville Boys on Cruiser HMCS 'Uganda'

When Canada's new cruiser the H.M.C.S. "Uganda" slipped through the lines of her smaller sister craft of the Royal Canadian Navy to the accompaniment of shrilling whistles and flag-dipping salutes on her way to the open sea the other day, she carried on her crew two residents of this city.

They are Chief Petty Officer Leonard Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Hall, Charles Street, and Able Seaman George W. (Bill) Spring, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Spring, of Chatham Street.

Able Seaman Spring is a naval veteran of this war having been five years in the "Silent Service".

The Uganda was recently presented to the Royal Canadian Navy by the British Government. She is the largest warship in the Canadian Navy and has seen plenty of active service. She is manned by an all-Canadian crew.

Special Sales Booth Will Be Set Up on Front St.

In an effort to bolster last-minute sales of Victory Bonds and to contact those residents who may have been missed by the canvasser during his regular calls about the city, a special Victory Loan booth will be set up on Front Street on Saturday, it has been announced from the local loan headquarters.

Conveniently placed opposite the Campbell Street intersection, the booth will be manned by city bond salesmen from ten in the morning until six in the evening. They will explain the many ways in which a Victory Bond may be purchased and will also assist with applications.

Big Amount Needed Yet.

With the rural areas of the county responding to the Victory Loan in a manner which has not been noted in previous loans, county loan officials pointed out that a real effort is needed if the city of Belleville is to attain its objective by Saturday evening when the loan officially closes. Following tabulation of Wednesday's figures it was shown that 161,900 was needed if Belleville was to reach its objective, while in the county $401,650 must be subscribed if Hastings is to reach its general sales objective. This does not include the Armed Services or Special Names objectives.

County officials stressed that the support of every citizen in Belleville and in the rural districts would be needed if the county objective is to be reached.

If weather conditions will not permit the erection of the Victory Loan booth on Saturday, salesmen will be on duty at Victory Loan headquarters at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets.

POLICE COURT

Motorists, who entertain the urge to "step on the gas" find that practice comes rather costly, especially if apprehended by the Provincial Traffic Patrol. Today in the weekly traffic court, held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at the Court House, several such offenders had their names called before the court by Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson after they had entered pleas of guilty and paid fines prior to the court proceedings.

Pay Speeding Charges

James C. Card, Kingston, and Mike Yosepenko of Point Anne, paid $17.50, including costs, after admitting to speeding charges preferred under the War Measures Act. The same charge was read against Paul McNamara, Toronto, and when the accused failed to answer to his name, Traffic Officer Harry Caldwell requested a week's enlargement in order that personal service may be effected.

No Driver's Licence

Convicted of driving without a driver's licence cost Edwin Parker of Ottawa, $10 and costs, while Perry Bronson of Stirling, paid $17.50 after admitting to a careless driving count.

Illegal Fishing Charged

Charges of fishing with gill nets in prohibited waters were read against Pete and Larry Goyer, of Consecon, and Gordon and Donald Dempsey of Rednersville, by Game Warden Fred McDonald, who requested a two weeks' enlargement in all four cases. Harry Wagner, Thurlow, was convicted of failing to procure his 1944 Thurlow Township dog licence and enriched the court's coffers by $2 and costs. A domestic case heard in camera concluded the proceedings.

NON-ACTIVE ARMY UNDER 60,000 MR. KING DECLARES

Only About 8,000 of Home Defence Army Trained Sufficiently for Early Service

Ottawa, Nov. 9 — (CP) — There are only about 8,000 of the 60,000 home defence army "sufficiently trained so that they could be ready for combat at an early date," Prime Minister Mackenzie King said here last night in a radio address.

He asked the question that has been on many Canadian lips: How many additional men would be immediately available if compulsion were resorted to in order to send draftees overseas?"

His answer was:

"I have told you that the present effective total of draftees in the army is under 60,000. Of that number only about 42,000 are considered suitable material for infantry reinforcements. Some 16,000 of these men are trained as infantry. It is estimated that about 8,000 of them are sufficiently trained so that they could be ready for combat at an early date."

He did not elaborate on these figures.

He went into draftee recruiting, however, and said there was a widespread impression that perhaps 80,000 draftees have been "sitting around" in Canadian military camps since 1941 drawing good pay "and doing little or nothing to help win the war."

He said this picture was incorrect.

Many Unsuited For Military Duties

"In March, 1941 we began to call up men for compulsory service in Canada for the duration of the war" he said. "Up to Sept. 30, 1944, the army had accepted about 150,000 draftees. The present total number of men enrolled as draftees is about 68,000. Of these some 9,000 are on extended leave, on compassionate or other grounds. Many of them are unsuited for military duties. Of the so-called 'home defence' force the effective total strength, therefore is under 60,000."

He said he wanted to correct another "false impression."

Only 23,000 from Quebec

Of the 60,000 draftees in Canada "only 23,000 are from the province of Quebec and only 25,000 from all Canada are French speaking," he said.

He said another question asked was what had happened to the other 82,000 draftees accepted by the army since 1941.

"There has been a wastage of about 33,000 including men discharged for medical or other reasons which unfitted them to be soldiers," he continued. "About 6,000 draftees have enlisted as volunteers in the navy or the air force. The largest group — about 43,000 — have enlisted as volunteers for general service in the army . . . in the army overseas fighting today are many thousands of men who were once draftees."

More than 10,000 for General Service

He said the home defence army was not a static force.

"This year nearly 15,000 men have been called up and enrolled as draftees and more than 10,000 draftees have volunteered for general service."

British Only Mile From Strongpoint

By LYN HEINZERLING
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, Nov. 9 (AP)—British troops of the 8th Army have advanced to within 500 yards of Bussecchio, about one mile from the bitterly-contested Po valley communications centre of Forli, Allied headquarters announced today.

The British forces crossed the "King of Ditches" canal forming the eastern boundary of the Forli airfield and captured the shattered buildings on the north side of the field. Eighty prisoners were taken.

To the west, Polish troops attacking on a three-mile front southwest of Forli captured Dovadola in their advance along the Florence-Forli road and were engaged in heavy fighting in the hills to the northwest of Dovadola.

The Germans fought tenaciously for the Forli airfield, using Tiger tanks to support their infantry which still held the northern tip. The landing strips command the approaches to Forli from the southeast, a short distance from the Rimini-Bologna highway.

Other Allied troops advanced on a secondary road leading into Forli, a city of 66,000, from the south along the Rabbi river.

Japan 'Surprised And Offended' Domei Declares

San Francisco, Nov. 9 —(AP)— Premier Marshal Stalin's speech this week in which he branded Japan an "aggressor nation," surprised and offended the Japanese people, Domei, Japanese news agency, reported today in a radio broadcast.

The broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said the Russian Premier's address has become the "central topic of discussion of all Japan . . . but government circles are refraining from making any comments."

Japanese propagandists reiterated their theme that Japan was fighting the war to "free the peoples of Greater East Asia from the imperialism of America and Britain" and added that the Japanese people were surprised by Stalin's statement since "liberation and aggression are two opposite things and one cannot confuse the two kinds of philosophies."

The Domei broadcast added: "It is naturally expected that the foreign policy of Russia will change as new situations demand. Consequently, it is the firm belief of the Japanese general public that Japan must also adopt a realistic policy which will conform with any new situation created by the Russians . . . Premier Stalin in his speech did not allude to the Chungking regime. This fact is noteworthy."

Mr. Stalin's reference was to "aggressive nations" but the Domei broadcast said, "Premier Stalin branded Japan as an 'aggressor nation.'"

Canada Must Become World-Trading Nation After War to Provide Employment Bankers' Assoc. Told

Toronto, Nov. 9—Canada must return to the role of a great world-trading nation after the war, in the interest of jobs for Canadians, S. M. Wedd, president of The Canadian Bankers' Association, told the Association's annual meeting here today.

Mr. Wedd mentioned the Dumbarton Oaks Conference and the Bretton Woods proposals as "phases of an evident and continuous striving for postwar progress, stability and security." He noted that in Canada a Dominion-Provincial conference is mooted, as the end of the war approaches and the tasks of repatriation, demobilization and rehabilitation come to the front, and expressed the hope it would meet with full success.

"I am confident," he said, "that jurisdictional difficulties will not loom too large for I believe that all Canadians will realize, when the period of demobilization arrives, that to the men from overseas jobs will be much more immediately important than jurisdictions."

Great Increase in Debt

The war has made profound changes in the Canadian economy, one manifestation being an increase in the national income from $4.862 millions in 1939 to more than $9,000 millions in 1944 and "our productive capacity, pastoral and industrial, now operates in larger magniture.

"In the transition from war to peace and afterwards," Mr. Wedd continued, "all of us will have to think and plan and operate to a large extent in terms of this new magnitude. We must go forward in the new dimension if the opportunity for remunerative toil is to be provided for all those who are willing to work. It is obvious that for this nation to contemplate returning to the dimension of 1939 is unthinkable."

The Association president warned against the acceptance of "some experimental ideology which would sweep away all of the things which are inherently sound." He said "The democratic world cannot suddenly scrap the system of free initiative and look to a Utopia brought about over night." He also cautioned that "dollars still must have buying power when they go into and come out of pay envelopes, the savings accounts and the Victory Bonds."

Will Need Tax Reduction.

A great stimulus could be given to the postwar development of trade and employment if business and industry were made reasonably sure of profits "not unfairly depleted by undue taxation", Mr. Wedd declared. A scaling down of taxes from the heights of wartime necessity would be to the advantage of all because it would release accumulated savings for development of enterprise and industry and the creation of jobs. Profits he defined as "the wages of savings".

Referring to the decennial revision of The Bank Act this year by Parliament, Mr. Wedd said it provided the chartered banks of Canada with "renewed opportunity to serve the Canadian public. I am sure that we all regard it in the light of a responsibility which we shall do our best to discharge for the good of the nation". He pledged the co-operation of the banks in carrying out the provisions and intentions of the new Bank Act and the terms of ancillary legislation passed by Parliament, particularly in the field of small personal loans and intermediate credit to farmers. He also mentioned the Export Credits Insurance Act, designed to facilitate world trade and the newly established Industrial Development Bank, each designed to play its part in "an enlarged, integrated financial system and aims at ensuring that no sound credit need is left unserved".

Can Meet Post War Needs.

The banks have shown themselves alert and resilient, Mr. Wedd declared. It would appeal to the commonsense of all Canadians "that a system which is so comprehensive and efficient and which has met the needs of an ever-expanding war economy, can just as readily meet the requirements arising from demobilization, repatriation, peace and reconversion".

Stressing the necessity of developing Canada's world trade after the war Mr. Wedd said no other nation derived such a high percentage of its national income from exports.

"Export trade," he said, "is the most vital factor bearing upon the problem of postwar prosperity and postwar jobs for Canadians. War has developed in Canada an industrial equipment far beyond anything we had before the war. Markets must be found so that Canada can turn this equipment to world account.

Our export trade is mostly in war goods. All other export trade has sharply diminished. Peacetime export markets for primary products have largely disappeared.

"Export markets, even greater than before the war, will be required if our agriculture, mining, fishing, forest industries, manufacturing and our national well-being are to prosper in the new dimension. Export trade has been sharply curtailed, in some cases almost paralyzed except for war goods, by uncertain foreign currencies, shipping difficulties, priorities and allocations of essential supplies by wartime international directive bodies.

"Thus it is that while Canada's trade, her national expenditure, the people's deposits and banking assets have so greatly expanded, our ordinary lending facilities have been called so little in demand that the greater part of the expansion in bank assets is represented in our investment portfolio.

"It is self-evident that the anomalies to which I refer arise from causes which must be reversed if Canadians are to prosper in the postwar world. We must assume and expect that, as rapidly as possible, restrictive policies will be relaxed; that regimentations will be withdrawn as quickly as postwar circumstances allow; and that export trade on a world basis will be freed progressively from quotas, priorities and encumbering regimentations. We must assume that Canada will play its part in an international freeing of individual initiative and enterprise from the fetters clamped upon it by the imperative and arbitrary demands of war."

Say Iranian Militia And Police Broke Up Planned Celebration

Moscow, Nov. 9 (AP)—Iranian militia and police were reported today by the Tass News Agency to have broken up a planned celebration at Tehran by the Labor Union council and other organizations Tuesday on the 27th anniversary of the Soviet Union.

The Tass dispatch from Tehran said Labor Union officials had been arrested.

Nov. 7 is Russia's biggest and most solemn holiday. The reports of the discord put an even greater strain on relations between Russia and Iran, already strained over the question of oil concession.

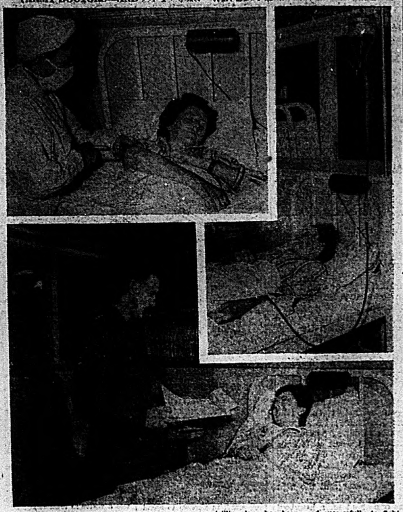
ARMY DOCTORS—AND PENICILLIN—WIN DRAMATIC FIGHT FOR LIFE



Rushed to Rideau Military Hospital in Ottawa dangerously ill with spinal meningitis, Pte. Betty Grace Wood of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, was saved when army doctors made a quick diagnosis of her illness and pitted the wonder drug—penicillin—against the malady that at one time had a sixty per cent death rate.

The pretty Helena Lake, Sask., girl will soon be back at her army draughting job, none the worse for her dramatic week-long battle against death though this is one of the first cases in Canada where penicillin alone has been used successfully to fight spinal meningitis. At top left Betty is pictured receiving an injection of penicillin via the arm muscle, with Army Nursing Sister Bessie C. Douglas administering the drug. At right the penicillin is being given by the intravenous injection method in a mixture of penicillin, glucose and water, which saved puncturing the sick girl's body with more needles than were absolutely necessary. Below the patient, well on the way to recovery, is congratulated by Capt. L. N. Stewart, radiologist on the Rideau Military Hospital staff.—(Canadian Army Photos.)

Ottawa, Nov. 9 (CP) — Personnel of the three armed forces in Canada will get five days leave either at Christmas or New Year's, it was announced here today.

The leave will be staggered so as to ease the strain on transportation facilities and the proportion who may be away from stations at any one time is not to exceed 50 per cent.

The plan is similar to one which operated last year.

Disagreement On Authority at Air Conference Seen

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Chicago, Nov. 9 — (CP) — Line of disagreement on the degree of control to be applied to international civil aviation stood out sharply at the International Civil Aviation Conference today.

Developments which followed the United States election which established an assured continuity of personnel and policy at Washington were:

An indication that the United States is opposed to giving an international authority power to allocate routes and frequencies on international commercial services; evidence that the Australia-New Zealand proposal for international ownership and operation of trunk services has wider support than was anticipated.

The United States' position as it was stated yesterday might, if followed up, mean a deadlock in the conference since Canada and the United Kingdom, which favor an international authority with power over routes, may regard any lesser agreement as not worth while.

The conference took its first major decision yesterday when after a brief formal debate, it declared there was not the "necessary unanimity" for the organization, at the present time, of an all-embracing international company.

It thus rejected the first move sponsored by the only two labor governments represented at the meeting and which is in accord with a policy endorsed by the British Labor Party and other Leftist movements in different parts of the world.

The proposal is not dead yet, however, since the French delegate, Max Hymans, who along with the spokesman of Afghanistan, supported it, served notice that he would bring it up again in a different form. He intends to propose that, in order to see what can be done through international co-operation, one international service be set up on some designated route.

There was no recorded vote on the rejection of the Australia-New Zealand scheme.

HUNTERS MISSING

Windsor, Nov. 9 (CP)—Provincial police today were continuing their search for two Mount Clemens, Mich., men who went hunting on Lake St. Clair Saturday and were reported missing yesterday. It was thought they had lost their lives near the Canadian side of the lake.

The missing are Delos Britton McCormick, 33, and Ernest Horvath, 28.

Their motor boat was found overturned yesterday in Canadian waters between Belle River and Stoney Point in the middle of the lake. Its anchor was dragging.

Nudism Practice Is Renounced By Sect Leaders

Crestova, B.C., Nov. 9 (CP) — Practice of nudism among the Sons of Freedom, radical Doukhobors sect was renounced by elders of the sect yesterday.

"We announced unto the world that the weapon of nudism was effective in us only up to the year 1944," the Doukhobors said in the document which was signed "Elders of the Spiritual Community of Christ, Crestova, B.C."

Decision that nudism had failed as a means of protest against authorities was reached by the 24 elders only—after grave conflict and struggle," the declaration continued.

"It has been unanimously resolved that nudism among us.... shall not be further effected toward the outward world, but only as a method of revivification of the free spirit of Christ within ourselves—as a means for the conquest of the spirit over flesh and the extirpation of the principle of private ownership."

Five Killed By Robot Bombs

London, Nov. 9 (CP) — At least five persons were killed and scores injured during the night when flying bombs crashed in residential areas in Southern England.

London was alerted for the first time in three days.

A number of the missiles were shot down over the east coast in a fierce sky display.

Three out of nine injured persons uncovered by rescue squads working all night died en route to hospitals.

The German radio—which yesterday proclaimed that the Nazis' new "V-2" rocket projectile already has been launched against London—declared today that attacks with this weapon will be stepped up. Other secret weapons of great explosive power also will be unleashed, a Berlin broadcast declared.

GERMAN AIR ACE KILLED

London, Nov. 9 —(CP)— The German communique said today Maj. Walther Novotny, air group commander credited with bringing down 258 planes, had been killed in aerial combat. He last was reported in action on the Eastern Front.

SHEEP FLOCKS SUFFER DEPREDATIONS

Meaford, Nov. 9 —(CP)— St. Vincent township has paid claims of $145 in the last two months because of the depredations of killer dogs. Clerk W. H. Chapple said the township paid owners of sheep flocks nearly $900 for their losses last year. So far this year it has paid $350.

Man Who Captured 160 Huns Himself Dies Rescuing Comrade

Hamilton, Nov. 9 —(CP)— The story of the death of Lance-Sgt. Earl McAllister, the Hamilton "one-man army" who captured 160 Germans single-handed, was revealed today in paragraphs appended by a comrade to one of his unfinished letters.

The addenda made to McAllister's last letter by Pte. Wilfred Day, also of Hamilton, told how McAllister had gone out of his own lines to bring in a wounded comrade. Despite heavy odds, McAllister made the attempted rescue and was shot by a sniper.

Pte. Day went out to rescue the Sergeant, but could not save him.

Investing in Peace and Security

The Second World War is moving on to its close and the fighting against the Reich itself has begun in deadly earnest. The world of democracy has been saved from tyranny and aggression by the sacrifice of the lives of heroic men in the air, on the sea and on the land and the outpouring of treasure in wealth and natural resources of the rich lands of all the United Nations. Such sacrifice is still required to bring in the victory and through it the reign of peace that the Allied peoples are determined to make endure.

Outlay of money and natural wealth is required more now than ever because to the costs of war there must be added the costs of the beginning of the program of rehabilitation and the solution of the problems that will have to be solved. The nation has to look to the care of those dependants who have been bereaved of the mainstay of their families, to look after the care of the wounded and those who are disabled and to place before the men who are to come back the assurance of work and industry in which they will enjoy with others the fruits of the sacrifices which the war has entailed.

In these last days of the third week of the Victory Loan drive Canadians at home have the opportunity of bearing their share not in giving, as the men of the services have given, the treasure of their health and lives, but lending their wealth to the nation at a good rate of interest so that the war may be speedily carried to its conclusion with the fullest support of this Dominion, and that peace may be brought so much nearer. To lend money is not so difficult a task. It is a mark of patriotism and loyalty. It is a matter of wisdom to buy Seventh Victory Loan bonds and it is to be hoped that more and more individual Canadians even after the war will protect themselves with government securities, the best that can be purchased. Just now the opportunity awaits everyone to buy or buy more if he or she has already bought.

Countries are being liberated in Europe and people are returning to homes they have had to leave before the Hun approach in the early days of the war. These people are full of gratitude for what has been done for them by their own people (many of whom have been swept away in the Hitlerite avalanche of terror) and by the people of all the United Nations including Canada. Canadians however have not been forced to flee their homes, they have been guarded by geographical location, by the courageous resolution of the peoples of all the United Nations and by the men of the forces of all these peace-loving Powers. Canadians are grateful for such sacrifices which have been such a protection and guard to the Dominion and they will show it in their magnificent total response to the Seventh Victory Loan.

Rumor Over Hitler

Rumor has it that a brain-specialist is peering into the inner recesses of the head of one Adolf Hitler, who is in his lair away from a world of war but not free from worry and anxiety. The story goes that Adolf is living at a castle seven miles away from the new fortifications which are being erected in the Salzburg-Berchtesgaden region. Hitler is said to be in seclusion in a huge mountain retreat. The rumor added that the fortifications are part of a large scheme to take in Alpine Germany from the Swiss border almost to Vienna and enclosing Berchtesgaden.

Europe's would-be conqueror has dismally failed, his conquests running through his fingers like sand before the invasions from east and west and the blows from Italy until now part of Germany is under Allied occupation and signs are not lacking that very soon the last of the overrun lands will be torn loose from German grasp and freed, while Germany herself is made to undergo occupation. He will find that fortifications will not prevent this end of the brutal German attempt to destroy freedom.

Sizes Up Japan

Japan must have felt more than a tremor when Russian Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin called the action of Japan at Pearl Harbor a typical aggression like that of Germany. It was his first reference to Japan in his public addresses and is looked upon as very significant. The Japanese were told by him just what they were and his words were spoken at an opportune time. The Japanese don't need to do much thinking to realize what the Russian leader meant by his reference to Japan's baseness. The Japanese can understand by now that Mr. Stalin has long since sized them up.

Werewolves

(Manchester Guardian)

It was not, perhaps the happiest of inspirations which led Himmler, himself an admitted monument of human savagery, to liken his new Volksturm to werewolves. It is neither an amiable nor an honorific tradition. As with so many other things the Greeks had a word for it, and lycanthropy, or the magic transformation of men into beasts, goes far back into history and spreads widely over Europe, Africa, and Asia.

In Europe the wolf has been the most usual transformation. Sometimes the change is unintended; it comes suddenly on the victim as the result of heinous crimes, and for seven years he must expiate his sin in the shape of a wolf. It is more than seven years since Himmler and his Gestapo took to their own form of lycanthropy and there is still no sign of a return to humanity. More often the wolf shape is adopted or discarded at will, which sounds a good deal more like the Nazis, who are one minute ravening authors of destruction and the next the enspired and appointed custodians of European liberty.

Sometimes the sorcerer achieved the change by applying a magic salve (the doctrine of Blood and Race?) to his forehead; sometimes it was done by assuming a special belt of unholy power (the Nazi armlet of the Crooked Cross?) Our simple forefathers had various methods of dealing with the disorder; blood-letting, prolonged penance; holy water and the sign of the Cross were all recommended.

"To kneel on one spot for a hundred years" was another way to check any tendency towards these detested transformations. It was rash of Himmler to have reminded us of that remedy.

Praise for Canadians

(Boston Post)

It has fallen to the lot of the soldiers of Canada to fight some of the most savage battles of all the war. The action at Dieppe will live in history as a Canadian epic. The struggle for Caen ended in a great victory in which Canadian courage was a decisive factor. Now for many days the Canadians have been locked in deadly combat with the Nazis above Antwerp in an effort to free that port for Allied use, and probably shorten the war in Europe by many weeks. Again the battle is a fearful one and again the Canadians are fighting with supreme heroism.

The German troops who have been vanquished by the valiant men of Canada on the field of battle have, like in the last war, found them deadly foemen. The people of New England have a particularly deep feeling for the Canadian army since our borders actually touch, and because many of our finest citizens are of Canadian origin.

Late Dances

Another step toward a brighter wartime Britain is promised this winter. Dances, which for the past five years have had to end before midnight, will probably continue into the early hours—with the approval of the majority of the police chiefs and licencing magistrates, says The London Daily Mail. Police chiefs welcome the opportunity of allowing a little more gaiety to come back into the lives of millions of people for whom dancing was the principal peacetime pleasure. The first move was made by Darwin (Lancashire) magistrates, who granted an extension for a works dance until 2 a.m. This is the first time in the war that the young people of this cotton town, with a population of 37,000, have been able to go on dancing after midnight.

SOLDIER THOUGHT

They try their best to have us hate
The ones they bid us kill,
But, let us get the matter straight,
'Tis hard to teach ill-will,
And live or die—that's soldier fate—
To live takes shooting skill.

The vicious deeds war makes us do
Are what we hate and scorn:
The cannon fire, the tangled wire,
The flesh that's maimed and torn;
The thinking then, that surely men
For better things are born.

Well, peace will come some future day
When victory we earn;
Then soldiers may put guns away
And from our hatreds turn,
And, who shall say, perhaps we may
A cleaner method learn.

BRIDE OF THE SEA

Venice, Italy, is sometimes called the "Bride of the Sea" from the medieval ceremony known as the "marriage of the Adriatic."

In this ceremony the Doge of Venice threw a ring into the sea, saying, "We wed thee with this ring, O sea, in token of our true and perpetual sovereignty."

The ceremony symbolized the fact that the sea was subject to the republic of Venice as a wife is subject to her husband.

A procession of gondolas, led by the Doge and his grandees in an elaborate galley used only on such occasions, was the chief feature in the ceremony, which was held on Ascension Day each year.

The vessel in which the Doge rode was known as the Bucentaur. It was a magnificent galley about 100 feet long and 21 feet wide. The vessel was propelled by 168 rowers. The Doge and his distinguished guests sat on the upper deck.

In those days Venice was mistress of the Adriatic and her ships visited nearly every important port in the civilized world.

The ceremony, it is supposed, was at first only supplicatory in character and originated during the dogeship of Pietro Orseolo I about the year 1,000 A.D. Under this Doge the prestige of the republic was revived after a lapse.

In 1177, when the peace between Pope Alexander III and Emperor Frederick Barbarossa was solemnized at Venice, the Pope gave the ceremony a "nuptial" character by bidding the Doge cast a ring into the sea each year in commemoration of the victory of the Venetian fleet at Istria over the Holy Roman Emperor's anti-papal forces. The first gold ring, according to tradition, was from the Pope's own finger.

Some semblance of this ancient ceremony was kept up each year on Ascension Day until the fall of the Venetian republic in 1797 in the time of Napoleon Bonaparte. At that time the dogeship itself was abolished.

"Doge" was derived from Latin "dux," "leader" or "duke." "Duce," the title of the Italian dictator, came from the same source.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Plea for Generous Donations to Poppy Fund

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

This year, as in other years, the Canadian Legion, through its 1760 branches and auxiliaries in Canada, is calling to the people of the Dominion that they should observe more than ever in solemn remembrance the symbolism which has become an integral part of Remembrance Day observances, and asks that every man, woman and child wear a Poppy on Saturday, November 11th, in memory of those who laid down their lives in the Great War and of those men and women who have made the supreme sacrifice in the present conflict.

This appeal is not made on behalf of the Legion or of its members, but on behalf of all ex-service men who are in need. The collection and administration of the Poppy Fund has been entrusted to the Canadian Legion. This, however, does not mean that the Poppy Fund is part of the funds of the Legion. It is kept entirely separate and is not even treated as a part of the relief fund. It is rather considered as a trust fund, which the Legion administers for the benefit of all ex-service men. In granting relief, members of the Legion receive no special preference but all ex-service men stand on an equal footing. Any man who has served and who is in need, has a claim on this fund. The Poppies and Wreaths which you will be asked to buy are made by an organization of disabled ex-service men. These men are absolutely incapable of earning a living in any other way, and but for this industry, would be a charge on the public funds. If Poppy Day did nothing but keep these men self-supporting and self-respecting citizens, it would still be worthwhile.

The organization of Poppy Day, the sales of wreaths and poppies, the handling of monies collected, the investigation and relief of all applicants, are done by voluntary workers. No man or woman connected in any way with this receives one cent as wages, salary, bonus, commission or allowance for expenses. All monies collected are placed in a special account which is controlled by a Board of Trustees of this Branch. Every expenditure made is approved and every account checked by the Board. Every applicant for relief is investigated carefully but sympathetically. Relief may take the form of food, clothing, fuel, rent or medical assistance. It is practically never issued in cash.

Over a million citizens of Ontario wore a Poppy in remembrance last November. 5,000 Wreaths were placed in churches and at memorials, in honor of the dead.

Should any of our friends desire further information on any point in connection with Poppy Fund activities, our branch secretary will be glad to supply it. The Canadian Legion is grateful for the hearty support they have always received from the general public to make the lot of the distressed ex-service men easier, and it is our hope that there will be no partial or permanent black-out for them. GIVE AND GIVE FREELY!

Col. H. E. Smith,
President, Belleville

Battle for Road To Ormoc Seethes Thru Fourth Day

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 9 — (AP) — The battle for the road to Ormoc seethed through its fourth day today, with American and Japanese divisions punching at each other from muddy mountain footholds and through blinding downpours.

Still indecisive, the battle centred in ridges abutting a horseshoe bend, with the tiny village of Limon as its focal point. Neither side claimed victory.

The storm was the most important factor on the fourth day of the Ormoc road battle. Already facing terrain difficulties — the necessity of fighting their way uphill, the difficulty of using artillery from low firing positions against the hilltops — the Americans were further hampered by the arrival of a tropical hurricane which made muddy bathtubs of fox holes and made the fighting itself a groping affair in which neither side could see the enemy soldiers they were battling almost hand to hand.

Front line dispatches mentioned the use of Japanese heavy artillery for the first time in several days.

HARDENED WAX IN EARS

Medical colleague told here recently about the common occurrence of ear trouble—such as deafness, rumbling or other unpleasant noises in the ears, dizziness, sometimes harsh, obstinate cough, from accumulation of hardened or dried cerumen or ear wax. The specialist said some of his patients had even resigned themselves to deafness to the extent of wearing hearing aids—which they discarded after the doctor removed the plug of inspissated cerumen.

One of the first private patients who took a chance with me in Penn Yan—was a hustling young grocery clerk with an honest, uncomplicated complaint — an elephant cough. Well, sir, that boy gave me an uncomfortable two or three weeks. I went over him again and again, and nary a thing could I find to account for his frightful cough. He was wholly co-operative and staid with me while I floundered around in baffled ——— until one Monday morning the boy came in with a new complaint—since his Saturday night bath there had been a great rumbling in his ear. Thereupon with head-mirror and speculum I examined his ear, found a plug of wax, syringed it away, and that was the end of the head noise and the cough.

Since my colleague told us here of the remarkable number of patients who come to him at regular intervals to have their ears so freed from hardened plugs of ear wax, many readers have asked me to give them the name and address of the ear specialist.

Nonsense. Any doctor can take care of such trouble as well as the fanciest or highest-priced specialist can.

For that matter any intelligent member of the family can syringe the ear, whether to remove hardened ear wax, a foreign body or perhaps a live insect that has entered the ear canal.

Here is how. Use a fountain syringe or reservoir which hangs not more than a foot above level of ear. Use only boiled water that is comfortably warm (never too hot or too cold). Dissolve a heaping teaspoonful of salteratus (baking soda, bicarbonate of soda) in a quart of water. Let patient sit or lie with a basin against neck under ear, to catch the outflow. Use only a straight nozzle, and hold nozzle close to, but not touching the outer opening of ear canal. Hold ear backward and upward with your left hand while you direct the stream straight into the ear canal. Let the entire quart of water thus flow into ear canal and out into the basin.

Usually the hardened plug of ear wax comes away in small pieces. Sometimes it is necessary to repeat the syringing daily for several times. One good rule to remember: Never in any circumstance insert anything smaller than your elbow in your ear. If syringing in this way is insufficient, then the next step is treatment for the doctor to determine.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

The Squedunk Clinic

Correspondents sometimes ask whether I recommend the Squedunk Clinic, let us say, or the Faraway Hospital or the Ketchum Diagnostic Laboratories, or the Hearth and Home Institute.

Answer—What for? They may serve good pie there, or have some pretty girls dressed up like nurses. If you seek medical service I advise you to consult a physician, not an institution.

Shampoo

Due to an injury after I had a permanent wave I was unable to have a shampoo for about six weeks, by then I had a lot of dandruff. As I never had much dandruff before I wonder if it was because I waited so long for a shampoo? (Mrs. R. F.)

Answer—Perhaps. Send stamped envelope bearing your address, for pamphlet "Care of the Hair and Scalp." Dandruff can be kept under control if you apply the simple pomade regularly as instructed in the pamphlet.

Spinal Curvature

Daughter has rotary curvature of the spine. She is 12 years old, swims, dives etc., but has had no physical education at school. From your column I believe the booklet "V-I-T-E Spells Youth" might be of help. (J.E.)

Answer—Shame on the school, or should I say the parents, for such neglect of the child's education. What a backward community yours must be. For the booklet "V-I-T-E Spells Youth" send ten cents and stamped envelope bearing your address.

The War Today—
Simultaneous Blows Seen Possible For Quick Kill of Germany

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The way military operations are developing in Europe it looks as though the Allies are getting set for simultaneous offensives in both west and east — a squeeze attack calculated to achieve a quick kill through terrific pressure.

Along with the evidences of General Eisenhower's preparations for a big drive, it's reported now that the Red Armies are massing in strategic sections of their long front. Marshal Stalin meant business when he said last Monday that the Allies had assumed starting positions for an offensive against the cities of Germany, and that country is "on the verge of inevitable catastrophe."

Russian Situation

The Soviet armies may strike at several places. A highly important prospect is held out in the Berlin assertion that the Russians are preparing to hurl an attack from their bridgehead on the west bank of the Vistula in southwest Poland, in the sector of the railway cities of Krakow and Tarnow. Here the Red armies are standing only about 100 miles from the border of German Silesia, one of the natural routes into Germany.

Building for a big offensive often is comparatively slow and methodical. Gen. Eisenhower for days has been ironing out his front at lumpy spots in preparation for the onslaught. This has accounted for the violent fighting on the U. S. 1st Army front southeast of Aachen in the Huertgen Forest area.

Highway Communications

Highway communications run through there to the neighboring city of Duren and thence to the prized objective of Cologne on the Rhine.

Fitting into the broad picture is the attack of the U. S. 3rd Army on a wide front in the Metz sector.

H.M.C.S. "UGANDA" CANADA'S FIRST CRUISER

During a brief but impressive ceremony, held recently at an Eastern U. S. Navy Yard, the powerful 8,000-ton cruiser "Uganda" was officially transferred from the Royal Navy to the Royal Canadian Navy. The first of two cruisers for Canada's fast-growing navy, H.M.C.S. "Uganda," shown here, is 549 feet in length, mounts 9 six-inch guns, 6 twenty-one inch torpedo tubes and is equipped with the very latest anti-aircraft armament. "Uganda" has a speed of more than 30 knots, carries a complement of some 800 men, and is entirely Canadian manned. Completed and originally commissioned for the Royal Navy late in 1942, "Uganda" played an important role in the invasion of Sicily and Italy. Later she moved up the Italian coast in support of the landings at Salerno where she was damaged by enemy aircraft. She subsequently made her way to the United States for refit.—(R.C.N. Photo.)

Prairie Regiments Took Active Part In Schelde Battle

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the 1st Canadian Army in Holland, Nov. 9 —(CP Cable)—Two Prairie infantry battalions, the South Saskatchewan Regiment and the Regina Rifle Regiment, took part in the great battle of the Schelde estuary which led to the opening of Antwerp, it was permitted to disclose today.

The South Saskatchewans operated on South Beveland Island, on the north side of the estuary and before that in battles fought north of Antwerp to clear the causeway to Beveland and its approaches.

The Regina riflemen shared in the epic struggle on the Leopold canal and later took part in attacks from the Breskens area which drove the Germans westward through the Schelde pocket south of the estuary.

Made Difficult Assault

It was the Saskatchewans who made the difficult assault over the ship canal cutting across South Beveland Island in the drive for Walcheren, crossing the waterway at night in canvas and wood boats.

The Germans made several counter-attacks against the narrow bridgehead but the westerners repelled them and next day the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry passed through to continue the attack westward across the island.

While the South Saskatchewans held the bridgehead during the first critical night and day, Royal Canadian Engineers built a bridge over the canal, working under fire for 18 hours without a break.

The successful crossing of this canal was one of the most important jobs in the Beveland offensive. German resistance on the island rapidly disintegrated from then on. Canadians linked up with British forces who had landed on the southeast tip of Beveland and within a few days the island was entirely in our hands.

Editor-in-Chief Executed in France

Paris, Nov. 9 —(AP)— Georges Suarez, 48, editor-in-chief of the Daily newspaper Aujourd'hui during the Nazi occupation, was executed by a firing squad at the fort of Montrouge at dawn today as a collaborationist — the first to receive the death penalty.

Suarez was convicted two weeks ago by a four-man civil jury of collusion with the Germans in writing editorials advocating closer collaboration between France and Germany.

Three others of 16 men tried in Paris thus far have received death sentences.

He is in Prince Edward County hospital here and is progressing favorably. With his brothers, Cecil and Seburn Thompson, he was in the woods north of Tweed when a stray bullet struck him. His brothers placed him on their truck, on which they had arranged a bed, and after medical attention at Tweed village, brought him to Picton. The bullet also grazed his finger and passed through the groin.

UNRRA Relief For French Civilians Stalled

Paris, Nov. 9 (AP)—The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration's program for civilian war relief in France apparently has been stalled by political and military red tape and friction, although thousands of French people still lack shelter and clothing.

Sixteen uniformed U.N.R.R.A. representatives attached to Allied supreme headquarters are marking time in a more or less advisory capacity, gathering statistical data on the French situation. Two are working with the 6th, 12th and 21st army groups in the field to prepare for transfer of civilian relief from the army to the U.N.R.R.A. as planned.

But the extensive outlay of material and expert personnel which the U.N.R.R.A. has been organizing in England for months still is unrealized in France.

The immediate obstacle is the lack of formal authorization by both supreme headquarters and the French government—a situation which several Allied officers confirmed without explanation.

It appears, however, that the reasons for the delay are (1) a delicate relationship between the French government and Allied military officials, who already have surrendered their jurisdiction over half of France; (2) Friction between Americal civil and military authorities, and (3) Possible confusion attending many phases of the rapid development of the campaign in France.

WEDDINGS

BARBER—LEWIS

Bridge Street United Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon, November 8, at one o'clock, when the Rev. Dr. R. W. Stapleford, united in marriage Dora May Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Lewis, to Willett James Barber, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Barber of Mountain View. The ceremony was solemnized against an impressive floral background of chrysanthemums and ferns.

Mr. Alec Gordon presided at the console of the organ and played softly throughout the ceremony and at the signing of the register.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was exquisitely attired in her wedding gown of traditional white slipper satin, fashioned in long torso effect. It had a full sweeping skirt, long tight fitting sleeves ending in points over her wrists and sweetheart neckline. Her finger tip veil of tulle illusion was caught to her hair with a charming Dutch cap made from glamor cloth. She carried a bouquet of Better Time roses.

Mrs. P. Graham, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Don Doolittle, were the attendants. The former was wearing an attractive street length ensemble in violet shade, complemented with chartreuse accessories, while the latter wore a striking chartreuse afternoon dress and black accessories. Mrs. Graham carried Johanna Hill roses and Mrs. Doolittle, Talisman roses.

Mr. Douglas Black was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Percy Graham and Mr. C. Sprague.

A reception was held at the Hotel Quinte following the ceremony. The bride's mother chose a mulberry crepe gown, black accessories and corsage of Johanna Hill roses, and the groom's mother selected black crepe, accessories in similar hue and corsage of Briarcliff roses.

On the wedding trip to the United States, the bride donned for travelling a chartreuse dress accented with accessories in matching hue and brown Beaver coat.

Out-of-town guests were present from Mountain View, Napanee and Shannonville.

Mr. and Mrs. Barber will take up residence at Mountain View.

SHANNONVILLE

Young Married Couple Presented With Gift

Shannonville.—On Friday evening, November third, a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at Shannonville Hall to honor the recent bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Fox (nee Hazel Chapman).

The earlier part of the evening was spent in dancing and about midnight the gathering was called to order by Mr. Lorne Lazier and the young couple were presented with a breakfast suite, after which an address was read by Mr. Sherman Lazier. The address was signed on behalf of the community by Jack McFarlane, Sherman Lazier, Kenneth McMechan, Douglas Lazier, Thornton Portt and Orby Lazier.

The bride and groom very capably thanked their friends and neighbors and invited them to visit them in their home.

Refreshments were served and dancing was enjoyed until the wee small hours of the morning when friends and neighbors departed wishing the bride and groom every happiness.

Hazzards W.M.S. Celebrates 50th Anniversary

The Women's Missionary Society of Hazzard's United Church celebrated their fiftieth anniversary in the church on Friday afternoon, Nov. 3rd., with visitors present from Tweed, Madoc, Bethel, Norwood, Oshawa, Queensboro, Cooper, Eldorado, Harts and Belleville. Guests were welcomed at the door by Mrs. Wm. Blair who had charge of the register in which seventy-five names were recorded. Mrs. R. N. Broad and Mrs. John Keene received the guests and ushered them to their seats. Bouquets of various colored 'mums lent beauty and fragrance to the church.

Quiet music by the organist Miss Alma Keene was followed with a worship service led by the minister Rev. W. W. Patterson who also extended greetings on behalf of the church. The president, Mrs. M. Howard who presided welcomed the ladies on behalf of the society and stated when she said welcome that she meant every word spelled with a capital letter. She said that they were proud of their church, the oldest in the district it being nearly ninety years old. She hoped they would carry away with them some pleasant memories and impressions of Hazzard's and its people.

Letters of Greetings Read.

Greetings which had been sent to the society from the branch president, Mrs. Haggerty and Presbyterial President, Mrs. Spafford were read by Mrs. P. Gunsolus. She also read a letter from Mrs. John G. Blakely, a charter member of Chatham in which she recalled many memories of fifty years ago and enclosed a donation wishing to be again enrolled as a member as they launched forward in their second fifty-year period. Mrs. Blair read greetings from Mrs. John O'Rourke. These letters were deeply appreciated.

The president requested Mrs. Geo Harris, Miss Frances Keene and Mrs. Wm. Blair to come to the platform to receive corsages. Mrs. Max Burnside spoke in appreciation of Mrs. Harris' faithful attendance and of her loyalty to the society and Mrs. Broad spoke of Miss Keene's twenty years of leadership as president and Mrs. Blair's years of efficient service. In responding the ladies voiced their apreciation of the honor shown them.

Mrs. Geo. Harris, the only charter member present gave the "Story of the Years".

Organized in 1894.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Hazzard's Church was organized by Mrs. (Rev.) Wilson of Tweed (the first organizer of Madoc district) on Sunday evening November 3, 1894. The officers appointed were President, Mrs. Coleman Harris; Vice President, Mrs. David Farrell; Cor. Secretary, Mrs. T .E. Burnside; Rec. Secretary, Mrs. Geo. Harris; Treasurer, Miss Nettie Farrell. Harris, Mrs. Richard Farrell, Mrs. Tom Badgley, Miss Nettie Farrell, Mrs. R. Diamond. The presidents through the years were: Mrs. Coleman Harris, Mrs. David Farrell, Mrs. (Rev.) Thomas, Mrs. Richard Keene, Miss Frances Keene, Mrs. A. V. Tumelty, Mrs. Philo Harris, Mrs. Mark Howard.

Clothing Sent Yearly

Though many outstanding tasks have not been accomplished through all the years the society has had the faith and courage to carry on. It is required of a steward that he be found faithful not necessarily successful. The society has always reached its allocation and sent a bale of clothing each year and a special Christmas box to some outpost.

One year members were especially anxious lest their funds be low and Rev. H. B. Rowe and four men of the congregation joined as honorary members.

Special speakers the society had been privileged to have had Dr. and Mrs. MacKay who spent forty years in India. Miss Ida MacKenzie, W. M. S. Field Sec., Miss Rosamund Duff, W. C. T. U. Field Sec. Rev. J. M. Whyte and Rev. T. Wallace, neighbouring ministers. Mrs. (Rev.) E. Sexsmith who told of her work as a teacher among the Indians at Norway House. Dr. MacTavish who preached the society of age. A special Easter Sunday Thankoffering Service had been held each year.

Miss F. Keene read the names of the members "who have passed through the golden gates, whose keys the angels keep". Their spirit still lives.

Past Accomplishments Praised

Mrs. Albert Empey, sectional president brought greetings and spoke briefly on the theme "Go Forward". She praised the members for what had been accomplished in the last fifty years and urged especially the younger women to give first place of their time and talents to the W. M. S.

Mrs. F. J. Nickle, of Madoc, extended congratulations to the society and said it was her pleasant task to pay a tribute to the chartered members.

"To those who have carried on", she said "through most of two world wars, depressions, and countless other vicissitudes we feel that they have builded well. They throw the torch to us to make the hundredth birthday a jewel sparkling bright in Hazzard's history and we will be the ancestors, the humble folk who have struggled and achieved if we can crowd out the non essentials and live according to God's plan."

In concluding her message she presented a basket of chrysanthemums which had been previously placed on the altar given in memory of her mother and father, Mrs. and Mr. Thomas E. Burnside and in honor of her aunt, Mrs. G. Harris.

The offering was received by Mrs. Allan Ketcheson and Miss Alma Moorcroft. Mrs. W. Patterson pronounced the benediction.

Social Hour Enjoyed

A social hour was enjoyed. The tea table was attractively arranged with golden mums and tall tapers. At lunch time the three-storey birthday cake was placed on the table and was later cut by Mrs. G. Harris. Tea was poured by Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Philo Harris.

Mrs. Wilbur Gordon of Tweed spoke on behalf of the guests congratulating the society on their fifty years of achievement and thanking them for the opportunity of sharing their anniversary celebrations with them.

A FORMULA for fashion that is always good and exciting is to take very rich fabrics and handle them simply—as , for instance, a long-skirted, shirtwaist frock with high neck and long sleeves made of Indian gauze in red embroidered in gold thread, then in blue and purple sequins in a heavy all-over floral pattern.

Quintena Bazaar Is Delightful Autumn Event

A most delightfully arranged late autumn event took place in the Oddfellows' Temple on Wednesday afternoon from three to six o'clock when the Quintena Rebekah Lodge, No. 133, held its annual bazaar. UNEXPECTED touches of fur always add interest. Thus a slim, fitted coat of fine black woolen has a crescent-curved cape gathered about the shoulders. Cape is lined with American chinchilla. Yes, this fabulous fur of the Andes region is now bred in North America.

EASY-TO-WEAR clothes march out of the shops as soon as they are shown. Typical of a useful, easy suit is a town and country model of beige and brown tweed with breast pockets and cuffs of dark brown suede. Kick pleat skirt.

Women's Activities

W.M.S. OF THE WESLEYAN METHODIST CHURCH.

The members of the W.M.S. assembled on Tuesday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. J. Bell, 69 Everett Street, for their regular meeting, Mrs. J. S. A. Spearman, presiding.

The opening prayer, by the president, was followed by a short business period.

Mrs. Robt. Coles read a portion from "How I Know God Answers Prayer", by Goforth.

Clippings were received by Works Director, Mrs. Cyril Kent, for a Scrap Book, said book to be compiled in future meetings.

An interesting synopsis of two chapters of the Study Book "Miracles in Black" by "Wengatz" was given by the President.

A missionary quiz proved very instructive. The quiz is planned in conjunction with the "Wesleyan Missionary" publication and tends to acquaint the members with the missionaries and their various foreign fields of labor. Mrs. Robt. Coles answered most of the questions correctly.

The Society received an invitation to attend the "Inter Church Area Conference on World Missions" to be held on November 14 in Bridge Street United Church. The speaker to be Dr. John R. Mott. The offering was received by the Treasurer, Mrs. G. Denyes.

A SLOW STARTER, but coming up the home stretch in good style, is leopard. Much admired was a handsome three-quarter leopard coat cut on wraparound lines with coachman revers, cardigan neckline and cleverly pleated shoulders.

LOTS AND LOTS of evening jackets this year for those who want to turn a simple frock or skirt into evening elegance. We liked a brilliant turquoise velvet jacket, cut on fitted lines, and embroidered in deep coral and gold thread.

VENEREAL DISEASE is no longer a hush-hush topic. It is a subject that comes up wherever thinking women meet . . . social groups . . . welfare meetings . . . the luncheon table.

And it is not idle talk. Canadian women now realize that when VENEREAL DISEASE strikes, the home is usually caught in the merciless web.

The home . . . their domain.

They want to know what can be done about it. How they can help blot out this shadow on our land.

They are helping . . . even by just talking about it. The more intelligently we discuss the problem the more knowledge we will have, and the greater the community strength to solve it.

Do YOU want to know how YOU can help? It's quite simple.

First, learn the facts about syphilis and gonorrhoea . . . what they are . . . how these diseases affect one . . . how they can be prevented . . . cured. Then, see that that 'teen-aged boy or girl of yours knows the facts . . . the truth. That's your job.

Second, see that your club has a frank discussion about the problem. Call in your health officer, or someone else who really knows the problem . . . and the answers. Arrange to have a free screening of a modern film to give you a better understanding of what is being done, and what can be done.

Third, make sure the conditions in your community are the kind which will give your children . . . and your neighbour's . . . the best chances for health and happiness . . , NO houses of prostitution . . . and NO unsavory places in which healthy and diseased young people can meet easily.

As a homemaker you cannot be indifferent. Canadian home life is the root of our nation's life. It must be protected.

Included in a good attendance were three visitors. The meeting opened in the customary manner. Mrs. James Gordanier reported on the euchre and bingo held the previous week. A dance is to be held in the town hall in December and a lunch committee in that connection was appointed. Attention of the members was drawn to a health lecture to be given in Springbrook Orange Hall by Miss H. Gardner of the Department of Women's Institutes for Marmora, Springbrook, Rylestone and Wellman's branches. It was decided to apply for the annual legislative grant. Mrs. Percy Gordon gave the report of the Sick Committee instancing the sending out of sick cards and also the sending of a wreath in the bereavement of a member. An excellent paper on Home Economics was given by Mrs. Harold Naylor in which she drew attention to the value of nutritious food, the remaking of clothing, the redyeing of old material and other items which came under the heading of her subject. She also mentioned that the buying of Victory Bonds with the exercise of home economics aided the war effort. Her talk was followed by community singing with Mrs. L. R. Rundle accompanying. The president then announced that all sewing for the Salvation Army which was out should be brought in at the next meeting. She also gave a comprehensive report of the recent Area Convention held in Belleville. With the branch pianist, Mrs. E. Belanger, as accompanist, Mrs. L. R. Rundle delighted the gathering with two songs, "Say a Prayer for the Boys Over There," and "When the Lights Come On Again." A flower contest was put on by Mrs. Ethel Gray with honors going to Mesdames P. Gray and L. R. Rundle. The meeting closed with the National Anthem following the serving of lunch.

Whitehall Notebook

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 9 —(CP)— The new session of parliament, due to start soon, will be delayed this year until members clear up business still outstanding in the present session.

The Town and Country Planning Bill, one of the most factious pieces of legislation to come before the House this session, occupied considerably more time than was expected and was followed by demands for debates on the government's social security scheme and civil aviation.

Members of all parties would like a clean break between the two sessions in preference to a carry-over, for the next is expected to be the last before a general election.

Plans for that election, the first in 10 years, are still going forward although there have been no hints how soon voting may take place. The Liberal National Party appeared ready to throw in its lot with the Conservatives by joining with the Tories in nominating a prospective "National Government" candidate to oppose Labor's Herbert Morrison, home secretary and minister of home security, in Hackney. Their choice was Flt.-Lt. Stanley Price.

Reports that the Liberal Nationals, whose 26 members in the Commons include former War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha and former Health Minister Ernest Brown, were preparing to link up with the Conservatives "have been current for some time."

Labor Minister Ernest Bevin, whose political future has been under discussion, will be in the ring come voting day. "Mr. Bevin is sticking to Wandsworth and that is official," said a constituency Labor spokesman. The unofficial stories were (a) Bevin was tired and anxious to retire from politics, and (b) That he planned to publish a new National morning newspaper.

Willie Gallacher, Communist M.P., has lost his second of two adopted sons. A few weeks after Donald, the youngest, was killed in France, John, a flight lieutenant in the R.A.F., died of wounds in India. Donald was a lieutenant in the Royal Tank Regiment.

Point Traverse

Dredging Completed At Salmon Pt. Harbor

Point Traverse, Nov. 9 — The Point Traverse fishing fleet will be augmented by the addition of a new fishing craft, now nearing completion at Cherry Valley. The fine boat, owned by Stinson Hyatt, commercial fisherman, has an overall length of 36 feet, 10 inches and will be powered with a 86 h.p. Gray marine motor. The launching of the craft will take place in Picton harbor, from where it will go down the Bay of Quinte and across the lake to this fishing colony.

Dredging Completed.

Dredging operations at the Salmon Point harbor have been completed and equipment used in deepening the harbor and entrance has returned to Kingston. Deepening of the harbor will facilitate fishing craft to enter the piers. Fishermen report that the water level of the lake has receded considerably within the past few days.

"Lest We Forget."

Masters of all lake vessels are on the alert to prevent any marine disasters that might take place.

Fearing that a repetition might occur of the Great Lakes storm that 31 years ago on November 9th, 1913, claimed the lives of 300 persons and 32 vessels, all seamen are taking extra precautionary measures that such a catastrophe might never occur again.

RAWDON

Mount Pleasant United Church Marks Anniversary

Rawdon—Sunday morning marked another milestone for Mount Pleasant United Church. Crowds filled the edifice for the morning service when Rev. Gordon Maxwell, Campbellford, presented a stirring message "The Church of Tomorrow".

The choir of eighteen voices with Mrs. Kenneth Weaver as pianist rendered three anthems "I Was Glad" by Adam Giebel, "Hark, The Glad Creation" by J. Lincoln Hall and "King of Kings" by J. B. Hubert.

The opening hymn "Now Lift up Your Hearts, Your Voices Raise, Your Morning Tribute Bring" was a grand opening for this special service.

The church altar was adorned with mums, ivy, foliages and potted plants and two silver trophies won by the Y.P.U. in 1942 graced the piano. Many former worshippers as well as several relatives were in attendance with all nearby congregations represented.

In the evening Rev. David Gray, Stirling, brought an old fashioned gospel message. The choir rendered two anthems "Take Jesus with You" by Alfred Judson and "Be Still My Soul" by Hean Sibelius.

Throughout the anthems, various members of the choir sang special parts. A quartette "In The Silence" was contributed by Rev. and Mrs. T. F. Townsend, Mrs. Carleton Potts and Mr. Edgar Pyear of Carmel.

The closing hymn "Thy Kingdom Stands and Grows Forever" climaxed a very successful anniversary. Over $209. was placed on the plates.

Thomasburg — The November meeting of the Anglican Women's Auxiliary was held on Friday evening at the home of the president, Miss Emma Porter. The president was in the chair.

A letter was read from the Diocesan Dorcas Secretary asking the branch to do sewing on an outfit for a girl in Elkhorn residential school rather than contribute the usual $25 for the year 1945. This was discussed and it was decided to do the sewing, some of the members volunteering to make contributions.

It was decided to continue to send a gift subscription of the "Living Message" to a lonely lady in Western Canada.

A thankoffering in lieu of a bazaar or supper was also brought before the meeting.

London —(CP)— British shoe manufacturers are seriously considering manufacturing wedge shoes for men. After all, they say, it took men several centuries to become accustomed to trousers and they are willing to risk a long-term chance on a new type of footwear.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By The Canadian Press

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Nov. 9 —(CP)— Five Canadian Spitfire pilots from the wing commanded by Wing Cmdr. Dal Russel, D.S.O., D.F.C. and Bar of Westmount, Que., shared in the destruction of the first German ME 262 jet-propelled aircraft shot down by the R.C.A.F. or R.A.F.

The aircraft crashed in flames three miles southwest of Nijmegen, the divided spoil of Sqdn.-Ldr. Rod Smith, D.F.C., of Regina who was leading his squadron on a routine patrol, Flt.-Lieuts. H. J. Everard, D.F.C., of Timmins, Ont., Tex Davenport of Russelville, Ark., Lloyd Sinclair of Paris, Ont., and FO. J. MacKay of Cloverdale, B.C.

Smith, whose Spitfire the doomed German pilot tried to ram on his final, flaming dive to the ground, said he first sighted the jet-propelled machine at about 13,000 feet, flying head-on towards the squadron about five miles northeast of the Nijmegen bridge.

The Canadians got in two and three-second bursts from about 200 to 300 yards, starting fires which though it did not reduce the fast flying aircraft's speed, sent it into a dive which ended in a field.

PO. J. W. Schofield, Vancouver, a Wellington pilot, in Coastal Command, celebrated his promotion to the rank of of officer by leaving a German ship he attacked off the Dutch coast with a heavy pall of smoke covering its whole length.

"Happy Valley," the ironic name bomber crews have given the Ruhr, remains earth's closest approach to Inferno, according to R.C.A.F. Typhoon pilots, whose wide-spread operations now take them over this German arms centre.

"Jerry obviously stations his best flak people in the Ruhr," said FO. Harry Upham, Minneapolis, Minn., pilot who cut a railway line near Wesel during a sortie led by Flt.-Lt. Ross Reid of 106 Raglan Ave., Toronto. "I don't care to spend much of my time in that neighborhood. There were all kinds of smoke screens on the ground and we nearly ran into a balloon barrage. Looks to me like he means to hold onto that place."

Canadian ground crews are taking a bow for the fine job they did for the R.C.A.F. bomber group before the last five operations in September. During those operations more than 1,000 Canadian heavy bombers were detailed to attack enemy targets and although they frequently had to work on short notice, every bomber took off on time and there were no non-starters.

Said Air Commodore Johnny Fauquierr, D.S.O. and Bar, D.F.C., of Ottawa: "The lads in the ground crew who made this possible can't be given too much credit. They've been out there on dispersal slugging away at all hours of the day and night, in all kinds of weather, getting those aircraft ready to go. The part these fellows are playing in helping to smash the Nazis can't be overestimated."

Million-Dollar Wholesale Market For Fruits, Vegetables

Toronto, Nov. 9 — (CP) — Plans for a $1,000,000 regional or terminal wholesale market here for fruits and vegetables are nearing completion, it was learned Wednesday, with provision for city representation of a committee to choose a site.

The committee also will include representatives of the Federal and Provincial governments, the Canadian National Railways, the Canadian Pacific Railway, commissioned merchants and fruit and vegetable farmers.

The project, on which Major Fred J. Conboy has been working for a number of years, would be purely a business enterprise, owned by a taxable corporation representing interested parties. The mayor has said he hoped the Federal Government would share in expenses to the extent of $500,000.

Proponents of the plan say the new market would serve Ontario generally and provide complete marketing facilities for points within a radius of 100 miles of Toronto for the next 100 years.

BEGINNER'S LUCK

London —(CP)— Police Constable Charles Pearson, 49, "didn't know a carrot from a turnip" in 1939 but he's just won another big gardening prize. He decided to be a victory gardener and bought a sixpenny booklet on gardening. Since then he's won five major prizes.

NO ADDRESS FROM HITLER

London, Nov. 9 — (CP-Reuter)— For the first time since the war began Hitler did not deliver his traditional nation-wide broadcast on the anniversary of the abortive 1923 Nazi party Munich beer cellar putsch. The German transocean agency claimed the Fuehrer's silence was due to the "total mobilization" ban on celebrations.

COME TO THE VICTORY BOOTH AND INVEST IN VICTORY

We are in the last week of the biggest financial effort ever organized in Canada, and the citizens of the County of Hastings and the City of Belleville must do their share to help the Dominion of Canada go over the top.

Despite the best efforts of the Victory Loan Salesman, many people wait until the last few days, or the last day, to sign their application. To make it convenient for the last minute purchasers, a Victory Loan Booth will be set up on Front Street, opposite Campbell Street, on Saturday, November 11th., and the salesmen will be on duty in this booth from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and they will be pleased to explain to you the many ways in which you can buy a Victory Bond, and help you with your application.

Each salesman has had over five hundred calls to make. If for some reason you have been overlooked, please come to the Victory Booth and purchase your Victory Bond, or step in to your Bank and see your Manager, or his assistant, about that last minute Victory Bond.

The support of every citizen of Belleville and the County of Hastings is needed if the County objective is to be achieved. Each one of us should feel that he has equal responsibility with the Victory Loan Salesman to record his purchase of Victory Bonds before the Campaign closes.

Should weather conditions not permit the erection of this booth the salesmen will be on duty at the Victory Loan Headquarters, corner of Front and Bridge Streets. Telephone 2880.

TAKES CARE OF PENNIES TO BUY VICTORY BOND

Brantford, Nov. 9 (CP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Kelly of Brantford used three seven-quart baskets of pennies to purchase a $100 bond in Canada's Seventh Victory Loan. "Every penny that comes into my hands goes into a Victory Loan Savings chest and I've started all over again," she explained as she exchanged her pennies, neatly rolled in packages of 50, for the bond.

CABINET REJECTED

There was no over-all shortage of reinforcements, many thousands of men were in training and enlistments were continuing at an encouraging rate. But recent recruits and those who enlisted from now on would not be available until they were trained.

An Immediate Problem

Col. Ralston had said there was an immediate problem of finding the means of speeding up the flow of trained infantry reinforcements to meet a possible shortage in the next few months.

The sending overseas of some of the trained draftees would seem to many the easiest way of meeting the problem, but it was not in accord with the policy of keeping the overseas army on a voluntary basis if possible.

"We have always believed that Canada's forces, having begun as voluntary forces, would be more effective and that the country would be more united in their support, if we continued to rely upon the voluntary system for reinforcements as long as the voluntary system continued to be effective."

The acceptance of Col. Ralston's recommendation would "have required agreement by the government that no alternative existed to a resort to conscription for overseas service."

Mr. King went to Gen. McNaughton as "the builder and first commander of the Canadian Army" and "I knew there was no man who had the interests of the Army and the men overseas closer to his heart.

"Gen. McNaughton expressed the belief that the possibilities of securing the required reinforcements by voluntary means had not been exhausted."

The Prime Minister said he deeply regretted the difference which led to the resignation of Col. Ralston, who had given selfless and devoted service throughout the war.

Denies Statement.

The impression that draftees were "sitting around in military camps in Canada since 1941 or 1942 drawing good pay and doing little or nothing to help win the war" was almost totally incorrect. At present about 68,000 men were enrolled as draftees and some 9,000 were on extended leave and many of these were unsuited for military duties. The effective total strength was under 60,000 and of these only 23,000 were from the province of Quebec and only 25,000 from all Canada were French-speaking.

The home defence army composition was changing constantly and this year more than 15,000 had been called up and enrolled as draftees and more than 10,000 draftees had enrolled for general service.

Since the landing in France in June voluntary enlistments for overseas from the home defence army had been higher than the numbers called up and accepted as draftees.

Enlisting for overseas gave the draftees a new outlook, new self-respect and a determination which came from making a great decision. This was bound to make them better soldiers.

It had been said over and over again that conscripted men would be received without enthusiasm by the volunteers they joined overseas and their presence might be a cause of division in the fighting units. This, however, was a risk the government would have to take if it was necessary to enable Canada to bear her just share of the load in winning the war. But that situation had not arisen.

8,000 Sufficiently Trained

Of the 60,000 home defence army effectives, only about 42,000 were considered suitable material for infantry reinforcements and some 16,000 of these were trained as infantry. It was estimated about 8,000 were sufficiently trained to be ready for combat at an early date.

Without compulsion a considerable number of these draftees would volunteer and it was believed many more could be obtained by a special appeal.

There would be genuine and possibly "very grave" difficulties in conscripting men for overseas. Instead, redoubled efforts were being made to meet the situation by the voluntary method and the patriotic co-operation of all Canadians was sought.

The home defence army was not being disbanded because trained men volunteered from it. Another reason was that under the demobilization plans it was decided to follow the principle of those having the longest and hardest service being released first.

This meant a first preference in discharge and employment opportunities for those with overseas service.

Mr. King said the draftees would not be maintained in idleness. A considerable military establishment had to be maintained in Canada and garrisons in Newfoundland and on the coasts could not be abandoned. Some of these duties must continue to be done by draftees.

Never Regret Decision.

Compulsion where necessary would continue to be used to ensure that fit men of military age performed national service required by the war effort. Draftees employed in national service would remain in the army under discipline at army rates of pay.

Fit draftees would continue to be a potential reserve of reinforcements which might be used in any theatre in light of developing circumstances.

In encouraging enlistments the government would seek to have every draftee told of the need of his services and of the practical benefits to his own future of becoming a volunteer.

"To you, young men, who are serving in Canada's 'home defence' forces, I should like to make a special appeal," Mr. King continued.

"Because of the training you have already received you are in an exceptional position to give service which is particularly needed at this time.

"I have told you of the need. Let me emphasize the opportunity — the greatest you will ever have — to further serve your country and bring honor to yourselves and your families. You will never regret the decision to do all you possibly can to support Canada's fighting army."

Civilians See How Defences Protect Against Robombs

London, Nov. 9 —(CP)— For the first time since the buzz-bomb raids began Londoners have seen how the menace was countered through an exhibition at Piccadilly.

Though secret defence weapons, radio-location apparatus, rocket anti-aircraft guns and scale models of the latest jet-propelled fighters were removed by security officials a few hours before the exhibition opened, it still gave civilians a rough idea how the Royal Observer Corps, A. A. batteries and fighter and balloon commands protected them.

Some of the exhibits had been displayed before during war savings drives and wings for victory week but one new one was the "balloon parachute cable," used to cut the wings from flying bombs and controlled by W. A. A. F. girls on the ground.

The device comprises two parachutes attached to a moored balloon and connected by a steel cable. When a buzz-bomb nears the operating W. A. A. F. presses a button, releasing the parachutes so they drift down into the bomb's course.

Donnybrook at Termination Of Watson-Katan Main Bout Creates Real Interest for Fans

Sexton and Dunlop Storm Into Ring to Help Combatants but Watson Wins Duke

Insofar as the records are concerned "Whipper Billie" Watson is still secure with his British Empire heavyweight wrestling title belt still wound securely around his waist, but it wasn't before one of the wildest bouts ever seen in the Hume Arena.

True enough Watson is still the champ, but in the climax of his title bout with John Katan last night, principals in the preliminaries swarmed the ring to cause general melee, bedlam and near-riots before Referee Bert Maxwell climbed from somewhere beneath the confines of the ring skirt to raise Watson's hand in token of victory as Al Dunlop, Frank Sexton and the main bouters were in a general confusion in one of the wildest free-for-all outbreaks the Hume Arena fans have witnessed in these some months past.

After all it was advertised as a championship bout and "Fingers" Katan tried, for all intents and purposes to make it such by opening the affair as the villainous challenger. Actually Katan was doing a better-than-average job of trying to disect Watson from the outset. However, the pride of East York took dislike to Referee Maxwell's efforts of calling off hostilities when Watson attempted reprisals and that's when the patrons answered in firm verbal protests. Then came the fans' big moment — Watson gained his invincible "commando" hold and "Palermo John" cried quits, uncle and even looked as though he would have been much more satisfied at home beside the glowing coals of a fireside, that is if Katan has a fireside.

One down and in hopes of evening matters Katan proved to all and sundry his ability as a boxer by rapping Watson with hard kidney punches. After all "Fingers John" did attend the Castilloux-Peralto boxing bout in Toronto Monday night and being an observant sort of a person proceeded to demonstrate his fistic knowledge upon the body of Watson. Actually it was somewhat of a success as Watson ultimately became the victim of a reverse double step-over leglock that forced Watson to concede everything he held dear and that made matters even for the time being at least.

Came the crucial and final round and folks that's when things happened in the Hume Arena ring. Katan was well on the way to victory as he attempted to hurl Watson's noggin, but hard, against a ring post. The agile Watson evaded the purpose with the result Palermo John didn't do himself any good when he bashed his own mop of hair against the ring post. That was the signal for Watson, not only did he physically manhandle Katan, but for good measure pitched Referee Maxwell bodily from the ring much to the satisfaction of the patrons. With Maxwell hors de combat Al Dunlop and Frank Sexton moved into the picture as peacemakers, after a sterling semi-final bout. Sexton sided in with Watson while Dunlop went to Katan's rescue in as fine a brawl as ever seen in a bar room. While all of this was going on Referee Maxwell managed to climb back into the squared circle and raise Watson's hand high in token of victory. The fans were satisfied, so were Watson and Sexton, but Katan and Dunlop were still protesting alone in the ring as the last patron left the arena. After all Sexton never did like Katan after losing his only decision here some weeks ago. (O.K. Mr. Tunney, toss 'em in again).

When it came to the semi-final Frank Sexton, who you now know as a personal friend of Watson, had little trouble in disposing of Al Dunlop in the semi-final despite the fact the bout went some 21 minutes. Sexton used his entire repertoire of ring tricks to convince the fans he was about the best in the business and prove that scientific wrestling can triumph over brute strength. The best fun of the night came in this bout when Sexton gave the fans a laugh by tying Dunlop's shoe laces together and leaving 'The Bunny' well trussed up.

With much comedy concerned Joe Maich and "Irish Tom" Collins finished the preliminary opener all even at the end of 30 minutes. And next week there should be more surprises after the climax of last night.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, Nov. 9 (AP)—Between now and New Year's Day a lot of folks who are promoting football games to sell bonds and for other worthy causes are bound to be disappointed....The biggest attraction, of course, would be to shift the Army-Navy game to a big city but that won't happen.

Guest Star.

Tommy Fitzgerald, Louisville Courier-Journal: "General MacArthur has been mentioned as possible successor to Judge Landis as czar of baseball, but the job would have to wait for him. Right now he's pretty busy making free agents of the Filipinos."

The Age of Sports.

W. C. (Pop) Anderson, Utah State's 35-year-old guard who is the oldest active gridder in the Rockies, explains that he took up football "because I wanted to see if I could take it."....If he takes it another year or so, he may find sonny on the same team. He's father of two children, one 14.... Clara Saj, 15-year-old outfielder on an Amsterdam, N.Y., girls softball team, made 29 hits in 31 times at bat last season for a .935 average ....Les Patrick, age almost 63, still drills occasionally with his teen-age hockey Rangers and can bust up most of their attacks single-handed....Coach Rube McCray of William and Mary claims the youngest one-two combination at centre this season. First stringer Tommy Thompson of Woodbridge, N.Y., is 17 years and 10 months and his sub, George Davis of Hopewell, Va., won't be 17 until late in December.

IDEA NOW MORE FEASIBLE

Hamilton, Nov. 9 —(CP)— J. L. After a couple of warm up jabs Louis knocked out Denson in the second round. Louis was given permission by the army to stage exhibition bouts during his furlough.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 9 —(CP)— Around this time of the year there is always plenty of talk about changes in the football rules, should the United States type of game be adopted or not, will the East and West ever get together and co-ordinate their regulations, and so on. This year is no exception, with the sport pages filled with speculation.

That Canadian-American angle especially has been debated with the usual vigor and free expression, with the sides fairly evenly matched, we might say from observation. We don't like to throw cold water on things, but it seems doubtful if the American game ever will be adopted holus-bolus, since Canadian football has many angles that are popular with the home fans, who wouldn't want to see any radical changes. However, a gradual merging and adaptation of some rules taken from south of the border would pass almost unnoticed. It's been done in the past, with benefit to all concerned.

Elimination of the East-West differences is an equally tough nut to crack, with both sides holding their ground firmly. But there are signs some compromise might be reached before many years, with the high school players the most likely source of amicable relations.

Short, One Player.

When Marino Pieretti was picked up by Washington Senators from Portland of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, at the waiver price of $7,500, the Portland bigwigs are unduly sad. They finally broke down and admitted that Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics had offered $20,000 for the classy pitcher, but then found out he was only five feet seven inches tall. "Three inches too short," wired Connie in cryptic fashion, and withdrew his offer. . . . Mourned business manager Bill Keeper: "St. Louis Browns buy Pete Gray, and he is only shy one arm!"

Disillusioned.

George Schilling, presiding steward and racing secretary with the Prairie Thoroughbred Breeders and Racing Association during the summer, tells how he once located what he thought was a real, soft-hearted owner. This character came up to Schilling at Caliente, Mexico, where the Judge is racing director and presiding steward and asked to withdraw a claim he had made. He said he had found out the horse's owner was a real nice chappie and he didn't want to take a horse away from so fine a man. When the horse, scrawny and almost lame animal, paraded to the post, the Judge decided his soft-hearted customer hadn't looked at the animal until after he put in the claim.

HERSHEY BEARS PROVIDE UPSET, DEFEAT HORNETS

11-0 Win Puts Bears at Top of Eastern Division of the League

By The Canadian Press

Hershey Bears provided the first major upset of the young American Hockey League season last night when they set back the high-flying Pittsburgh Hornets 11-0. Victory for the Bears on home ice broke a deadlock on top of the Eastern Division of the league and set Hershey into first place. Pittsburgh's position at the head of the Western Division was not affected.

Gordy Pettinger led the scoring spree with four goals to his credit while Hec Pozzo notched three. Patterson added two and Bill Gooden and Frank Bennett scored one goal each.

Cleveland Barons handed the St. Louis Flyers on their home ice last night their third consecutive defeat 5-4 in a game postponed from Tuesday on account of the United States elections.

George Blake, rookie left winger of the Flyers, personally accounted for three of the Flyers' four goals, one on the first major penalty shot of the season in the A. H. L.

The Gasparini-Burlington combination was instrumental in scoring two of the Barons' goals.

HONOR BOER LEADER

Pretoria —(CP)— The Transvaal provincial council has decided unanimously to request the government to proclaim October 10 as a public holiday in the Union and to name it "Kruger Day."

BOBBY THORPE GOES TO DETROIT

Toronto, Nov. 9 —(CP)— Bobby Thorpe, star hockey and lacrosse player of Brampton, Ont., has been discharged from the Canadian Army and his services acquired by Manager Jack Adams of the Detroit Red Wings Club of the National Hockey League, it was learned here last night.

He expects to be sent to Quebec Aces last year's Allan Cup champions.

Thorpe was taken on by St. Catharines Athletics to help them win the Canadian Lacrosse championship from New Westminster Salmon-Bellies last month.

It was expected he would play with St. Catharines Senior Saints in this winter's Senior O. H. A., but instead accepted the offer from the Detroit Club manager.

British M.P.'s Position Even More Difficult

Ottawa, Nov. 9 — (CP)—Canadian Members of Parliament, who did their share of grousing about their financial condition at the last Commons session, Wednesday were inclined to agree the British M. P.'s position is even more difficult.

Capt. Cecil Poole, British Labor member for Litchfield, said in the British House yesterday that the M.P.'s job was the "most seated of all," and it was impossible for a member to live on £600 sterling — ($2,640) a year without being on the borderline of poverty.

Several Canadian members, who receive the annual indemnity of $4,000, said during the session that it cost them money to be Members of Parliament, after they paid income tax and their expenses when in Ottawa for more than six months each year.

At the conclusion of the last session of Parliament Prime Minister Mackenzie King said he would favor action at the next Parliament to make the members' indemnity tax-free.

CUBS BOLSTERED BEHIND PLATE FOR NEXT SEASON

Livingston Will be Discharged From Army and Ready to Play Ball

Chicago, Nov. 9 — (AP) — Catcher Thompson (Mickey) Livingston, who came to Chicago Cubs late in 1943 and pushed Clyde McCullough out of his regular job but was in military service last season, says he'll be back in 1945 to take over as the club's No. 1 receiver.

Jim Gallagher, Cubs' general manager, said Livingston, in a letter from Newberry, S.C., advised him he had received a medical discharge from the army and was all set for the 1945 baseball season.

Gallagher, who in his search for catching talent since Mickey's entrance into the army late in 1943, was elated over the news and was confident his return would bolster the club's most glaring weakness and greatly enhance its pennant chances. The Cubs finished fourth in 1944.

The unexpected return of the 30-year-old catcher, who came to the Cubs from the Philadelphia Phillies in a trade for pitcher Bill Lee in 1943, increases the Cubs' backstops to five. The plethora of receivers is an indication of the Cubs' frantic efforts to find a capable man for the post.

Livingston, who rates high as a big league backstop and who also has played with Brooklyn and Washington, hit .261 in 36 games with the Cubs in 1943 and .241 in 84 contests as a Philly.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

The Quebec Senior Hockey League, although in doubtful standing with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, is away to a flying box-office start and fans are predicting a banner season.

The circuit's difficulties with the C. A. H. A. stemmed from its inclusion of Hull Volants to join Ottawa Commandos, Montreal Royals and the Allan Cup Champion Quebec Aces. Ottawa district officials claimed both Volants and Commandos should play in their own district instead of a Q. A. H. A. League.

The C. A. H. A. backed the Ottawa demand, but the Q. S. H. L. decided to play regardless. The C. A. H. A. has made no comment since the league defiance but presumably the Q. S. H. L. is an outlaw circuit at the moment. Its status is expected to be righted by playoff time.

A British paratrooper, Sgt. Gwyn Williams, who took part in the Arnhem battle will meet Ronnie James, British Lightweight Boxing Champion, in London Nov. 27. Williams, only 22 years old, has won 63 of 65 fights, taking return decisions from the two men who defeated him. Since his return from Arnhem he has fought once, gaining a quick victory. James will appear in the ring for the first time since he won the title.

Appointment of Dave (Sweeney) Schriner of Toronto Maple Leafs as coach of the Toronto Marlboros team in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series was announced yesterday by Manager Harold Ballard. When Schriner is away from the city with the Leafs, Ballard will take over.

Joe Krol, star halfback with Hamilton Wildcats, 1943 Dominion Football champions, was stricken with an attack of influenza late yesterday and rushed to a Hamilton hospital. Officials said it was doubtful if he would participate in the first game of the home-and-home points-to-count series against Toronto Balmy Beach for the Ontario Rugby Football Union championship here Saturday.

Smiths Falls Collegiate seniors captured the Lanark County Interscholastic Football title yesterday on the home field by defeating Perth Collegiate 23-5.

Threats of a bottleneck in two major sports — basketball and wrestling — are developing in Montreal. Referees of both games are asking more money for their services. The Montreal Wrestling Commission is arranging a meeting between referees and promoters to settle the dispute, while a deadlock seems to have been reached in the case of the cage officials. Members of the Quebec Board of approved basketball referees have asked the Montreal Basketball League for an increase in fees from $2.50 to $3.50 a game for senior referees, but league officials claim present small attendances won't permit the raise.

Ted Atkinson of Toronto, leading jockey of the season, rode five winners at Belmont Park in New York yesterday to bring his victories for the season to 256. Bobby Permane, also riding at Belmont, is second with 217.

A new schedule will have to be drawn up for the recently-formed Inter Provincial Hockey League, it was decided at a Montreal League meeting last night. The 72-game schedule of the four-team league will be revised, it was said, to reduce travelling expenses. The new schedule will provide for teams playing both Saturday night and Sunday afternoon in the same town.

RANGERS TO USE A NEW LINE AGAINST LEAFS

Watson Will Centre the Line With Goldup and Atanas

By The Canadian Press

Toronto Maple Leafs have a chance tonight to move further into the lead in the National Hockey League when they clash with the tailend New York Rangers at Madison Square Gardens. In the only other league game since last Sunday, Chicago Black Hawks play Canadiens at Montreal.

Leafs will be gunning for their fifth successive win without a defeat, while Canadiens, in second place two points behind Toronto, will attempt to stop Paul Thompson's hard-driving Hawks, who currently share fourth spot with Boston Bruins.

Rangers will pit a new line against Leafs in an effort to come through with a victory. So far the Broadway Blueshirts have lost their first three games. Phil Watson, who played last year with Canadiens on loan from Rangers, will perform tonight at centre ice between Hank Goldup, former Leaf left winger, and Walter Atanas, rookie from Hamilton, Ont.

Watson joined the Rangers' camp last week-end and worked out with the club at the Brooklyn ice palace Tuesday and yesterday. Goldup has been acting as extra defenceman and utility forward since the start of the 1944-45 season.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Good Reasons

The visiting minister, after a very cold drive, arrived a few minutes before Evensong at an out-of-the-way church to find a steaming-hot whisky toddy thoughtfully left for him in the vestry. Without touching it, however, he proceeded to robe himself, and called for the verger.

"My friend," he said, beaming at his would-be benefactor, "I appreciate your kindness and thoughtfulness in providing for me a hot drink that would appear to be a—er—a stimulant. But I must gratefully decline for three reasons. In the first place I am a life-long teetotaller; secondly I am making temperance the subject of my sermon this evening and, thirdly, I've had one already."

Attention, City Fathers.

Br'r Fred Craig recently penned a sport paragraph that applies in Belleville perhaps even more so than in his native Peterborough. Maybe our city fathers don't get around to the sport pages, but regardless the situation whereby teen aged lads can learn to play hockey in Belleville is nothing short of deplorable. Something should be done about it. And not in a similar manner as other years, we refer to the erection of outdoor hockey cushions midway through the winter. The time is in early December.

At any rate here's how Scribe Craig describes the Lift Locky City situation, which is identical to that of ours. Fred says- "The suggestion has been made, and this column endorses it without the last hestitation, that the city's parks board should be asked to set aside one of the free open air rinks during the coming winter to be used exclusively as a hockey cushion, thus paving the way for the organization of a city juvenile league. Unless such a loop is formed this winter there will be no opportunity for the city's youth to play organized hockey. There will be a school league that will take care of the kids up to 14 or 15 years of age but beyond that there is nothing in sight for the older boys. And there should be. While this city is waiting for the erection of the Memorial Health Centre arena we should be doing the spadework to ensure a supply of young hockey players to be available when modern facilities for hockey have been provided. We cannot afford to wait until then to begin the development of hockey talent and it is certain that players will not be forthcoming for some time after the arena is operating unless something is done now to take care of available material."

Could Hit, Too.

During his active baseball playing career Billy Southworth, now manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, roamed the outfield for 22 seasons, starting with Portsmouth in the old Ohio State League in 1912 and winding up with the Asheville Piedmont League club in 1935.

Over this stretch, he played ten complete seasons in the National League. His over-all batting average for his National League service was .301.

From 1918 to 1927, inclusive, Southworth participated in 1,112 National League games, rapping out 1,251 hits to finish one point over the coveted .300 mark. In his final full year as a player with the Cardinals in the Senior major, his season's average was .301, too.

Possibility 1st Canadian Corps May Leave Italy

London, Nov. 9 (CP Cable)—The possibility that the 1st Canadian Corps in Italy may be brought back to fight as part of the 1st Canadian Army in Holland was reported in a dispatch from Toronto published by the Daily Telegraph.

The Telegraph's correspondent said the resignation of Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, Chief of Staff at Canadian military headquarters in London, is regarded as "more than a possibility."

(The dispatch was published some hours prior to an Ottawa announcement that Gen. Stuart had gone on leave pending retirement.)

The dispatch added this resignation "is described as the first step in reorganization of the Canadian army by which it is expected Gen. McNaughton, (newly-appointed Defence Minister at Ottawa) will seek to reunite the Canadian forces in Italy with those in Holland, assuming that Gen. Eisenhower and Field Marshal Montgomery will approve such a plan."

The resignation of Maj.-Gen. P. J. Montague, General Officer in charge of Administration at C.M.H.Q., as well as of Gen. Stuart, is expected, said the Telegraph, one of three London morning papers to publish half-column reports from Canadian correspondents about the current controversy. (The subsequent Ottawa announcement said Gen. Montague would continue to hold his present post.)

LESSON NO. 527

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Deliver me from Jumping Jives. That guy sure makes me sore. He raises all my major bids when I start out with four. The time will come, I vow, by heaven, when I will raise his bid of seven.

Standard requirements for an opening of four in a major suit are eight tricks and a long suit. However, some players use it for sacrifice purposes with seven or maybe six tricks.

Consequently, an opening four-bidder may have anything from six to eight tricks. More than likely, he will have less than eight. At any rate, partner of the four bidder must so assume.

That bid is already a game. The trump suit is already stated. So, partner has no excuse for distributing that bid unless he hopes to reach a slam. And such a partner would be an optimist.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening of four hearts and you have a good responding hand. What would you like to bid? If so, what would you expect to accomplish by it?

Would you like to raise to five hearts? What good would that do you? Already at a game, five hearts pays no better bonus. You are merely making it a tougher contract unnecessarily.

Would you like to try for a slam? With what? Partner has no more than eight tricks, possibly seven, maybe only six. Even if you have three aces, you are still shy of slam needs.

Thus, you can understand the rule for responses to an opening of four in a major. It is: Pass, unless you see a slam. Even three aces in the responding hand are not enough for a slam.

Admire this hand:

♥A 6 4 2
♦A Q 4
♣A 8 7 5

Suppose your partner opens with four spades. What would you do? Pass. Oh, yes. I see your three aces and a queen. They look good. But in answer to a four bid, think nothing of it.

Little Benny's Note Book

This is Nora's day off on account of Thursday, and this morning at breakfat I said to pop, G, pop, this is your lucky day.

You may be right, I distinctly remember getting out of bed on the right foot this morning, pop said, and I said, Then that proves it, because ma promised you she'd make you a lemmon merrang pie the next time she does the cooking, and today is it.

Lemmon merrang being pop's favorite kind of pie, and accidently mine too, and pop said, By gollies that's so. I hope for sentimental reasons your mother didn't forget, he said.

If it's really for sentimental reasons you have no cause for alarm because I remembered perfectly, ma said. But I hope it's not for a more earthly reason, because you know very well you cant bring your waistline back to normal by eating pies, she said, and pop said, You're quite right my dear, I'd better take the will for the deed, so thanks for the will.

Me thinking Heck, and I said, Aw G, pop, why dont you take the pie instead? I mean you dont actually have to eat it, and you might enjoy yourself just looking at it, you like it so much, I said, and pop said, Now that's very thoughtful of you, Benny, and I really believe it would be good for my will power to look a lemmon pie in the merrang and say, Keep thee outside of me, Satan.

Now William there's nothing more weakening to the will power than deliberate temtation, ma said, and pop said, Quite true, but on the other hand there's nothing more baffling to temtation than inflexible will power, and if I'm going to lick my waistline I'd better give my will power all the practice I can.

Well, dont blame me if your marvellous will power collapses like a drowning straw, ma said.

The result being pop ate 2 slices and didn't blame anybody.

GYPSY BLOOD

By MARGARET NORRIS

CHAPTER FOUR.

Anna leaned against one of the pillars and tried to collect her thoughts. The underground station was ghostly dim. There was not a soul in sight except the man at the ticket window, who looked cross and half asleep. She was sure he would not help her out. He would turn her over to the police.

A wave of dark desolation swept over her; she longed to cast herself on the grim stone floor and sob out all her troubles. But what would that avail? The milk was spilled. No use to cry. Hands plunged in empty pockets, head high to conceal her fears, Anna walked slowly out of the subway station into the unfriendly night.

New York, it is said, settles down to sleep at half past two in the morning, and wakens again at 25 minutes to three. What Anna saw seemed to confirm this. Certainly the city had not yet gone to bed, although never before in her life had she been abroad at such a late hour. The streets were still lighted bright as day and there was as much clanging noise and activity as when, some three or four hours earlier, like Alice down the rabbit hole, she had scurried into the subway, there to fall asleep and be robbed!

The withering heat had broken; a diminutive breeze had sprung up like the breath of the gods blown mercifully on a world grown penitent by long hours of torture. Its coolness was ambrosia to Anna; she drank it in thirstily and walked forward swiftly as though to get more, unconscious of her direction. All of a sudden she found herself in a little park marked off by a railing, littered with iron benches and carpeted with grass.

There was not enough grass about to pasture one little donkey for one day, and it was parched, brownish grass in need of rain—but it was the first grass Anna had stepped on since she set sail for America. She was seized with an overwhelming desire to walk barefoot in it, as at home, so she sat down on a bench and was untying her shoes when she heard someone speaking to her.

"Did you was from the old country?" said the voice.

Anna nodded without looking. "Oh, did you? How long you been over here?"

Anna did not answer, tugging feverishly at her shoes.

"Any money?" the voice continued. Still no answer.

"Hungry?"

Anna nodded in spite of herself. The question brought a terrible reminder of the void under her overalls; she had not eaten since morning but had had no time to think of it. She stole a look at her companion who had reminded her so painfully of her predicament.

He was an oldish man, dirty and unkempt with a face so wreathed in whiskers that the only feature visible was his nose, red and bulbous like a piece of liver, stuck indiscriminately between the eyes. Yesterday he would have terrified her but now she utterly ignored him, so much had happened since then.

"Me hungry too", he continued. "I thought mabbe you got a dime, you buy us both a bowl of borsht. I know the place it's got". He moved a little closer to her, Anna slid gingerly away.

"You like borsht?"

The thought was tantalizing. Anna tried to thrust it aside but it had been hours since she had eaten and when would she eat again? In the enormity of her desire for food Anna forgot her immediate blessings—that the air was cool, that the grass was soft, that she had a bench to sit on. Hunger makes a fool of us all. This time it was the very last straw that over-toppled Anna's heavy load. Self pity descended upon her. She hurled herself full length on the grass and sobbed as though her heart would break.

Anna lay prone on the ground and howled without effort at self-control, tearing up the grass with her hands, pounding it with her feet. Her little bare feet beat rat-tat-too—grief, self pity, despair in lively staccato measure, each beat more vigorous than the last. She did not weep like a civilised girl; she howled like a primitive creature that finds relief from harrowed spirit in the violence of action.

Her ill kempt companion of the iron bench rose cumbrously from his seat and creaked over to peer down at her.

"What's de matter, kid? What's de matter?"

The man prodded the girl gently with his toe, but Anna only wailed the louder, so he tip-toed off in bewilderment—helping himself on the way to the shabby little shoes she had discarded.

"Dese vimmen! dese vimmen!" he muttered, examining the shoes as he went. They might sell for a dime—a fair evening's work. Every loss is somebody's gain. Clutching them, he disappeared into the night, a smile of satisfaction breaking through the whiskered tangle of his face.

Others gathered curiously about Anna. Ragged men, the back-wash of the city, settled for a night in the park, came forward in gaping amazement at what had disturbed their midnight rest. Respectable passersby, attracted by her cries, fearful of foul play, came forward to investigate.

But Anna wailed on, oblivious to them all. She was aware of the crowd but not of it. Life had moved too swiftly and roughly for her to follow—or even care where it led. Face buried in her arms she lay there, sobbing as though her heart would break.

A vast, perspiring policeman poked his burly way through the crowd.

"Stand back!" he shouted in official voice.

From the depths of her abjection Anna recognized the authority of his tones. At last he had come, the policeman, the monster whom she had feared. But now he was here—it was funny—suddenly she didn't care. Better the policeman to "run her in" (whatever that might mean) than more days and nights like this one, penniless, hungry alone.

Hands very powerful, picked her up and stood her on her feet.

"What's wrong, kid? Somebody hurt you? Come along with me." The policeman led Anna through the curious, staring crowd to another corner of the little park. "What's the jig? Tell me your story."

He was not unkind but Anna's tongue stuck to the roof of her mouth.

"Go on!" said the the policeman. "What was ye bawlin' for?"

"I—I—I lost my money and I'm hungry."

The big man's mouth fell wide open like a trap. "If it ain't a gurl! A purty gurl at that! An' here I thought ye was a boy! Is it father's pants that ye're wearin'?"

Anna nodded shamefacedly. "Is that against the law in New York?"

"Well, it ain't as ye might say 'done' here —not in the best sassiety. An' why are ye wearing' em, I asks?"

Again Anna was inarticulate. "Go on!" said the officer. "Shoot! What's the game? It's the truth I want".

"Well I—I—But if I tell you the truth what will you do with me? Will you run me in?"

In the pitiless glare of the arc light the policeman studied his trembling young charge. Runaways seldom tell the truth. It is a failing of their tribe. And the big policeman knew runaways — the habits and customs of the species. In Anna he recognized one of them and he looked at her carefully—at the sturdy young girl whose splendid build the uncouth clothes did not conceal; at the yellow hair cropped close like a boy's; the cheeks stained with dust and tears; the little nose with its upward tilt, still saucy in spite of the weeping. Even a policeman is human.

"Tell me, kid", he said, "why ye're here—in a public park after midnight, howlin' like a soul that's damned, flat on yer face with the crowd packed round, dressed in yer father's clothes? Tell me the truth and ye needn't be feared".

"I've been robbed and I'm lost and hungry. I hate New York and I want to go home".

"Sure, that's where I'm afther sendin' ye. Where is home, I asks?"

"Poland".

The officer whistled. "A long ride for tonight. Is yere Pa there, too?"

"Oh, please don't send me back to him!" Anna lifted her hands in supplication.

SUFFERED CONSTANTLY WITH SOUR, ACID, UPSET STOMACH

Even Lightest Foods Gave Him Trouble with Indigestion, Gas Pains, Bilious Attacks and Headaches. Tells of Splendid Relief by Taking Syntona.

MR. GEORGE ADAMSON

"Nobody but myself knows how much trouble I have had with stomach distress and indigestion during the past few years," says Mr. George Adamson, Mount Elgin, Ontario.

"It got so bad that even the lightest foods upset my stomach and brought on belching up of hot, sour liquids. Gas attacks followed every meal, often lasting for hours. I'd get bilious spells which would be followed by a splitting headache. I didn't care whether I ate or not. I was not sleeping at all well at night and was always taking some sort of laxative to keep my bowels moving.

"That is the condition I was in a few weeks ago before I began taking Syntona. I got some of this medicine because so many people were recommending it and it wasn't long before I could tell it was helping my digestion. The gas, sourness and acid risings grew less and less as I continued taking it. Now I can enjoy my meals again without any distress afterward. It got my bowels moving smoothly and regularly for the first time in years. I haven't had any bilious attacks or headache since. I am sleeping so much better at night and get up in the morning feeling fully rested.

"I know there must be a lot of people who suffer as I did and I certainly recommend that they try Syntona."

Syntona is the ideal system tonic . . . especially good for anyone suffering as Mr. Adamson did and good, too, for anyone at this season of the year. It is made from the finest grade herbs and roots which aid in the elimination of excess acids and poison waste material and promote better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.
